MacCracken Awaits Trial Second Night In Hotel 'Cell'

Senate Fails to Agree on Procedure in Secret Session.

Attorney Contends Body Lacks Power

By Felix Bruner.

William P. MacCracken, jr., charged with contempt of the Senate in connection with the air mail investigation, was compelled again last night to undergo the hardship of sleeping in a hotel room, prisoner of the Senate sergeant at arms.

With doors locked and the huge crowd of spectators herded out of the galleries, the Senate spent three hours yesterday afternoon in executive session trying to decide what to do with MacCracken and three others charged with contempt. At 6 p. m. the Senate adjourned, with the understanding that it would constitute itself a jury again at 2 p. m. today and go on with the deliberations.

It is understood that the secret session heard Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, chairman of the air and ocean mail contract investigating committee, outline his case against the four defendants and argue, in spite of the contention of the defense, that the Senate has a right to punish a private citizen for contempt after the alleged act of contempt has been concluded.

Decision Expected Tonight.

While other Senators talked, it was indicated at the close of the session that there was no "pronounced" opposition to this view. However, it is understood that most of the session was taken up with the case of the prosecution and that any Senators who may wish to come to the defense of the four air-mail men will have an opportunity to do so today. Senator Black said he expected a decision to be reached by tonight.

Three courses are open to the Senate — finding the defendants guilty and sentencing them, or turning them over to the District Supreme Court, or outright acquittal. The defense contends that the Senate has no constitutional right to inflict punishment—that this is the exclusive power of the courts.

The only part of the proceedings open to the public yesterday was the statement for the defense, eloquently made by Frank J. Hogan, MacCracken's attorney.

At 2 p. m. the defendants and their lawyers filed into the well of the Senate. Besides MacCracken there were L. H. Brittin of Northwest Airways; Harris M. Henshue president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative of Western Air Express.

Huge Crowd on Hand.

The defendants and their counsel were seated at tables specially placed on the Democratic side of the chamber. Senator Black and members of the committee sat at similar tables on the Republican side.

The galleries were packed to

New U. S. Issue Sells Quickly

$800,000,000 Refinancing Bonds Oversubscribed in 24 Hours.

The $800,000,000 Treasury refinancing issues announced Monday have been oversubscribed and the books have been closed, the Treasury Department announced last night.

Subscription books for the two $400,000,000 offerings were closed at the close of business yesterday. The amount of oversubscription and the basis of allotment will be announced about Friday.

Treasury officials were cheered by the speed with which the market absorbed the second big issue under its program to raise $10,000,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year.

Cleveland, Broke, Faces Drastic Cut

Mayor Appeals to State for Bond Refunding.

Cleveland, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Nation's sixth city, hard put for money to keep governmental machinery going, today pinned its hope on the State Legislature for help.

Faced with a deficit of some $5,500,000 in operating revenue for 1934—to add to a deficit of $4,500,000 in 1933—Mayor Harry L. Davis again went before a committee of the State Senate to ask authority for refunding $10,500,000 in bond payments due this year.

If his city does not get relief through refunding, the mayor told the Senate taxation committee, "I will start within two weeks to cut all the city's services in half."

August Busch, Sr., Ill Beer 'Maker, Commits Suicide

St. Louis, Feb. 13 (AP).—August Anheuser Busch, sr., 68, head of the internationally known brewing family, shot and killed himself here today in his palatial home. He had suffered from a complication of diseases.

The son of a German immigrant, who started the Busch fortunes, picked up a revolver while a servant's back was turned and fired one shot into his abdomen.

He left an unsigned note which read:

"Good-by, precious mommie and adorable children."

Known affectionately as "Gussie" by members of the family, Busch spent years in preparing himself for the presidency of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., which post he filled after the death of his father, Adolphus Busch, in 1913.

Mr. Busch has suffered intense pain for six weeks from gout, heart disease and dropsy. Unable to obtain medical relief, he spent the past week in bed.

Saturday he expressed discouragement and members of the fam-

Must "Show Cause" for Abrogation; Army Seeks Veteran Pilots.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The wholesale cancellation of domestic air-mail contracts was challenged yesterday in the first of several prospective court actions, as the Postoffice Department sent to Capitol Hill a joint resolution to authorize short-term contracts with independent operators.

Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., whose technical adviser—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh—provoked a White House rebuke, in New York obtained an order from Federal Judge John C. Knox requiring Postmaster General James A. Farley to show cause Friday why he should not be restrained.

This threat to the Administration's abrogation of the contracts, on the grounds of fraud and collusion, brought from both Farley and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings expressions of confidence they will be able to show "plenty of cause" at the New York hearing.

Developments of Day.

As the Capital buzzed with comment on the White House's chilly reception of the Lindbergh protest, other air-mail developments were:

Announcement of a schedule of air-mail operations disclosing that Washington's service will be materially reduced when the Army Air Corps begins carrying the mail next Monday midnight.

A bid by the War Department for all available air-mail pilots, incorporated in a statement asserting the Air Corps is "perfectly capable" of flying the mail, but recognizes as "extremely desirable" the services of veteran mail pilots.

An acrid exchange in the House over printing Col. Lindbergh's telegram to President Roosevelt in the Congressional Record, which brought about an abrupt adjournment at 1:30 p. m.

A statement by Farley he is preparing "a full statement of the reasons why I ordered the domestic air-mail contracts annulled," which probably will be released today in the form of a letter to Senator Hugo L. Black, chairman of the Senate Air Mail Committee.

Alleging un-Constitutionality, the petition of Transcontinental and Western sets forth the cancellation "deprives the complainant of its property without due process of law, and without just compensation." The property approximates $5,000,000, the petition said, including $623,000 in airplanes.

The whole air-mail situation was canvassed at the White House in a meeting of the executive council, following which Farley told newsmen:

"We will take the necessary steps

"Ring" Steals 75% of Plane Cash, Charge

House Committee Orders Sensational Claims Be Probed.

A House sub-committee on military aviation today will open an inquiry into sensational charges made yesterday by Capt. James V. Martin, an aviation pioneer, that an "air trust, headed by Ohioans," controls Army and Navy airplane contracts, "stealing" 75 cents of every dollar expended for aircraft.

The charges were made before the House Military Affairs Committee, and included the assertion that every plane contract of the two services is let "secretly, collusively and in violation of the law," with the result that the United States is "ten years behind in its aviation development."

"Not a single man in the Army or Navy dares oppose the control exercised by this air trust," Martin, a New Yorker, who made the first bombers sold to the Government by contract, declared.

Brig. Gen. H. Conger Pratt, in charge of Wright Field, at Dayton, Ohio, a witness before the committee last week, who testified to favoring the awarding of contracts by a board rather than through open, advertised bids, was named by Martin as one of those "afraid."

"The Rest Is Stolen."

The Boeing, Curtiss-Wright, Pratt-Whitney, and General Aviation Corporations were named by the witness as members of the "trust" who, he alleged, "see that only 24 or 25 cents out of every dollar expended by the Government goes into an airplane."

"The rest is stolen," Martin declared calmly.

So unexpectedly-sensational were the New York airplane builder's charges that the subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, was designated to go into them. Much of the subcommittee's inquiry will be conducted in secret, but Rogers said last night he would strive to have as many as possible of the hearings public.

"Martin has made some mighty serious charges," Representative Rogers said. "If he can substantiate them, we want to know about it. His testimony will be followed up immediately."

The heads of the "air trust," which "controls aviation in the Government," were named by Martin yesterday as E. A. Deeds, Howard Coffin and others from Ohio. Deeds, he said, served as a colonel during the World War.

"Starting 17 years ago," the witness told the House committee, "they put their own men into key positions and gradually assumed control of airplane contracts for the Army and Navy.

"Today, departments are honeycombed with the agents and employes of this trust."

Martin mentioned the name of William P. MacCracken, jr., former Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aeronautics, now in trouble with the Senate, as associated with the "trust," and that of Edward P. Warner, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who, the witness said, "perjured himself" in a previous investigation.

Charges Army, Navy "Afraid."

Reiterating that none in the Army or Navy dared oppose the "trust," Martin explained, in answer to a question put by Representative Fitzgerald (Democrat), New York, that this was because every officer "feared the loss of

The New Dealers

Richberg Turns Conservative

By the Unofficial Observer.

Richberg has a distinct literary bent, having written a couple of novels and a play: "The Shadow of Men," "A Man of Purpose," "Tents of the Mighty." His speeches betray this characteristic, although they are less literary than the speeches of that other Chicago liberal lawyer, Jerome Frank, of the AAA. Large of build, a fluent and direct talker, Richberg gives the impression of great physical strength and endurance. He has plenty of both but nothing to compare with Hugh Johnson. The terrific grind under the NRA broke his health, and for weeks he had to limp along on part time.

His health was not the only thing which weakened. After nine months of the NRA his militant liberalism also began to wobble. Suave industrialists began to tell him that he was really not such a dangerous radical as they had been led to believe, why! he was really a scholar and a gentleman and not an uncouth, hairy agitator.

Richberg repeated these remarks to his colleagues and laughed in his peculiar falsetto, but eventually they began to have their effect. He astounded the liberals by issuing a sharp rebuke to Henry Hunt, an

5,000 in District Are Included; Others to Go Later.

The Federal CWA has issued informal instructions to supervisors on all its projects to plan for the immediate lay-off of 210,000 employes throughout the country, including 5,000 employed in the District of Columbia, it was learned last night.

The order which the Federal headquarters has prepared, it is understood, calls for the immediate lay-off of 50 per cent of the men engaged in Federal works on February 15, and the gradual elimination of other employes. No new Federal projects are to be started.

In the District of Columbia, the order will affect approximately 5,000 workers, who are engaged in Federal work. It was said in reliable quarters last night that 2,500 employes on these works will be dismissed tomorrow. This includes approximately 700 of the 1,400 workmen for the Civil Works projects under the jurisdiction of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Warning in House.

Disclosure of the pending order came as the House received warning that 4,000,000 Civil Work employes will be out of work Saturday unless the bill to appropriate $950,000,000 is passed promptly.

There is a prospect of salvation for the jobs of many workers who are working on projects in the District. The order, it is understood, authorizes State and local CWA administrators to adopt any Federal

It was the telegram that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh sent President Roosevelt protesting cancellation of airmail contracts.

Harvard's one-time all-America football player, Hamilton Fish, wanted to put it into the Congressional Record. Quite a few Democrats didn't want it there. They objected when Fish asked for unanimous consent.

Cold Returns; One More Dead

12 Above Zero Forecast; Girl Hit by Skidding Automobile Dies.

With the Weather Bureau reporting a new storm raging along the nearby seaboard, frigid weather was forecast to continue its hold on Washington today and tonight, and one more death was added to the list of slippery-street accidents.

A low of 12 above zero was predicted for early today, with a negligible rise in temperature through the day. Yesterday's maxmum was 38 at 4 o'clock in the morning, dropping to 22 early last night.

Carol Jane Gochenour, 16, of 4305 Wisconsn avenue northwest, died at Georgetown Hospital early yesterday. A coroner's jury later found that the car of Miss Nettie Howard, 21, of Rockville, Md., unavoidably skidded and struck the Gouchenour girl after she had alighted from a street car at Wisconsin avenue and Davenport street northwest.

Skating and coasting continued through the District and environs. The Potomac was ice-locked. The Lincoln Memorial reflecting pool was frozen solid, with skaters using it throughout the day.

Bill to Bolster Income Taxes Goes to House

Gag Escorts Measure, but Fight Against Adoption Is Planned Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Striving to reduce deficits for 1934 and 1935 "as much as possible, and to attain the goal of a balanced budget in 1936," the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday laid before the House its far-flung plan for saving $258,000,000 annually from income tax leaks.

At the same time, the House Rules Committee voted 7 to 3 for a rigid rule, prohibiting any but committee amendments, and placing a 16-hour "gag" on debate when the revenue measure is called up in the House today.

A sharp fight on adoption of the "gag" will be waged this afternoon, with recalcitrant "young Democrats" joining many of the Republican minority in attempting to open tax provisions of the bill to general amendment.

Meanwhile the committee's 42-page report, providing sweeping income tax revision, bolstering surtax rates in the higher brackets, and scaling down payments on earned income, was presented to members.

A 17-page dissenting opinion was published by Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, urging higher income and inheritance levies. Representatives Frank Crowther, of New York, and James A. Frear, of Wisconsin (Republicans), filed "additional views" voicing Crowther's espousal of a sales tax and Frear's support of tax publicity and taxation of Government securities.

Viewing estimated deficits of $7,309,065,211 in 1934 and $1,986,133,221 in 1935, the committee's report attributed the magnitude of these "to the emergency expenditures of the Government for projects designed to bring about the early return of Nation-wide prosperity."

For an "encouraging" note, it went to estimates of a 57 per cent

Curiosity Digs at Policeman, He Digs Bag With $11,000 Loot

Because Montgomery County Policeman Paul Watkins was curious, former State Senator David Baile, of Westminster, Md., yesterday recovered $11,000 in stock certificates and notes.

And because stock certificates are nothing in the life of Herbert Miles, an employe of the State Highway Department, former Senator Baile's $11,000 lay buried for two weeks beneath a pile of dirt in a roadway ditch near Damascus.

Miles, who lives near Damascus, found a small canvas bag full of "papers" while cleaning out the ditch.

As Miles related the incident Monday night, he examined the contents of the bag, thought the papers were "pretty" tossed them aside and covered them with dirt as he continued digging. The story got around to Watkins, whose home is in Damascus. Watkins decided he would see the "pretty papers."

Early yesterday he had Miles lead him to the pile of dirt. Miles and Watkins dug. Shortly they retrieved the bag. It was frozen. They placed it in the Rockville Police Station until it thawed.

One of the papers bore the name of Senator Baile as administrator of the estate of David Engler, jr., of Medford. Baile told Watkins the bag had been stolen about a month ago.

Powers Fear Conflict Will Embroil Europe

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, Feb. 13.—Government guns battered workers' sections tonight, as unofficial estimates put the number of killed in two days of civil war at 500 to 2,000.

A steady bombardment of the huge Karl Mark apartment building wrecked that Socialist stronghold, and government troops started other relentless offensives to crush the rebellion.

Loyal artillerymen rained lead upon the enemy camps while troops crossed the Danube in the heart of Vienna under the protection of the barrage into the war zones.

No one could estimate the exact number of dead in the hours of vicious street fighting and bombardments, but police disclosed that 123 civilians were brought, dead, to the Vienna General Hospital alone.

Among the victims in that institution were a 5-year-old girl and a 14-year-old boy, who were killed in the bombardment of the Karl Marx apartment.

An unverified report said few women and children were in the Karl Marx when it was shelled, the defenders having sent them to friends and relatives outside before the savage fighting started.

In a dozen other countries, the Socialists' struggle for "a chance to live" and against "a Fascist government threat" waged furiously.

Socialists entrenched themselves in machine gun nests; they put up an unrelenting battle unto death; all available troops were rushed to the zones of greatest fighting.

5,000 in Building Capitulate.

Five thousand occupants of the Karl Marx Building were said to have capitulated this evening.

One report said women and children tenants had been, for the most part moved to sections of the apartment not in greatest danger while husbands and fathers answered the troopers' fire with rifle, pistol and machine gun bullets.

Police admitted they lost 11 dead and 38 seriously wounded in the day-long bombardment.

Soldiers ringed the Sandleiten Hof, another Socialist apartment, awaiting surrender of the occupants. In the populous Floridsdorf area, Socialists were forced to retreat from their positions, fighting tenaciously, to nearby Stadlau annd Jedlisse.

While the government guns boomed tonight, the insurgents were said to be holding the Ottakring, Simmering, Favoriten and Hernals sections.

Prince Leads Home Guard.

Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, leader of the Fascist Heimwehr, or home guard, marched with detachments as far as Linz, where Socialists were reported ousted after long and fierce fighting, in

League Fears European War If Nazis Win

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Geneva, Feb. 13.—Ultimate Nazi victory in the Socialist-Facist warfare in Austria was feared in international circles tonight.

The Nazis in Austria and Germany have remained aloof during the rebellion, permitting the Socialists to bear the brunt of the violent attacks against the Fascist-inclined regime of Chancellor Dollfuss.

Observers here and in other capitals of Europe, dispatches indicate, fear that Dollfuss may be crushed between these forces—leaving the ultimate spoils to the Nazis.

Two Probabilities Seen.

Rise of a Nazi state in Austria might be expected to result in one of two things, observers commented:

1. Recognition of the Nazi-desired "Anschluss," or combine, between Germany and Austria.

2. War in Europe.

It was recalled that members of the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechoslavakia and Jugoslavia—recently publicly announced: "Anschluss means war."

Statesmen in Geneva indicated erious complications can be avoided only so long as Dollfuss remains in power.

But many feel that once Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, head of the powerful Fascist-inclined Heimwehr, crushes the Socialists for the Little Chancellor, Dollfuss either will be sacrificed, or remain virtually a prisoner of the Heimwehr.

Might Quit League.

The recent promise of Von Starhemberg to join Chancellor Hitler of Germany in a united Austro-German foreign policy was full of disagreeable implications for the League of Nations. Members foresee this might mean that Austria, under Berlin's thumb, also would quit the league, as Germany has done.

However, Austria still is bound by minority treaties and financial accords which permit the league to intervene, if it is felt that Austria's sovereignty has passed to Berlin.

The opinion prevailed, nevertheless, that an international crisis was inevitable if and when the Nazis assume power in Vienna. Many in Vienna feel that Premier Mussolini of Italy must now decide whether to support or oppose his new Fascist neighbor.

Ickes Seeks Rest; Trip Due Today

Secretary Ickes, hard-driving administrator of the public works program, who refused to let broken ribs interfere with his work shortly before Christmas, is due for his first vacation, he admitted yesterday.

The vacation, subject to "if, when and as" his desk is cleared of immediate concerns, was scheduled to start today. The Interior Secretary said he hoped to get matters adjusted so he could leave for a short time.

Where and how Mr. Ickes will spend his vacation he would not reveal. "I'm going to take a rest," was the only comment he made.

Family of Four In Suicide Pact

Follows Death of Child From Fever; Girl May Recover.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 13 (AP).—The bodies of Kenneth Larwill, his wife and two daughters were found in their home here today with a note indicating that the family had entered a suicide pact after the youngest daughter had died of scarlet fever early this morning.

Police who broke into the house at the request of relatives found the note which read: "There's nothing to live for; we have agreed to die together."

Dr. Wesley Warren told officers that he was at the home at 3 a. m. when the youngest daughter, Florence, 9, died of scarlet fever.

Police found the house filled with gas escaping from jets on a cook stove.

The victims in addition to Larwill were his wife, Mary, and a daughter, also named Mary. A third daughter, Louise, was found still breathing. She was taken to a hospital where it was said she might recover.

Politics Truce Lifting Paris Out of Chaos

Riots and Strike Ends; "Iron Fist" Thrust to Hitler, London.

Paris, Feb. 13 (AP).—Adopting a policy of "silent work," the political truce cabinet of Premier Gaston Doumergue tonight devoted itself to the principal aim of restoring public confidence.

Police were withdrawn from public gathering places, following suppression of riots early today in several provincial cities. Quiet apparently was restored following the end of yesterday's general strike.

Officers were ordered not to open fire unless fired upon.

Ready for Outbreaks.

Expressing belief disorders had finished, but remaining in readiness for outbreaks, the government turned to its program of balancing the budget and showing a strong fist in foreign problems.

A note was sent Great Britain refusing to back down in the trade war between the two countries.

A solid stand against Chancellor Hitler's arms demands was contained in a note sent to Berlin.

Prosecution of several financial scandals are under way. Three arrests were made, two in the Stavisky case. Deputy Gaston Bounnaure, an attorney of the late Serge Stavisky, who allegedly caused collapse of the Bayonne pawnshop, was arrested.

Premier "Papa Doumergue" silenced all his ministers, while he tried to smooth out differences behind cabinet walls.

Government spokesmen said the political truce was working its desired effects, pointing to the rise in value of all treasury bonds. The 4½ per cent 1932 conversion issue climbed from 79.60 to 83.90 francs and increased activity in the stock market.

Provinces Belligerent.

The provinces, however, deputies said, are not fully won over to the neutral government, with some suspicion existing that Parisians ousted the Leftist cabinet of Premier Edouard Daladier by "foul means."

Disorders were suppressed early this morning at Marseilles, Nantes, Toulon, Lille, Roubaix and Mulhouse. Some 40 were arrested at Marseilles, where police rode down rioters.

Approximately 150 were wounded in disorers growing from the strike, but only 1 death was reported.

fly said he appeared very nervous.

John Busch, of Washington, Mo., a cousin, spent last night in his bed chamber and said the brewery executive was "up and down all night."

After awakening today he instructed his cousin to "get some breakfast." John Busch and a maid departed with the entrance of Tony Feichtinger, chauffeur, who arrived in accordance with a daily custom.

Told to "Get Music."

Instructed to "get some music on the radio," Feichtinger was twisting the dial when he heard the revolver shot and turned to find his employer, half raised in bed, with hands extended and fingers twitching.

The county coroner found death was caused by the revolver wound. A formal inquest will be held tomorrow.

Busch was noticeably unlike his late father, who was bluff, frequently outspoken, and not shrinking from controversy.

The son cared little for travel or for the society of notables. His chief satisfaction lay in his business, his large farm, and his family.

Anticipating the return of beer, the St. Louis brewing plant recently was improved by the expenditure of $7,000,000.

Survivors include two sons, Adolphus Busch 3d, and August A. Busch, jr.; three daughters, Mrs. Louis A. Hager, Mrs. C. Drummond Jones, and Mrs. Percy Orthwein, and the widow.

Brilliant Pageant Marks Mardi Gras

New Orleans Joyous as Sun Breaks Through.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 12 (AP).—With the gay abandon of the pre-Volstead era, New Orleans today flung itself into the glad revel of the most brilliant Mardi Gras celebration since the World War.

Mardi Gras—literally, "fat Tuesday"—was all its name implied today as young and old, rich and poor, apparently seized the opportunity to show thanksgiving in merry-making for many things, a sun-drenched spinr day after days of chill rains, better business than has been the rule in recent years, the return of legalized liquor.

Motivated by the same impulse that makes people elsewhere fling ticker tape and torn-up telephone books at heroes, New Orleans donned a Pierrot costume and a pink-cheeked mask and danced in the streets all day.

There was a complete suspension of ordinary business and downtown streets were cleared of traffic and turned over to the dancing maskers.

"Dog Snatching' Latest Racket for Ransom

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—Dog snatchers, operating on the lines of kidnapers, are preying on pet owners in Chicago and its suburbs, the Chicago Humane Education Society warned today.

Stolen dogs are either held for "ransom" in the shape of rewards from their owners—"with no questions asked"—or disposed of at the unscrupulous and generally unlicensed pet shops, which resell them at bargain prices.

How Europe Views Conflict

(Associated Press.)

Reactions in European capitals to the Austrian crisis Tuesday included:

BERLIN—A foreign office spokesman said: "We are most anxious that peace shall prevail over there, but peace can not come so long as Chancellor Dollfuss and Vice Chancellor Fey base their regime on Austrian bayonets and foreign sympathies, not upon the will of the Austrian people." Germany is determined, he added, not to interfere.

PARIS—Henry Berenger, chairman of the Senate foreign affairs committee, unofficially proposed armed protection of Austria's independence by French, Italian and British troops. He predicted "the beginning of a war in Europe and the end of the League of Nations" if Chancellor Dollfuss loses control, unless "an international army is sent."

MOSCOW—Soviet Russia watched the Austrian situation closely and Pravda, Communist party organ, urged French and Austrian workers to form a "united front" against Fascists, and declared "the demonstrations and general strikes in France and Austria show the revolutionary forces against Fascism are rising and ripening."

LONDON—Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon told the House of Commons that the British government had no intention of interfering in the internal affairs of another country. In authoritative circles, it was said Britain believes firmly that Austria is entitled to an independent exstence without interference from another nation.

which heavy losses were incurred by both sides.

Richard Schmitz, newly installed federal commissioner in Vienna, issued an appeal to the populace to keep order and remain calm. He promised a regime in which no favoritism would be shown.

(A dispatch the Berliner Tageblatt's Vienna correspondent sent to his paper said he had heard unconfirmed rumors that sections of the Fifth Austrian infantry regiment had deserted to the Socialists.)

One of those killed in the Vienna working class district was Frau Sever, widow of the former Socialist governor of Lower Austria.

In Steyr, Eggenberg, Bruckandermur, Linz, Judenburg, Woergl, Hearring and other places, the civil war raged today, but tonight reports said the situation outside Vienna was becoming more quiet.

Howitzers reduced the Karl Marx tenement to ruins. Fighting there started at daybreak after desultory fighting between Socialists and troops during the night.

Fight Hand-to-Hand.

Street fighting nearby was so severe that no one could get near it. While the shelling was reaching its height this afternoon, hand-to-hand combats added to the terror.

Hand grenades popped from windows. Corridors became trenches. Machine guns blazed upon the beseigers below. Tear gas permeated the vicinity, but it and smaller weapons could not dislodge the defenders.

Big shells then ripped into the concrete structure. Two floors collapsed. A middle arch crumpled. One shell tore off a tower as though it were of kindling wood.

The siege of the Karl Marx had counterparts in tonight's fighting.

In a terrific struggle to eject Socialists from the Floridsdorf sector, army gunners destroyed the North Railway Station there.

This was necessary, it was explained, for strategic reasons.

In the Simmering district of Vienna, in a skirmish between Socialists and police, the latter were supported by Catholic Storm Troopers. Five troopers were killed.

Unverified reports from Wiener Neustadt, an industrial city south of here, said heavy fighting broke out there and the situation in Styria was far from quiet.

Graz police prepared to battle gangs of looters tonight.

Fight Ouside Vienna

In Linz, shooting from windows was resumed after nightfall.

In Steyr, where Prince von Starhemberg personally led the Heimwehr in action earlier today, several streets tonight were still in the Socialists' possession.

Bruckandermur still was disputed ground.

Voitsberg, an industrial town of about 10,000, was said to be entirely in Socialist hands.

Woergl and Kufstein, near the German border, asked military assistance.

Socialist headquarters at Eggenberg were reported blown up by the attackers. The Linz inner city was in the control of the military. Police, repulsed in an attempt to capture Socialist headquarters at Woergl, in the Tyrol, were forced to ask reinforcements from Innsbruck.

The fighting was the climax of a long struggle between democracy and fascism, in which the bourgeois Christian Social party of Chancellor Dollfuss was forced to accept the support of the Fascist Heimwehr as its mainstay.

When Parliament was dissolved by a Dollfuss decree last year the Socialists were numerically the strongest party in Austria—66 per cent of Vienna voters in the last election cast ballots for Socialists.

As a result of the fighting, some observers anticipate that the government party will next face a Heimwehr-Nazi front, opposed to democracy, with the numerically stronger Nazis ultimately in control.

Nazis now boast that if general elections were held, they would poll 65 per cent of the electorate, and that the often-demanded union with Germany would been approved.

"Criminal Plot" Bared.

While years of hatred between Socialists and Fascists formed the groundwork for the battles, they had their immediate cause in raids last week on Socialist headquarters which, officials said, exposed a Socialist-Bolshevik "criminal plot."

Socialist public officials in Vienna were ousted. Many were imprisoned. Some, including Otto Bauer, veteran Socialist leader, and Julius Deutsche, the party's general secretary, were said to have fled. Karl Seitz, Vienna burgomaster, was one of those jailed.

Home guardsmen occupied the Vienna City Hall, stronghold of Austrian Socialism. The provincial Diet and city council of Vienna were dissolved.

Government buildings in Vienna's "inner city" were not threatened in the fighting this morning and afternoon, but heavy firing resounded steadily within a mile of the exclusive hotels and Chancellor Dollfuss' offices.

W. T. Jerome Vice, Tammany Nemesis, Dead

William Travers Jerome, jr., announced the death of his aged father at the latter's home on East Thirty-sixth street.

Jerome, who was noted for his attacks on gambling and vice while district attorney from 1902 to 1910, also had prosecuted Harry K. Thaw for the shooting of Stanford White, the architect.

In the 1932 mayoral election, Jerome, broke a long silence on politics to endorse the candidacy of Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

Cut Broadway's "Roar."

As district attorney Jerome cleaned up gambling and vice by a series of sensational raids and "on-the-spot" courts. Chief trophy of his war was the gambling house of "Dick" Canfield, a 20-year-old establishment frequented by millionaires.

Through his latter years Jerome led the retired life of a man of wealth. The stormy, fighting period of his public life was seemingly forgotten alike by public and himself, after Jerome acquired a fortune through a color process for motion pictures.

"Jerome raids," as New York called the sudden swoops on gambling houses of the district attorney and his committee of 15 citizens, were almost nightly occurrences in 1901 and 1902. The committee of 15 replaced police when the district attorney found that his every attempt with regular officers of the law was "tipped off" in advance to the gamblers.

Victor Over Tiger.

Running for the district attorneyship as an independent, Jerome dominated two municipal elections between 1901 and 1909. His first term ended in 1905 and he was triumphantly reelected in the face of strong Tammany opposition, although the anti-Tammany vote was split three ways that year. He had been urged to run for mayor rather than seek reelection as district attorney, but he refused, protesting that he was not a politician, but a lawyer with a job to do.

When he felt that this job had been finished, he returned to the private practice of law.

Throughout his career as a reformer and raider, Jerome retained a tolerant personal attitude toward gambling and drinking. He fought uncompromisingly, however, against public gambling and the alliance of liquor with vice and corrupt politics.

He was dubbed "Mr. Carrie Nation" by his adversaries, but the title did not worry the husky crusader.

Evidence Illegally Held, Reese Defense Charges

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 13 (AP).—Attorneys in the trial of J. O. Reece, former State insurance commissioner accused of larceny of $100,000 of bonds from the insurance department, wrangled today over the admissability of evidence offered by the prosecution.

The evidence included papers and other property which witnesses said were taken from Reece's traveling bag and from lock boxes rented by him. Some of it, defense attorneys insisted, was taken illegally.

Britain Aloof, To Scan League Austrian Reply

Adopts Hands-Off Policy; Simon Not to Brook Any Interference.

London, Feb. 13 (AP).—Great Britain believes firmly that Austria is entitled to an independent existence free from interference by any other country, but has assumed a hands-off policy toward the Austro-German situation until the matter can be discussed before the Council of the League of Nations, it was stated here tonight.

Neither, apparently, does Great Britain intend to meddle in the present conflict between Chancellor Dollfuss and the Socialist opposition, it was asserted.

Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, himself emphasized the hands-off policy in the House of Commons today when he said the government had no intention of interfering in the iternal affairs of another country.

The foreign secretary told Commons that the Austrian minister had explained to him the grounds upon which Austria planned to make her appeal to the League against what the government of Dollfuss termed German interference.

The League Council, Sir John said, will, upon receiving the appeal, "presumably endeavor to ascertain what Germany has to say as to the facts alleged, before reaching any recommendation."

Doctor Drug Users Disbarment Urged

State Boards Urged to War on Addicts.

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—Revocation of the licenses of physicians who are drug addicts was urged today by H. JJ. Anslinger, United States Commissioner of arcotics, in an address before the annual conference of State Medical Boards.

A survey made by the Bureau of Narcotics three years ago, Anslinger said, disclosed about 1,700 physicians and druggists were at least suspected of drug addiction.

Various methods have been suggusted for removing drug addiction from among the registered ranks, Anslinger continued, such as reducing the manufacture of narcotics by the 10 per cent it was estimated the suspected addicts consumed.

Roosevelt May Push Municipal Debt Relief Bill

Confers With Lawmakers; Jesse Jones Opposes R.F.C Loans.

(Associated Press.)

In line with his recent declaration that interst rates were too high, President Roosevelt yesterday conferred with Congressional leaders on a pending measure which would give hard-pressed municipalities a means of scaling down both the principal and carrying charges of their debts.

The bill, already passed by the House but stalled since last session in the Senate, would afford defaulting municipalities debt relief through the Federal Courts if two-thirds of the creditors agreed a reduction should be made.

Just before the White House conference, Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Corporation, told a House Banking Sub-committee he thought direct lending by his agency to municipalities and school districts would be unwise.

The sub-committee was considering a measure by Representative Kenney (Democrat), New Jersey, which would authorize RFC loans to municipalities.

"The point," Jones said, "is to have the banks willing to lend money. They have been somewhat reticent."

Those who participated in the White House conference included Chairman Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee; Senator Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, and Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, indicated he expected the discussion to give new impetus to the municipalities measure.

Legislation enabling individuals and railroads to scale down their debts and avoid bankruptcy through an arrangement with creditors already is law.

Berlin Lays Onus of War On Dollfuss

Austria Can Have Peace Only by Public Will, Says Spokesman.

Berlin, Feb. 13 (AP).—Germany's determination not to interfere in Austria and conviction that Austrian peace can only be restored on a basis of the public will, were expressed today by a foreign office spokesman.

"We, as neighbors and friends of Austria, are most anxious," he said, "that peace shall prevail over there, but peace can not come so long as Dollfus and Vice Chancellor Fey base their regime upon Austrian bayonets and foreign sympathies, not upon the will of the Austrian people."

He emphasized that recent events in Austria disproved complaints that Germany had smuggled arms into Austria to bring about a reign of terror and Nazi dominance.

"If the Czechs should decide to march upon Austria," the spokesman continued, "we might have to emerge from our reserve.

"Just as the National Socialist party (the Nazis) stuck to strictly legal methods ever since the Munich putsch of 1923, we hold that in Austria the National Socialism of Austria must observe a strictly legal barrier.

"The reactionary Heimwehr and the Marxistic Red Front may resort to bloodshed—the Nazis in Austria will, under no circumstances, tolerate or participate in acts of violence.

"Events in Austria clearly show that it is not necessary to smuggle arms across the border, as has been charged against the Nazis.

"The insurgents in Austria possessed not only hand grenades and rifles but even machine guns.

"Dollfuss' complaint to the League of Nations becomes a grotesque farce in view of Austrian developments.

"His measures were taken without even bothering about an enabling act and merely because the Heimwehr put an ultimatum up to him.

"If anybody, therefore, departed from legality, it is Dollfuss."

Mrs. Mary Milligan Funeral Set Today

Resident of District 50 Years Died Monday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary J. Milligan, 92, District resident for nearly 50 years, who died Monday, will be held this morning at Arlington National Cemetery. Burial will be beside her husband, Thomas G. Milligan, a veteran of the Civil War.

Mrs. Milligan, who lived at 1210 N street northwest, was born in Pittsfield, Ill., on July 17, 1841. She was an active participant in patriotic organizations.

Surviving are a son, Charles R. Milligan, of Des Moines, Iowa; and four daughters, Mrs. C. H. Beach, Bayonne, N. J., and Mrs. Emma Lambe, Mrs. F. J. Marble and Miss Clara Byrd Milligan, all of Washington.

Jury Unable to Agree On Shooting of Youth

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (AP).—Circumstances of the fatal shooting of Jackie Bilkau, 13, scion of German nobility, by a playmate were left undetermined by a coroner's jury today after the victim's mother, the former Countess Erna von Bilkau, hysterically testified she believed the shooting was intentional.

One juryman held it was an accident. The other five reported they could not determine.

Long Vigil

Boy, 7, Waits in Park Till 3 a. m. for Playmates.

A 7-year-old youngster was safe at home last night, after wandering wind-swept streets during yesterday's early morning hours in search of missing playmates.

Eugene Sherry, of 411½ G street northwest, was found shivering in Henry Park, Sixth and B streets southwest, shortly after 3 a. m. yesterday. He told Police Sergt. W. F. Shelton he was "waiting for his playmates."

Sergt. Shelton bundled the youngster in his automobile and took him home. He was welcomed by near-frantic parents.

Eugene said he was playing in the park Monday night with a group of friends. His playmates left, the boy related, and told him to wait until they returned.

So he waited.

Powers Discuss Parley to End Arms Wrangle

London Meeting Invites U. S. and Non-League Members' Support.

London, Feb. 13 (AP).—A special meeting of great world powers, the United States among them, in an effort to smooth out disarmament tangles was discussed today by officers of the World Disarmament Conference.

Resumption of the disarmament conference in Geneva by mid-April appeared likely and the special session would be designed to break the ground for it.

Hope of United States's participation in the preconference parley would be based on an invitation to Japan, Russia and Germany, other leading nonleague members.

The meeting would be held outside Geneva, with London a favored site.

"The idea would be," an informant said, "to get together all powers that really count and clear the way for a disarmament agreement."

The plan has been discussed seriously by influential statesmen, it was learned, with Great Britain considered the logical nation to send out invitations.

"Such a meeting could accomplish what was envisaged by Mussolini's four-power pact," it was stated in authoritative quarters.

(The four-power pact, signed last summer by Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain, was designed to guarantee ten years of peace in Europe, facilitate reduction of armaments and improve economic conditions.)

A meeting of the steering committee of the conference was set for April 10 in Geneva and it was believed certain that the full conference would resume a few days later.

Labor Meeting To Talk Codes Set Tomorrow

43 Delegates Meet With Miss Perkins to Plan New Aid for Workers.

Representatives of the governors of 43 States will assemble at the Red Cross Building tomorrow for conference with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins on State labor codes and related labor problems.

The conference, called by Miss Perkins, will continue through Thursday. The delegates will consist of State labor department officials and representatives of wage earners.

Among the subjects to be discussed is unemployment reserves legislation. Senator Robert F. Wagner, who with Representative David J. Lewis (Maryland), and Miss Perkins drafted the unemployment insurance bill before Congress, will be a speaker. He will talk on the new Federal plan for job insurance by State laws.

Old age pensions, child labor, regulation of home work, housing and employment exchanges also will be discussed. The physical condition of work places will be considered as a safety and health protection measure. Workmen's compensation laws and administration, minimum wage and limitation of hours of work legislation are included on the agenda.

Miss Perkins said that she hopes to establish closer cooperation between the Federal Department of Labor and the State departments of labor through the conference. The meeting also will seek to determine what constitutes a sound and modern State labor code and to ascertain the immediate needs of States.

Sessions will begin at 10:30 a. m. Another conference will be conducted soon for employers, Miss Perkins announced.

Franco-Italo-British Punitive Force Is Berenger Aim.

Paris, Feb. 13 (AP).—Armed protection of Austria's independence by French, British and Italian troops was unofficially proposed today by Henry Berenger, chairman of the Senate foreign affairs committee, if a "Socialist uprising overpowers Chancellor Dollfuss."

"The beginning of a war in Europe and the end of the League of Nations" if Dollfuss loses control of the situation was predicted by M. Berenger unless "an international army to protect Vienna" is sent by the three powers.

The statesman made his suggestions in the newspaper Agence Economicue et Financiere.

Governmnt officials said they doubted whether international forces would be dispatched to Vienna. It was pointed out that France already has encouraged Austria to appeal to the League of Nations if necessary to preserve Austrian independence.

West Virginia Court Upholds Taxation Law

3 to 2 Decision Rules Hiner Law Valid; to Untangle Finances.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Cutting the legal snarl that bound State and local finances for a year and placed many governmental units and subdivisions on the verge of collapse, the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today handed down a decision upholding validity of the Hiner tax collection law.

The law, representing the third effort of the Legislature to make effective the tax limiting amendment to the constitution adopted by the people in the fall of 1932, will release approximately $25,000,000 in property taxes long impounded by the amendment. The court held today that it was definitely within "the true intent and meaning" of the amendment.

Act Provides Retirement Fund.

The Hiner collection act provides for an allocation of 70 per cent of the taxes in four classifications for current expenses of governmental units and the remaining 30 per cent for debt charges. Additional levies may be laid for debts above the constitutional limits.

The first attempt by the Legislature to effectualize the amendment was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court because it authorized unlimited excess levies. The second effort was also voided because it called for State assumption of school and road bond debts of local units.

Today's decision was by a 3-to-2 vote. It was written by Judge J. N. Kenna and concurred in by Judges John H. Hatcher and Raymond Maxwell. Judges Homer B. Woods and M. O. Litz dissented.

"When necessary to prevent the impairment of a preexisting debt contract, the levy apportioned to a taxing unit for debt service may be exceeded," the Court ruled.

Levy Uniformity Ordered.

"When such excess levies are required they need not be laid upon the basis of classification of properties contained in the tax amendment, but, when so provided by act of the Legislature they may be laid uniformly upon all classes of property.

Levies apportioned to municipalities may be transferred to be used for district debt purposes, in districts wherein there are no municipalities.

"The ratio of classified property levies contained in the tax amendment is to be substantially followed in the enabling act of the Legislature thereunder, but it is within the discretion of the Legislature to depart reasonably from such ratio in the apportionment of levies made to the taxing units of the State when necessary to do so to give practical effect to the tax amendment."

Ship Reaches Yacht in Peril

Amateur Exploring Party, Including Women, Fight Storm in Atlantic.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The S. S. Atenas reached the battered yacht Uvira off the North Carolina coast tonight in response to distress calls and reported the 36 amateur explorers aboard were "apparently in need of no immediate assistance."

The steamer sent a wireless message to the United Fruit lines here that she was standing by awaiting the arrival of a Coast Guard cutter.

The yacht's main boom was carried away, a wireless message reported.

It was the second time in a week that the yacht, with her crew of adventure seekers heading for Central American waters, had been in trouble. Last Friday after leaving Brookly she ran aground in Ambrose Channel, an incident the Coast Guard ascribed to amateur navigation.

The expedition is headed by Jackson K. Dering, of Chicago, and among those reported aboard is Howard C. Kresge, of Detroit, son of the chain store owner, and several women. However, Kresge's mother, Mrs. Anna E. Kresge, said she believed her son is in Miami, Fla., where he planned to board the yacht.

Spy Trial Likely To Last 3 Weeks

Sensational Charges Heard in Secret Session.

Abo, Finland, Feb. 12 (AP).—Finland's sensational spy trial passed its second day with little likelihood it would be completed in les than three weeks.

Twenty-eight persons, including an American, Arvid Jacobson, stand accused of military espionage. Trial before the high court is secret.

It is expected that taking of testimony of the defendants will require about two weeks. Members of the alleged spy ring were arrested last October, and charged with sending secret information of Finnish defenses and ammunition plants to a foreign power.

Holdup Suspect Held For Grand Jury Action

A holdup suspect, arrested in connection with an armed robbery last October, was held for grand jury action under bond of $5,000 in Police Court yesterday.

He is Horace Justis, 31, of 1426 K street northwest, arraigned before Judge John P. McMahon, after Charles Cabel, manager of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Thirteenth and K streets northwest, allegedly identified him. Cabel reported he was robbed at gunpoint on the night of October 6, 1933.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

aid of his former partner, Ickes, who had attacked the proposed code for the public utilities; he became a member of the Steel Code Authority and did nothing to mitigate the flagrant monopolistic practices which the steel code had legalized; he did nothing to encourage the consumer's advisory board to put the damning facts of profiteering before the public.

At one time Richberg's friends were boosting him for the United States Supreme Court, but some of them began to wonder whether his real ambitions were not for a partnership in J. P. Morgan & Co. Perhaps their fears were unjustified, but Big Business had swallowed Newton D. Baker, who in his salad days was as liberal as Richberg. The latter may be of sterner stuff, but in general he illustrates the almost inevitable tendency of the radical, when entrusted with responsibility and power, to go conservative.

His contribution to the movement which produced the New Deal and to its initial application has been invaluable. After all, he is over 50 years of age, and if any man has earned a vacation from progressiveism, he has. Perhaps, in the ideal commonwealth which may arise from Newberg's New Deal, there will be a constitutional provision by which a man is permitted to change his political opinions and social philosophy, without obloquy, after passing the age of 45.

That is what generally happens, anyway, and much heart-burning and head-shaking would be spared if the liberals realized that a man's opinions are no younger than his glands and that conservatism must be reckoned among life's occupational diseases.

Johnson, Circled by Friends, Lacks Good Organization.

However, one of the amazing and disheartening effects of the old economic order was its success in breeding generation after generation of young conformists and juvenile reactionaries. The private schools and better universities of America—far from being the hotbed of revolution or even the cradle of intellectual curiosity concerning the social order—were part and parcel of the industrial plant. They turned out unimaginative and unquestioning business men stamped in the mold most suited to operate the business machinery as it existed and to dread economic radicalism as they would dread the plague.

The worst of it was that they were really nice men, well-dressed, pleasant-mannered and attractive. For one Franklin Roosevelt there were thousands of vice presidents of banks, stock brokers and bond runners, neatly tailored and with well pressed minds, ready to serve as officers in the industrial army.

Hence no lieutenant in the New Deal faced the problem in finding suitable personnel that Johnson faced. The Treasury had a hard enough time to find able financial and monetary people outside of Wall street. Johnson had the infinitely more difficult job of locating social-minded people anywhere in industry and finance.

He had to select his men in a tremendous hurry and they had to be men of ability, whom industry would respect, with whom labor would cooperate, who would understand the purpose of the NRA, and be loyal to an Administration which was damned at birth by the bigger bankers and industrialists.

Johnson's responsibility was complete, and naturally he turned to his personal friends, men who he knew would be loyal to him and, through him, to the NRA. This at the outset, the NRA was almost entirely a Johnson organization, as it still is to a large extent.

It is not a good organization, however. Some of its leaders possess ability but are unsympathetic to labor or too immature in their economic thought to understand what the NRA must accomplish if it is to succeed. Some are simply mediocre, some are chiselers from within, and most of them are too conservative.

Former Plowmen Act As Johnson's Assistants.

As assistant administrator for industry, Johnson picked Col. Robert W. Lea, an old friend and associate. During the war, Lea was in the purchase, storage and traffic division of the general staff, in charge of animal-drawn transport vehicles. Then he became president of the Moline Implement Co., and later proprietor of a small textile factory in Newark. For three weeks prior to coming to Washington he was an officer of the Continental National Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago. Lea and Johnson have been friends for years, and he is a useful officer in the NRA. A shrewd, suave and diplomatic man of about 50, he serves as a good buffer for his impetuous administrator.

Alvin Brown is Johnson's assistant administrator and executive officer. Brown, a man of 41, is a graduate of the George Washington University and Law School, who served under Johnson as chief clerk in the Provost Marshall General's office during the early part of the World War. Then, after service with the Army air force, he went to the Moline Plow Works under Peek and Johnson. After Johnson had shot the works, Brown returned to Government service, being appointed Assistant Director of the Budget under Lew Douglas, in March, 1933. Johnson drafted him for the Blue Eagle campaign in August, but Brown returned to the Budget Bureau when that bird laid an egg, and only returned to the NRA when John Hancock, the former Navy officer and Wall street banker, resigned from the staff in the autumn of 1933. Then the general yanked Brown back and made him his executive officer. Brown is a typical bureaucratic efficiency expert and nothing more.

"Robbie" Is Hard Working Shadow to Johnson.

The assistant administrator in charge of labor is Edward F. McGrady, the A. F. of L.'s veteran legislative agent, the most effective lobbyist at the service of organized labor. A fighter for the unions, he has little concern with the ultimate economics of the New Deal industrial experiment.

Between the general and this trio hovers Miss Frances M. Robinson, "Robbie," the erstwhile stenographer, whom Robert K. Straus (son of the New Deal Ambassador to France) brought into the NRA at the beginning. "Robbie" quickly made a place for herself and has been Johnson's shadow for nine months. Hard working and self-assertive, she has became an efficient part of the NRA machinery.

It is when you examine the Division Administrators the big men of the alleged Government supervision of industry—that you see the real difficulty of finding suitable recruits for the management of a planned economy.

Take, for example, Kenneth M. Simpson, who is in charge of mines and mining, utilities, automobiles, rubber and various other industries. "Simmie" is another old friend of Johnson's, a man in his late forties, who holds advanced degrees in geology and mining engineering from Columbia University. After a short term with the Pennsylvania Railroad, he went West as a miner, prospector, mining superintendent, and manager of mining and metallurgical plants. He was for a time general manager of Commercial Solvents.

During the war he served as a technical adviser in the War Department while for the last ten years he has been a consulting engineer in New York and has done research work in the development of new alloys of iron and copper at the Columbia School of Mines. Baruch and Johnson used to consult him in the course of their search for profitable investments for Baruch.

Johnson brought him to Washington in the early days of the NRA, a hitherto unknown figure who was put in charge of the toughest codes of all: Bituminous coal, oil and steel, to mention no others. He has remained a Division Administrator with vast powers.

"Simmie" is short, stocky, quiet, shy, stolid and sleepy, and gives the impression of having been in a daze ever since he arrived in Washington. Perhaps he has been. Perhaps he is one of those quiet, strong men, who confides his best thoughts to his boss. Certainly he has not impressed anyone else as possessing brilliance.

"Simmie," Unknown to Coal Barons, Drew Their Code.

Apparently he had little to do with whipping into shape the codes confided to him. As a matter of fact, he was entrusted with the coal code only because the quarreling coal magnates objected to every proposed individual who knew anything about coal. "Simmie" was unknown to the industry so he got the job. "Simmie" was a dark horse. Nobody had anything on him or against him when he came to the NRA and nobody has got anything on him or against him since then.

Tomorrow—William Averell Harriman, a Roosevelt man.

"Catherine the Valiant" Is Slated Feb. 25 and 26.

"Catherine the Valiant" will be presented by the Blackfriar Guild at St. Dominic's auditorium, Sixth and F streets southwest, February 25 and 26, it was announced yesterday. This will be the third time the guild has presented the program.

Proceeds will be given to charity and used for the benefit of the shoe fund, under the direction of the Ladies of Charity. Both performances are scheduled for 8:15 p. m.

The production is under the guidance of Father Urban Nagle, O. P. The Blackfriars are a modern form of the Blackfriar theater workers of the Elizabethan era, where Shakespeare and other famous playwrights of that day first produced their work.

Liquor Tax Charge Sent to Grand Jury

Richard C. Waltz, 28, will face a District grand jury on charges of possessing nontax-paid liquor, after being held under a $1,000 bond in Police Court yesterday.

Waltz was arrested Monday when Policeman Harry M. Hildrup found him carrying a five-gallon can of liquor near Thirteenth and F streets northeast. Investigation disclosed an additional 35 gallons in his automobile.

Murder Charges Facing Convicts; 1 Leader Believed Killed.

Walla Walla, Wash., Feb. 13 (AP). Nine dead and nine wounded was the toll counted tonight as a board of inquiry pushed an investigation of the unsuccessful attempt of 30-odd convicts to escape from the Washington State Prison here yesterday.

The board sought to fix the responsibility for the uprising, which resulted in the slaying of eight convicts and one turnkey and the wounding of three inmates and six employes. Bullets from guards on the penitentiary walls ended the escape attempt.

Warden J. M. McCauley today completed his first year as head of the institution during which time he attempted to "humanize" the institution.

The fatalities rose to nine when Ernest Alonzo Ware, 27, a convict, died today.

Prison authorities indicated they believed the break was begun by James De Long, 25, who was killed; Frank Butler and Leo Lynch. Lynch was found hiding in his cell this morning, suffering minor wounds.

Five of the convicts who survived the fire were in solitary confinement, and the warden indicated he planned to file murder charges against some.

H. L. Briggs, assistant chief turnkey, was the employe killed. He was stabbed with knives made of shears from the tailor shop.

F. W. Jackson, head turnkey, quoted De Long as saying, "Sorry to do this, but we're doing too much time."

Masons Will Honor Benjamin Larcombe

All commanderies of the Knights Templar in the District of Columbia will participate in a meeting to honor Past Commander Benjamin F. Larcombe, for more than 50 years a prominent member of the organization, Friday in the headquarters of Columbia Commandery, No. 2.

The principal address will be given by Right Eminent Sir Joseph H. Milans, grand sword bearer of the grand encampment of the United States. Mr. Larcombe lives at 218 Seventh street southeast.

Sleeping Beauty Ends 2-Year Nap Tomorrow

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—When Thursday dawns, suburban Oak Park's sleeping beauty, Miss Patricia Maguire, will have completed a two-year slumber that has baffled efforts of medical experts to rouse her.

Tonight the condition of Patricia, victim of a form of sleeping sickness, was unchanged. Since a February day two years ago, when Patricia went to sleep on a suburban train medical science and psychology has been unable to waken her.

Woman Enters Suit Against Radio Firm

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 13 (AP).—A patent infringement suit was filed in United States District Court today against Radio Corporation of America by Helen May Fessenden, of Chestnut Hill, Mass.

The bill alleges the corporation has infringed a patent for wireless directive signaling and another for wireless transmission and reception.

Murrell Claims Woman Drunk, Denies Attack

Lieutenant Gives Jury His Version of Night on Reservation.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 13 (AP).—Lieut. John H. Murrel, former West Point football star, testified today that Miss Blanche Ralls was intoxicated and he was taking her to his mother at the time she alleges he criminally assaulted her last fall.

The defendant told a crowded Federal courtroom that his accuser, pretty Alabama divorcee, was in a "drunken condition" on the morning of October 22, following a celebration of a football game.

Because he did not wish to take her to a hotel, Murrel testified, he decided to take her to his army quarters to turn her over to his mother.

She Was Sick, He Says.

En route home they stopped near a radio tower on the Fort Sam Houston reservation, where Miss Ralls had testified the attack occurred. He planned to proceed to his home after Miss Ralls had recovered from her illness, Murrel testified.

"Why did you take her to the military reservation?" E. A. McDaniel, defense attorney, asked.

"I did not know what to do with her, sir," Murrel answered. "She was in a drunken condition. If I had taken her to a hotel I didn't know how to register for her. I didn't want to be seen downtown with her. I didn't want to leave her to the jail or to the street. I only knew she was with our party and I had to take care of her."

Denies Attacking Her.

Murrel explained he stopped at the radio tower because "if I had been seen by enlisted men with a sick woman at that time of day it would not have been so good for an officer. I just thought—why not stop here—let her get through being sick out of doors."

Murrel denied emphatically he had attacked Miss Ralls and also asserted he did not tell her she would "be afraid of publicity."

To combat the testimony of Miss Ralls that she had drunk only two cocktails during the night, the defense called Mrs. Ruth Mealy, who admitted she formerly was a bootlegger. She said she served drinks to Miss Ralls, Miss Gladys Newman and Jack Plummer.

Served Her Five Drinks.

They came to her house about 9 p. m., she testified.

"During the hour they were there I served each five highballs," she said.

H. C. Peveler, for ten years special investigator for the Birmingham, Ala., chief of police and city commission, took the stand for the defense and declared Miss Ralls' general reputation for truth and veracity in her home town was bad.

Banghart Linked To Robbery Here

District Police to Forego Return, However.

Although admitting he is suspected to implication in a mail robbery at Union Station here December 5, Washington police indicated last night they would not seek the return of Basil H. (The Owl) Banghart, arrested in Baltimore Sunday.

It was learned, however, that witnesses to the robbery may be taken to Baltimore in an effort to identify Banghart. Francis White, postal guard wounded in the holdup, remains in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital.

Investigation of Banghart's activities is in the hands of Department of Justice and postal authorities, it was pointed out, and his possible connection with the robbery here is secondary to other crimes.

D. C. Man, 44, Accused Of Beating Woman

Charged with choking and beating a 71-year-old woman, Abner Lorenzo, 44, of 1436 B street southeast, was held yesterday at the Fifth Precinct Station on charge of assault.

Lorenzo was alleged to have choked Mrs. Maggie Cross in an upstairs room of his home. Police said he threw her against an iron bed, cutting her arm. She refused medical treatment.

Paganism Warning Is Sounded by Pope

Criticism Believed Aimed at Reich on Russia.

Vatican City, Feb. 13 (AP).—Pope Pius tonight sounded a warning against efforts to "drag the world back into paganism."

The criticism was interpreted in various ways, some viewing it as a new attack on the Nazi sterilization law in Germany, while others believed it referred to Bolshevism.

The statement by the Pope was made during the course of an address in Consistory Hall to priests who will preach Lenten services in the churches of Rome.

Must "Show Cause" for Abrogation; Army Seeks Veteran Pilots.

to be represented and protect our interests. We haven't any doubt we can show cause for cancellation of the contracts."

"There is plenty of cause," contributed Cummings, "and we can show it in court."

Earlier, Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department, expressed the opinion the action should have been brought in the District Supreme Court, holding Judge Knox lacked authority to restrain the Postmaster General. The action will be fought by the New York district attorney.

The order followed by one day Col. Lindbergh's protest against condemning the industry "without just trial." It also came after an appeal by Richard W. Robbins, president of Transcontinental, offering to carry the mails for a month, pending a hearing, had been ignored.

Returning to his office after the White House meeting, Farley worked long on his letter to Senator Black. He thought better of making it public without further check, however, and passed out this statement to the press:

"I am preparing a letter to forward to Senator Black, which is a full statement of the reasons why I ordered the domestic air-mail contracts annulled. The letter is lengthy and refers to evidence in the possession of the Postoffice Department and produced by the Senate investigating committee.

Air Service Slashed.

"I am having the records thoroughly checked before the letter is finally drafted and forwarded to the chairman of the investigating committee of the Senate. This may require another 24 hours."

Meanwhile, the Postoffice Department announced a detailed schedule of air-mail operations next week. It showed the five daily and three Sunday round trips between Washington and Cleveland will be cut to three each day. Also, both the Newark-Atlanta and Newark-Miami lines—which are now serving Washington with two round trips daily—will be reduced to one each.

The present total of 40 daily round trips on the 14 mail routes which the Air Corps will establish immediately will be lowered to 25, with somewhat slower service. Thus, while the air-mail system will be shrunk from 27,000 miles to about 11,000 miles at first, frequency of service likewise will be lessened materially.

Officials hope to add to the initial mileage from time to time by negotiating short contracts with the operators, it became apparent when the Senate Postoffice Committee approved the proposal of the department for such legislation. This action, announced by Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, chairman, would tide the department over the emergency operation of the air mail.

Nations Foresee Battle for Trade

England Answers France With Russian Pact.

London, Feb. 13 (AP).—As the trade war between France and England got into full swing today, it was considered probable here that it might become a long and bitter commercial fight between the two nations.

While the British government is certain to reply to the latest French note, the dignity of officials here and in Paris, well-informed persons believed, will not permit either country to back down in the near future.

Meanwhile, the British government searched for new commercial ties. It was revealed today by members of the Russian trade delegation that a new Anglo-Russian trade pact will be signed Thursday by the British Board of Trade.

CCC to Improve Historic Highway

Improvement of a portion of the historic York-Hampton road near Yorktown, Va., has been turned over to Civilian Conservation Corps workers, Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations, said yesterday. Also known as Surrender road, it is known as the route taken by Cornwallis' army on its way to surrender to Gen. Washington.

A 2-mile section of the road was transferred recently to Colonial National Monument by the Virginia department of highways. The road will be the center of the development in the battlefield area, according to Cammerer.

Chicago to Feed Its Buffalo to Patients

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—It's tough for Cook County's herd of eight buffalo but they may be tougher for the residents of the Oak Forest Infirmary.

The county commissioners today voted out the death penalty to the entire herd on charges that not only did they fail to increase and multiply, but they "ate their heads off." So the animals are to be butchered to afford a piece de resistance for the infirmary residents—if they can take it.

increase in 1934 receipts over 1933, and a 91 per cent increase in 1935 over 1933.

Follows Roosevelt Plan.

Pointing to the President's budget message, the committee pointed out it already has complied with Mr. Roosevelt's allowance of $50,000,000 for increased taxes on liquor.

"But he also expects $150,000,000 from a revision of the revenue laws governing the income, estate and miscellaneous excise taxes," the report read.

"That additional revenue, in the opinion of your committee, is fully provided for in this bill and in the administrative methods which the Treasury Department proposes to adopt in carrying out its provisions."

Seeking a "gag" on debate and amendments when the bill is called up today, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee went before the Rules Committee yesterday, while Representative Lewis, sole dissenting member, urged the group to turn down the request.

Amendments Feared.

"If we attempt to rewrite this bill on the floor of the House, we will damage it, not perfect it," Doughton told the committee.

Although majority members of the Rules Committee, including Representatives John J. O'Connor, of New York and E. E. Cox, of Georgia, joined minority members in protesting "gag" tactics yesterday when a vote was taken in executive session, the rule was granted.

"Make it clear we did this at the request of the Democratic Policy Committee," Acting Chairman William B. Bankhead said.

Representative Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, Republican member of the committee, predicted a determined minority fight against the rule on the floor. Only one hour's debate on the rule will be sanctioned. Mapes failed in an effort to extend it to two.

The Ways and Means Committee's draft of the tax bill, explained in the report yesterday, ranged in scope from a revision of income tax rates and surtax brackets to an excise tax of 5 cents a pound on cocoanut and sesame oils.

House Changes Ruled Out.

In an effort to free the bill of excise and tariff legislation, a proposal was made in the Rules Committee yesterday to permit House changes in the excise tax feature, but it was voted down.

The following proposals for plugging income tax loopholes and revising the 1932 revenue act were outlined in the report:

Substitution of a flat 4 per cent normal income tax rate, for the present 4 and 6 per cent rates, together with 28 surtax brackets, starting with 4 per cent on incomes from $4,000 to $8,000, and rising to 59 per cent on $1,000,000 and over.

Japan Grants Record Funds To Army, Navy

272 Millions Provided in 1934; Farm Aid to Be Studied.

Tokyo, Feb. 13 (AP).—Maintaining their dominance of national policy, the war and navy departments today obtained approval in the House of Representatives of the largest peacetime appropriations for defense in Japan's history.

The appropriations, totaling 938,000,000 yen ($272,020,000), form 44 per cent of the complete budget of 2,112,000,000 yen ($612,480,000) for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1934.

A standing, uncounted vote gave a huge majority to the budget bill which was prepared by the 79-year-old minister of finance, Korekiyo Takahashi. It now goes to the House of Peers where quick approval is expected.

Once the budget finally passes the Diet, the two houses will begin a study of the farm relief problem. Rural poverty, intensified by a bumper rice crop and consequent low prices, is one of the thorniest problems of government in Japan.

As far back as last December, virtual rubber-stamp approval was predicted for the budget. At that time, the cabinet, dominated by the war and navy leaders, agreed on the large defense program.

The appropriation gave 450,000,000 yen ($130,500,000) for the army. An allotment of 488,000,000 yen ($141,520,000) for the navy is just 11,000,000 yen short of the navy's great spending year in 1921-22.

Gen. Sadao Araki, who has since resigned, is credited with winning over the cabinet to the big budget.

5,000 in District Are Included; Others to Go Later.

project within its jurisdiction. Plans are being made, it was learned last night, for the District CWA to take over the Federal projects being supervised by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

It also was learned that other Federal projects may be adopted. Among the Federal work which will be affected by the order are Coast and Geodetic Survey, Weather Bureau, Census Bureau, Public Health, Howard University, and mosquito and tick extermination.

Instructions to States.

The Federal CWA yesterday sent informal instructions to State administrators to continue their programs, in spite of the snag which has entangled the $950,000,000 appropriation bill. The 15,000 employes who are engaged in the local projects in the District will receive instructions to report to work as usual until further orders are given.

When the bill first reached the House it provided only for State and local projects; but the Senate included a provision for Federal projects. This was modified in conference to allow the completion of Federal projects on the improvement on Federal lands.

While the Federal CWA was preparing a formal order for the cessation of Federal projects, a fight on the inclusion of such programs in the bill was being waged in the Senate.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, declared that the provision would cost the jobs of 210,000 men.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, fought for the amendment which requires confirmation of State directors, as a safeguard to the spending of the $950,000,000. Opponents charge that the amendment was designed to enable the positions to be dispensed as patronage.

Hopkins Defends Work.

Meanwhile, Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins was engaged in a defense of his conduct of the CWA before the House Expenditures Committee, when he was called to account by Representative Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts.

In reply to one of Gifford's questions, Hopkins replied: "What is the use of discussing that with you? You don't know anything about handling relief to the unemployed." Gifford pointed out he was trying to learn why wealthy municipalities had shared too heavily in Civil Works funds.

"We don't want you to think we are persecuting you," Gifford said.

"Oh, you can't persecute," Hopkins replied.

Hopkins declared that the job of placing 4,000,000 people to work had been done speedily. The attack on the wage scale, he said, is from big cities and by people who never paid big wages. If some municipalities refuse to care for their unemployed, that is no reason why the needy should not be provided for, he said.

Meteor Viewed In Six States

Northwest Residents Say Spectacle Resembled Giant Rocket.

Denver, Feb. 13 (AP).—A meteor that streaked out of northern skies and appeared to some observers like a "rocket speeding through space," and to others like a blazing airplane, left at least six States talking about the brilliant phenomenon today.

Starting in the Northwest, the fire ball was seen at Billings, Mont., shortly after 9 p. m., Mountain time, last night, and afterward in other Montana and northern Wyoming cities.

Colorado, South Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska points today reported sighting the flaming body as it traveled in a southeasterly direction and apparently fell somewhere in southern Nebraska.

Smaller balls of fire were seen flanking the brilliant meteor as it passed over Rapid City, S. Dak.

Between North Platte, Nebr., and Cheyenne, a transcontinental plane pilot said he sighted the meteor.

Educators Map Student Relief With CWA Cash

Preliminary Local Details Are Worked Out at Parley.

Preliminary plans for admitting deserving students to Washington colleges and universities with the aid of CWA funds were worked out yesterday at a conference between Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and heads of the local institutions.

Dr. Ballou will receive applications from students, which will then be submitted to Leroy A. Halbert, director of District relief, and referred to Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of Federal relief.

High school graduates now taking post graduate work at local high schools, other graduates of high schools, and college students who have been forced to drop their courses, will be eligible for admission under the plan. All will be required to prove that they are unable to attend college because of financial handicaps.

More than 200 are now taking high school post-graduate courses because they can not afford to attend college. Many desire to take commercial courses and an effort will be made to organize commercial courses at Central High School in the afternoon, Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent, said yesterday.

The students who will be admitted to colleges under the CWA plan will do part time work at the institutions, and be paid from the CWA funds.

Lawyer Claims Touhy Welched On Defense Fee

Tries Vainly to Quit Third Trial of Gangster as Factor Speeds East.

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—While the complaining witness John Factor speeded east by airplane to attempt identification of two more suspects, Roger Touhy went on trial again today for kidnaping—the third time Touhy and one of his codefendants faced such a charge.

The trial, the second time the Touhys have been prosecuted for the $70,000 abduction of Factor, began after Defense Attorney William Scott Stewart protested in vain for leave to withdraw from the case, saying he had not been paid for previous services.

Stewart said Touhy had not paid him for appearing in St. Paul Federal Court in the trial growing out of kidnaping of William Hamm, jr. Neither has he been paid, Stewart said, for defending Touhy, Albert Kator and Gustav Schaefer in their first trial in the Factor case, which ended in a mistrial 12 days ago.

Lawyer Fears Jail.

He protested he was being held in the case by the judge's power to send him to jail if he did not serve. Judge Michael Feinberg, who heard the first case, appointed Stewart to the case February 9.

Factor, in custody and fighting extradition to England for a $7,000,000 stock fraud trial, was taken to Baltimore to attempt identification of Basil (The Owl) Banghart and Isaac Kostner, arrested there several days ago.

Several Named Banghart.

Banghart was identified by several witnesses in the first trial as one of the men who attempted to collect $50,000 additional ransom after Factor had been released for $70,000.

Prosecutors have asserted the Baltimore captures of Tuohy gangsters would materially strengthen their second trial of the alleged Factor kidnapers. However, they will push the prosecution of those held in Chicago without delay to ascertain final disposition of the Baltimore prisoners who also are wanted in other States.

everything dear to him—reputation, career and life in the service."

As for Gen. Pratt, Martin said he had high regard for the Wright Field commander personally, but that he considered him, like all the others, "afraid."

Asked to describe the method whereby the "trust" functioned, the witness said that when the Army was ready to grant a new contract, "they go into secret meeting and agree as to what company shall have the contract."

Asked who was meant by "they," Martin replied:

"Agents of the Curtiss-Wright company, Gen. Pratt and procurement officers at Wright Field."

Gen. Pratt, testifying last week, told the committee the procedure was for qualified air officers to consider the requirements of the contract to be granted, and the competency of the various companies to fulfill such a contract, and then, after recommendations by Chief of the Air Corps and approval of the War Department heads, make the award.

He said he favored this method to open bidding, instituted recently by Assistant Secretary of War Woodring, because procurement officers knew best what the airplane companies could produce.

Martin said yesterday it was by a "misinterpretation of the law" that the Army had not hitherto called for open bids.

"The contracts do not go to those outside the Ohio gang," the witness declared.

Charles Town Council Ratifies Tax Levies

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Municipal tax levies for 1933 were ratified by the town council tonight after notice of the levies' approval by the State Tax Commission was received from Charleston this afternoon. Two previous levy estimates were turned down last year by the tax commissioner, the final one being drawn up early this January.

Charles Town is the first Jefferson County municipality to receive approval on its 1933 levy.

Rites for Mrs. McKown Conducted in Berkeley

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.)—Funeral services were conducted in Berkeley County today for Mrs. Emma McKown, 80, widow of Charles W. McKown, who died Sunday night at the home of a daughter near here.

Mrs. McKown was born in the Gerrardstown vicinity. She is survived by four children, J. E. McKown, Gerrardstown; Mrs. Edgar Gordon, Rost, Va.; Mrs. Lyle Campbell, with whom she resided, and Mrs. J. W. Hollis, Gerrardstown; also, one brother, Parren Hollis, of Martinsburg.

Hagerstown Area Talks Assist Fruit Growers

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Meetings of fruit growers in Washington County are being held this week, with Dr. E. N. Cory, Dr. R. A. Jehle and A. F. Kierheller, University of Maryland Extension Service, discussing new spraying developments in the fight against the coddling moth, apple scab and other fruit parasites.

Meetings are being held in the large Smithsburg and Hancock fruit districts, with the county farm agent, Milt D. Moore, and agricultural department instructors in the high schools cooperating.

ing minor bills under a procedure requiring the consent of all members. Fish objected to them one by one.

Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, told Speaker Rainey that since the House was not making any progress, if if Majority Leader Byrns did not move to adjourn, he would.

Byrns asked permission to speak for five minutes and Fish objected.

"Well, I will tell the gentleman this—," Byrns began.

"No, you will not tell the gentleman anything," Fish interrupted. "You are just an ordinary member of this House."

Shouts went up from all quarters. Speaker Rainey rapped in vain for order.

Points Shaking Finger.

Pointing a shaking finger at the New Yorker, Byrns said: "I will tell the gentleman—"

Knutson: "Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adjourn."

Fish: "The gentleman from Tennessee will tell me nothing."

Byrns: "I will tell the gentleman on the floor of the House or on the outside—"

Knutson: "Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adjourn."

Blanton: "Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York is out of order."

Fish: "The gentleman from New York is not out of order. The gentleman from New York is demanding the regular order."

Byrns finally got the attention of the House for a minute and, addressing himself to Fish, said:

"The gentleman will never get anything by these tactics."

"Do not lecture me," said Fish. "I have been here 14 years."

But Longer.

Fish stepped out into the center aisle which divides the Democratic and Republican sides. Blanton shouted:

"Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman from New York sit on his own side of the House. We do not want him in No Man's Land here in the middle aisle."

"Is the gentleman going to object to all bills that are called from now on?" asked Byrns.

"I will answer that question," Fish replied, "by saying that if the gentleman will permit to go into the record the letter written by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to the President, I shall not object."

"I am not going to be held up in that way," Byrns shouted, shaking his fist. "I move we adjourn."

Later Fish issued a statement saying:

"The disgraceful attack on Lindbergh by Secretary Stephen Early, implying that Lindbergh was motivated by publicity because he dared in his capacity of an American citizen to protest to the President against a blanket condemnation of 14 air mail companies, is typical of the dictatorship that we are gradually slipping into."

'Prisoner' MacCracken Spends Second Night in Hotel 'Cell'

overflowing and the crowds partially filled the corridors. Most of the spectators had arrived at noon, expecting the hearing to start at that time. They waited patiently when they learned activity would not start until 2 p. m. The spectators were rewarded with the unusual spectacle of seeing nearly every member of the Senate in his seat.

No time was lost in getting under way. Hogan waived further reading of the record and Senator Black urged that the defense be informed that it could make any statement or present any witnesses it desired.

"We consider the record, so far as MacCracken is concerned, closed," Hogan said. "We are ready to submit our case."

He agreed that MacCracken had been guilty of contempt when he allowed air mail documents to be removed from his office, but he argued that he had purged himself of contempt by seeing that the documents had been returned.

Hogan spoke eloquently as he recited the history of the case and cited legal references. Only Senator Huey Long left his seat during the speech. He walked about the chamber. Senator Borah, evidently prepared to participate in debate in executive session, had his desk piled with law books. He followed word for word in his own books the citations made by Hogan.

Hogan then went into an exposition of the law, contending that the Senate had no power to punish for contempt after the incident construed as contempt was closed.

"Assuming — yes conceding—that the act of removing documents," Hogan said, "for the purpose of preventing their production in accordance with the subpena was a contempt, just exactly as the failure to produce or the failure to answer questions would be a contempt, I submit to the Senate that that was a contempt which could be purged and which has been purged."

Contends Senate Powerless.

"Power of the Senate," he continued, "lasts as long as, but no longer than, the documents which have been withheld are not produced and made available to the committee and to the Senate; so long as, but no longer than, questions which a witness is recalcitrant about answering remain unanswered; no longer than the time when he signifies he is willing to produce in the one case, and produces, signified his willingness to answer, and answers.

"There are no questions to be asked, no information being sought, no documents which the Senate wants and has not got, or which there is any obstruction in the way of the Senate's getting. The simple proposition before this honorable body at this moment is whether or not for a past and completed act and offense you can punsh not as a means but as an end.

"But you will say: What about the acts that were done? If any one of them is offensive to the dignity of the Senate, to its high privileges, to the law of the land, where shall it be redressed or punished?' And I answer you in the language of the Supreme Court, 'In the courts of the land.'

"You have the power, sirs, to prevent anything that obstructs these deliberations. You have the power to compel anything that would prevent the free flow from now on of these deliberations. But when you have used that preventive and that coercive power, your Constitutional power is at an end. You have no punitive power except as that is necessarily incidental to and tied up with coercive power."

Cites Judge O'Donoghue.

Referring to the action Monday of Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in refusing to transfer the case to the civil courts, Hogan said:

"Yesterday the District Court here in the District of Columbia decided, upon the facts presented by a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which was argued as a serious, fundamental Constitutions proposition, that those facts did not justify the release of the Respondent MacCracken on a habeas corpus at this time.

"No opinion was handed down, no reasons were given, no remarks from the bench indicated the mental processes by which the distinguished jurist reached his decision.

"But if it be said that that upholds the power which is now asserted, then I submit that you have the choice of following a District Judge or of following the Supreme Court of the United States, and I may say with considerable confidence with respect to which you will follow.

"Mr. President, I conclude by saying that you have, first, a solemn question of your own constitutional power which I am sure will be determined without recourse, that that human trait which makes one, whether a legislative body, a court or an individual, desire to extend and exert power.

"You have, second, the question on the facts, so far as Mr. MacCracken is concerned, as to whether or not in respect to one act of contempt with which he has no connection, and with respect to another act of contempt, as to which under the law, as I submit all lawyers know and understand it, there has been a complete purging—whether or not you will take a step, which every one of us knows would constitute the travesty ending their man's entire career."

Official Fears Doom to Army Flying Mail

Lack of Equipment and Trained Personnel Are Cited.

Two things may spell doom to the Army ever carrying out emergency flying of the air mail.

Lack of pilot experience and instruments for night and blind flying, both highly important factors in handling of air mail, may prevent the Army from ever successfully carrying the mail at the point of efficiency maintained by commercial air lines, Department of Commerce officials said yesterday.

Commercial airlines have employed about 550 pilots and co-pilots in flying the mail. The Army proposes to put 200 officers and 324 men in charge of the mail.

An air-mail pilot is first and foremost a carrier of passengers, it was pointed out. A co-pilot serves for a year merely sitting beside the pilot at any time to take his place should the ship get out of hand. Before a man becomes a co-pilot he has to have had 1,000 hours of flying time.

Duties of Pilot Manifold.

The Department of Commerce has promised its fullest cooperation in making available to Army fliers its facilities for air navigation. While flying his ship the pilot has to watch by eye and ear the following factors:

Radio range beacons, weather information, directional signals and dispatch information from his commercial base. In addition he has to know intimately all intermediate emergency landing fields along the airways. Frequently he has to fly entirely "blind."

Commercial planes have all of these facilities. Army planes are now equipped with them.

"But the Army is being called upon to fight a commercial proposition—a thing they are not prepared to do," a Department of Commerce official said yesterday.

It is known that 98 out of 100 flying schedules in carrying the mail were completed by commercial lines. Moreover, the average age of a commercial pilot was 32 and he served more than 850 hours in the air per year. Army air men are employed mostly on the ground, it was said, while they are lucky if they get as much as 200 hours in the air per year.

Servicing Troubles Foreseen.

Commercial airlines employ an immense staff of ground airplane and engine mechanics. Each line has a base where planes are thoroughly serviced immediately after they land after a flight. Equipment for servicing planes isn't interchangeable, it was said.

This means that Army planes will have to depend almost entirely upon commercial airlines for engine servicing as well as airport facilities.

Doubt was expressed by an official in the Department of Commerce, that the Army would ever get under way with the flying of the mail.

As a result it was said that air-mail service would either go back into its former channels or the President would reach another solution before Monday, February 19, when the Army is to begin flying the mail.

Clifton Forge Reports More Assets, Less Cash

Clifton Forge, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). The annual financial report of the city, issued today by the David A. Jayne Co., of Charleston, W. Va., which audited the city books, places the assets of the city at $1,686,948.19 at the close of 1933, an increase of $62,000 over the previous year. Cash assets were $47,500, a slight decrease from the preceding year. Unpaid taxes increased by more than $23,000.

The auditors report praised the city officials for efficency and accuracy.

Clay County Hearing In CWA Sift Sought

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Delegate E. R. Reed (Republican), Clay County, today handed the House of Delegates a request that the Joint CWA legislative investigating committee hear members of the Clay County Welfare board in reply to charges of political preferment and mismanagement.

"If our county is as bad as they say it is," Reed stated, "we need a cleaning up. If not, these board members should be cleared."

Frostburg Is Unable To Revise Dam Plans

Frostburg, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The mayor and council advised Whitman, Requardt & Smith, consultants, Baltimore, that it would be unable to meet the increase to $90,000 from the original $76,000 for the proposed municipal dam at Piney Run, Garrett County. The engineering firm will revise plans and specifications.

Under a PWA grant for the water plant, the original estimate was $76,000.

Frederick Man Loses Appeal on Auto Fine

Frederick, Md., Feb. 13.—Judge Arthur D. Willard in Circuit Court today affirmed the judgment of Magistrate Alton Y. Bennett in fining Charles Hayward, contractor, $10 for operating a truck without markers.

Hayward contended he hired the truck to local CWA authorities and that the truck was not under his control. He also contended the truck was hauling dirt and stone and that they did not constitute freight or merchandise.

Three Admit Guilt To Robbery Charge

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). In default of $5,000 bond on a charge of armed robbery and hold-up, Luther McCusker, of Dixie, W. Va., was remanded to jail by Justice A. W. Brining, of Ridgeley, yesterday. Two young women companions, Annie Parker and Verna DeVore, of this city, were held in $1,000 bail. All pleaded guilty.

Transient Bureau Gives Aid to 200

21 Men Get Beds Each Night at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.) At least 200 persons have received aid from the transient bureau established here three weeks ago, A. C. Anderson, director, has announced.

There have been dispensed 1,054 meals, an average of 60 daily, while an average of 21 men have been lodged each night. New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania led other States in number of transients, while a total of 21 States and the foreign countries of South America, Russia, Italy, Germany and Cuba were represented.

Nine transient families, ranging from two to five persons each, were aided. Three of these and eight individuals were transported home by Federal funds, 20 individuals prepared for concentration camp, three placed here and the remainder liberated to go on in search of employment or in gratification of their wanderlust.

Virginia Fight Against New Taxation Fails

Bill Asking Congress to Give D. C. Votes Is Offered Delegates.

By Doug Warrenfels.
Staff Correspondent of The Post.

Richmond, Feb. 13.—After weeks of sporadic sharpshooting at Gov. Peery's proposals for additional taxes, the General Assembly today virtually capitulated.

An overnight change of sentiment found the Legislature apparently ready to approve every item in the Governor's revised program for new revenue of about $875,000 annually. Opponents conceded the Peery school of thought would prevail.

Observers credited Peery with striking a decisive blow at his enemies by "talking turkey" last night before joint hearings of Senate and House finance committees.

Several hundred persons listened attentively as the Governor defended his recommendations and insisted the State must assure a minimum school term of eight months "without again asking teachers to donate their services."

How the wind is blowing was shown when the House rejected by 58 to 34 a resolution to block consideration of new taxes until budget estimates had been reduced. The vote surprised 20 new members who sponsored the measure.

House Finance Chairman Wilbur C. Hall, of Leesburg, led the Peery forces. He contended the Governor's program offered the only solution in a serious emergency.

Public hearings resumed later by finance committees were considered mere formalities. The principal witness was Walter M. Evans, representing the retail merchants.

Evans asked reduction of the proposed merchants tax. He devoted most of his argument to criticism of sales taxes, now believed out of the question.

The Senate passed a bill advanced by Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester, under which the State would be put on record as fostering the principle of a minimum program of education. The measure contemplates a minimum term of eight months.

A resolution asking Congress to arrange to give residents of the District of Columbia votes was introduced by Delegates Ralph H. Daughton, Norfolk; William D. Medley, Clarendon; John Mackall, McLean, and George W. Herring, Woodbridge.

Pleas Increase For Frederick County Loans

Home Mortgage Staff Augmented to Care for Gain.

Middletown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Because of the rapidly increasing number of applications for refinancing of mortgages in Frederick County through the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, it has become necessary to add two more attorneys to the staff at the Frederick office, according to James H. Cramer, county appraiser.

Attorneys Manuel M. Weinberg, of Frederick, and Patrick M. Schnauffer, of Brunswick, were named by Oliver H. Bruce, jr., of Cumberland, manager of this district. H. Keiffer DeLauter, of Braddock Heights, and Edward J. Smith, of Frederick, already were serving as attorneys.

Mr. Cramer says 130 applications for refinancing of mortgages have been filed with the Frederick office, and 150 more are expected within the next few weeks. These latter will come from closed banks of the county, which will turn over a list of mortgages to be refinanced through the Government agency.

Mr. Bruce says there are 968 applications on file in the entire Cumberland district, representing $2,200,000. To date, $308,000 has been paid out, $16,000 going for delinquent taxes and water rents.

Through W. Clinton McSherry, attorney to the Frederick County Board of Commissioners, Mr. Cramer is attempting to save further costs of publication of delinquent tax accounts on properties for which refinancing loans have been requested. Practically all of the 130 properties on which loans are being sought are among the nearly 600 county properties now being advertised for delinquent taxes.

Costs of $7.20 are added in each case, thus aggregating more than $900 which must be added to the refinancing of the properties.

Mr. Bruce is urging haste on the legal work of the Frederick office, and Mr. Cramer believes with the augmented legal staff it will be possible to complete 20 applications per week.

Suit Will Test West Virginia Income Tax Act

Retroactive Rule, Section on Investments, Are Points at Issue.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). A suit to test the legality of the State gross income tax will be filed this week in the Kanawha County Circuit Court.

Two points will be contested: First, that the tax, enacted May 26, 1933, is not applicable to income for the prior portion of 1933; second, that income from investments is not taxable.

Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, has ruled that the language of the act requires payment of the tax for the full calendar year and that income from investments should be included. The opposition claims that taxable income under the act is only that derived from salaries and businesses.

Various lawyers have taken issue with both rulings and have advised clients to withhold that portion of the tax in question, or to pay it under protest.

The suit will be in the form of a petition for an injunction to restrain the commissioner and his agents from collecting the tax for the full year and for income on investments. Whatever the decision, the case is expected to be appealed immediately to the State Supreme Court.

State officials, including Attorney General Homer A. Holt, have been advised of the suit.

Rev. S. R. Ludwig Succumbs at 74

Brethren Minister Buried at Winchester.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Funeral rites were held today for the Rev. Sanford R. Ludwig, 74, United Brethren clergyman who died Sunday. The Rev. George W. Stover, Winchester, assisted by other ministers of the denomination, conducted the rites. Burial was in Mount Hebron Cemetery.

The Rev. Mr. Ludwig served many churches in the Virginia Conference of the United Brethren Church, including pastorates in the Valley of Virginia and in West Virginia and Maryland. His last pastorate was at Toms Brook, Va., from which he retired to Winchester.

He was born in Rio, W. Va. Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Mattie V. Ludwig; two sons, Robert E. Ludwig, of Washington, and Harold L. Ludwig, Winchester; two daughters, Mrs. B. A. Grayson, Winchester, and Mrs. Cecil B. Richards Beckley, W. Va., five brothers, Arthur, James, John and Oseola Ludwig, of Rio, and George Ludwig, of Keyser, W. Va., and two sisters, Mrs. Bertie Bradfield and Miss Fannie Ludwig, of Rio.

Firemen Honor Charles Rouss In Winchester

Annual Banquet Observes Birthday, With Noted Local Guests.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—For the fourtieth consecutive year, prominent citizens of Winchester joined with the members of the Charley Rouss Fire Company here last night in celebrating the ninety-eighth birthday anniversary of the company's benefactor, the late Charles Broadway Rouss, New York mercantile magnate.

Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, delivered the principal address, urging the public to cooperate "in these trying days of reconstruction."

Former Mayor William W. Glass, once employed in Rouss' Broadway store, was toastmaster. W. R. Legge, of the high school faculty, and the Rev. Dr. G. W. Banks, retired Southern Methodist Bishop of Kentucky, also spoke.

The Winchester Council, the city's ministers and Mayor Charles R. Anderson were special guests. Harry K. Thaw, of New York, who owns an estate, Kenilworth, near here, and is a member of the fire company, also occupied a seat of honor at the speakers' table.

The Rouss Orchestra under the direction of George M. Jones played and Eugene Russell and a local quartet sang.

Rouss, a native of Jefferson County, Va., now a part of West Virginia, was christened Charles Baltzell Rouss. He served in the Confederate Army and returned to Winchester penniless after the Civil War. Rouss failed in several local business enterprises, then left Winchester with less than $2 in his pocket to seek his fortune in New York.

He built up a large mercantile establishment on Broadway and subsequently gave largely of his wealth to enterprises in Winchester. In addition to gifts to the volunteer fire companies of this city, Rouss gave the City Hall.

Allegany Leads In CWA Roster

However, Prince Georges and Baltimore Paid More Money.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Allegany County on February 1 had more men employed in CWA work than any other county in Maryland, according to Harry Greenstein, State Civil Works administrator. This county had approved projects employing 3,956 men at the end of January. Baltimore County came second with 3,383.

In the amount of money spent for labor and materials, Baltimore and Prince Georges Counties surpassed Allegany. In the former, $712,685 was spent prior to this month and in Prince Georges County, $589,173 was used. This county's total was $539,653.

469 Busy in Henry.

Martinsville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). The board of supervisors of Henry County met yesterday to outline plans for emergency relief work. A county office is being opened this week, with Miss Berry, of the State office at Richmond, in charge. A total of 469 persons was furnished employment through city and county CWA prdojects the past week. Wages totaled $4,098.10.

More Work in Jefferson.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Additional sewer work has been approved as a CWA project here, also projects for white and colored women at Harpers Ferry and in the mountain region near here.

Shenandoah Reorganizes.

New Market, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). A complete reorganization of Shenandoah County's CWA employment board has been effected, centralizing the selection of workers at Woodstock.

Following a meeting of Judge M. L. Walton, jr., county reemployment chairman; W. F. Day, deputy administrator; Capt. B. S. Hanson, operations supervisor; Miss Adele Clark, of the Richmond CWA offices, and members of the county employment board, it was announced that all jobs would be assigned through the office of Miss Mary Lauck Walton, executive secretary.

Oh, I Say—

Court Treated to Tail Coat, Monocle and Cane.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Garbed in tail coat, tip collar, bow tie, tan-colored spats and a monocle, B. C. Pilcher, scion of a prominent Nashville (Tenn.) family appeared in police court here yesterday to answer a charge of inability to pay his room and board bill at a local hotel.

With the monocle corectly adjusted and leaning lightly on his cane, Pilcher told Police Justice Donald L. Weems that since the charge was preferred he had received money for the hotel bill.

He was released.

Animal Attacks Hunter Lying Down to Drink From Brook.

Wytheville, Va., Feb. 13 (AP).—As nerve-tingling as a movie thriller was the fight to the finish between a Wythe County hunter and an enraged wildcat.

The hunter won with the aid of his hound, but he lost much clothing and some skin in the combat.

Leslie Lefler came to Wytheville the other day with visible proof of his conquest—the wildcat's hide and some nasty wounds that needed medical attention.

Lefler, who lives on the south side of Little Walker's Mountain, accompanied by his favorite hound, set out early for a day of fox hunting.

The dog stopped to sniff at a brush pile.

Lefler, convinced after an examination that there was nothing alive in the brush, walked a few paces to drink from a nearby stream. He lay face downward on the ground. Something closed about his left wrist. He turned to find the wrist clenched between the jaws of a wildcat.

Taking terrific punishment, the cat held on grimly while Lefler beat the cat in the face with his free right fist. He broke both of the cat's front legs but still the animal hung on and with his hind feet clawed gaping rents in Lefler's clothing and ripped the man's skin.

Honors were about even when the hound took a throat hold on the cat. That finished the battle.

Home Aflame, Family Flees By Window

Father Slightly Burned in $3,500 Camp Springs Dwelling Fire.

A family of six narrowly escaped when their Camp Springs, Md., home was destroyed by flames. Warren Day, 46, the father, was slightly burned.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Hattie Day, sleeping in a second-floor bedroom and awakened by smoke. Running to the kitchen, she found the lower floor in flames.

By the time she reached the others, also asleep on the second floor, the flames blocked the stairway. Crawling through a window to the front porch roof, Mrs. Day, George, 11, Garald, 12, and Gertrude, 5, were lowered to the ground by the eldest boy, James, 21, and William Biggs, a passerby.

The father, dashing back to save personal effects, was burned about the head. Volunteer fire departments responded from Forestville, Marlboro, Boulevard Heights, Capitol Heights and Greater Capitol Heights.

Damage was estimated at $3,500.

Roanoke Team Begins Debates

Question of Permanently Increased Presidential Power Is Topic.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 13 (AP).—Roanoke College debaters will argue the practicability of increasing the President's power as a permanent policy in a series of debates beginning tomorrow.

Their season will close with the Tri-State Tournament at Greensboro, N. C., March 8, 9, and 10.

J. Forest Jamison, debate manager, said most of the debates would center around the topic, "Resolved that the powers of the President of the United States should be materially increased as a settled policy."

Edward Dowdy and S. C. Foster will debate the Shepherd State Teachers College team at Salem, Va., on the affirmative of the question tomorrow, while the following night James E. Palmer and Edwin Hayden will take the negative of the same question in a debate at Richmond. A debate with either Randolph-Macon College or William and Mary is planned for the same trip.

On February 21 Forest Jamison and C. B. Thornton will defend the negative of the question at Emory and Henry College.

On March 9 Jack Fishwick and A. T. Mazak will meet the University of Dayton debaters at Salem.

Tax Act Threatens Municipal Deficits

New Law Curbs Property Collections.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Forty-two West Virginia cities and towns face deficits totaling $609,273 if their present budgets are maintained and the towns rely solely upon property taxes under the latest collection law for revenue.

Figures from the State tax commissioner, on municipal fiscal conditions, will be presented to a Senate sub-committee, which has three proposals to augment municipal revenues by indirect taxes are pending.

The figures disclose that the budgets of the 42 cities and towns total $1,048,451, while revenues available from direct taxes under the new act total $349,937. At the commissioner's office it was stated that the budgets may be revised to bring them within anticipated revenue.

Bay Navigation Is Improving

Ice in Severn River Is Cleared Partially by Strong Winds.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Severn River, frozen solidly for the first time in years, today was cleared of much ice by strong northwest winds greatly improving navigation in Chesapeake Bay.

The ice is reported piling high along the Eastern Shore. Conditions there may become troublesome with another cold spell.

None but larger vessels is moving, as winds are dangerous to oyster schooners and similar craft. The cold weather has sent oyster prices soaring $1 or more per barrel.

Many birds have died from starvation and other wild life is suffering similarly, according to report reaching here. One farmer reported that a covey of partridges sought food and shelter in his poultry house.

Ship Safe in Port After Four Perish

Derelict Schooner Towed Into Hampton Roads.

Norfolk, Feb. 13 (AP).—The derelict schooner Purnell T. White, whose crew of seven was reduced to three by a storm tragedy at sea, was towed into Hampton Roads today by the Coast Guard cutter Pontchartrain.

She will remain here until her Baltimore owners decide what to do with the waterlogged vessel, whose cargo of lumber was all that kept her from sinking.

The captain, mate, a seaman and the Negro cook were drowned when the ship overturned while being towed into port by the Mendota, which saved three members of the crew. The Pontchartrain later was dispatched to bring in the derelict.

Funeral at Middletown For John W. Bussard

Middletown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Funeral services will be conducted at the home tomorrow for John W. Bussard, 83, one of the most prominent retired farmers of the Middletown Valley, who died Monday after a ten-day illness. Mr. Bussard retired from farming 25 years ago.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Rebecca Bussard, he is survived by five brothers, Peter E. Bussard, Samuel D. Bussard, Charles L. Bussard, N. A. Steck Bussard, all of Middletown, and Joseph H. Bussard, of Frederick.

It's positively the funniest picture ever made, but don't let that keep you away . . .

Convict Music Draws Protest From Society

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Protests against the activities of the convict musicians at the West Virginia Penitentiary have been carried to the Legislature by the organized musicians of the State.

The Wheeling Musical Society, Local No. 142, of the American Federation of Musicians, has drafted a letter of formal protest.

"There are certain occasions where we offer no objections to them performing," the protest sets forth, "but when they take dance engagements such as they are advertised to play for the American Legion Post, No. 1, Wheeling, we consider this most unfair."

Direct violation of NRA was also made against Joseph Denard, leader of the prison band. It was also pointed out that he is not only "leader of the band, receiving a salary from the taxpayers of the State for those duties," but is also leader of the school bands in the city of Moundsville, receiving a salary for this from the school taxes. The salary in either case is enough, and more than a great many men are making," it was stated.

Legislative action is demanded in the letter.

Mrs. G. E. Beltzhoover Stricken in W. Virginia

Tax Revision To Be Rushed In W. Virginia

Hiner Collection Law Decision Hailed by Delegates.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Members of the West Virginia legislature, who had been waiting a week for the Supreme Court decision upholding the Hiner general property tax collection law, jubilantly resumed work following the verdict today, determined to wind up their tasks and go home.

The court's decision releases $25,000,000 in State and municipal taxes, thus permitting the legislators to proceed on a charted course.

Meanwhile, State and local fiscal agents proceeded to shape their finances in accordance with the new law.

Distribution Slated Tomorrow.

The State auditor's office announced that an advance distribution of about $2,000,000 of impounded utility taxes would be mailed tomorrow to all local units.

Fred F. Fox, State tax commissioner, telegraphed all levying bodies of the State to remain in session through Wednesday in anticipation of a legislative classification of excess levies. Speaker Ralph M. Hiner, of the House of Delegates, stated that he would ask the legislature to amend the act to classify these excess debt levies immediately.

Action was deferred until tomorrow by the House on motion of Frank R. Sill (Democrat), Pocahontas, who said time was needed for further study of the court decision. The change, he said, would provide for differences in the amount paid by individuals in a district who orginally had contracted to pay the same amount toward the retirement of bonded debts.

Charter Report Refused.

The House refused to accept a conference report on the Huntington charter bill and requested further consideration of it by the conference body. The Senate approved the conference report last week.

Otto Stettler, secretary of the Cabell County Tax Payers Association, today said its officers were considering an appeal of the tax decision to the Federal courts, declaring the body would be amply able to finance such a move.

Safer Flying Methods Urged

Gen. Mitchell Declares Accident Record Is Too High.

Richmond, Feb. 13 (AP).—Terming their accident record "entirely too high," former Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, of Middleburg, today said he favored compulsory installation of more safety devices by commercial air lines.

The former assistant chief of the Army Air Service said he was heartily in accord with President Roosevelt's action in taking the air mail out of the hands of commercial concerns.

Cabin parachutes, devices for steering through fog and automatic defrosters were among the additional safety devices which Gen. Mitchell recommended for installation in commercial air liners.

Although expressing satisfaction with the President's action in instructing Army fliers to carry the mail, Gen. Mitchell said he considered the move a temporary arrangement.

"Sooner or later," he said, "there should be a reorganization of the commercial companies and they should be given back the mail, if they come up to the requirements."

Church Observes 80th Anniversary

Founder's Son Tells of Old Mountain Hardships.

New Market, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Members of Mount Zion Lutheran Church, in Timber Ridge section 4 miles west of here, last night celebrated the eightieth anniversary of the establishment of their congregation. The guest speaker was Elon O. Henkel, son of the late Rev. Dr. Socrates Henkel, who founded the congregation in 1854. The Rev. Edward T. Bollinger is present pastor.

Gathering his data from an old journal kept by his father, Mr. Henkel threw much light on the early history of the congregation prior to the building of Mount Zion Church in 1872. He painted a vivid picture of the trials and hardships undergone by those pioneers.

The first preaching in Timber Ridge section of which there is record was on August 21, 1853. Services were held by the Rev. Dr. Henkel in a grove adjoining the old Kipps schoolhouse.

Rites in Martinsville For Thomas Barbour

Martinsville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Funeral services were held yesterday for Thomas N. Barbour, retired merchant. The Rev. P. M. Hank, of the First Methodist Church, was in charge. Burial was in Oakwood Cemetery.

Risky Sleep

Man Taken During "Nap" in Another's Garage.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). What he describes as "a little nap" may cost J. W. Stutler, of Union Heights, a stay in the State penitentiary.

Police found Stutler sleeping in a garage operated by William Iaquinto. Officers said a window was broken and half a dozen empty beer bottles lay nearby.

Iaquinto swore out a warrant against Stutler, charging him with breaking and entering, and with stealing the beer. Conviction may mean a term in the penitentiary. Stutler said he was cold and merely sought a place to sleep.

Youth Benefits From Next Fair At Winchester

Winchester, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). The Winchester Fair, October 9 to 12, will be devoted largely to offering boy and girl members of demonstration clubs or vocational agriculture classes an opportunity to display their wares.

This was indicated in a letter from C. B. Ralston, Staunton, secretary-treasurer of the Virginia Association of Fairs.

"The paramount features will be group exhibits from 4-H clubs, vocational agricultural work and the exhibition of new methods of agricultural endeavors," Mr. Ralston declared in explaining the aims of the newly organized fair.

Mr. Ralston refused to state who was sponsoring the new Winchester Fair. He said, however, the backers were prominent citizens who also would operate the fair. Within the next six weeks, however, he expects to reveal the names.

The old Winchester Fair, operated for half a century, was thrown into receivership several years ago. The properties were subsequently sold under the hammer, the Farmers & Merchants National Bank and Trust Co., Winchester, buying the 22-acre fair tract. Mr. Ralston said the new organization has no intention of using the old grounds unless the bank will lease this property at a reasonable figure. Two other sites are available near Winchester, he declared.

3 Jailed at Norfolk On CWA Riot Charge

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 13 (AP).—Three men were arrested today by Norfolk police and charged with attempting to incite Civil Works Administration employes to riot. A police emergency wagon in answering the riot call hit a fire plug in attempting to avoid collision with an automobile, but no one was injured.

Officers said that a discharged CWA worker returned and was joined by several others in demanding that he be reemployed.

Washington County Grand Jury Chosen

Judge Stresses Secrecy at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). The February term of the Circuit Court for Washington County opened here yesterday. John A. Miller, of Keedysville, was named foreman of the grand jury. Judge Frank G. Wagaman, in his charge to the grand jury, emphasized the necessity for secrecy.

Rev. Henry Kloman Resigns Pastorate

Cumberland Rector Saw Service in War.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). The Rev. Henry F. Kloman, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church for almost eight years, has offered his resignation effective "any time this year."

Mr. Kloman said he had no plans for the future. Previously Mr. Kloman held a pastorate at Salisbury, Md., and for seven years before coming to Maryland, he was dean of the Episcopal Cathedral, at Fargo, N. Dak. Before that he was rector of St. Stephens, at Portland, Me. He is graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary.

Mr. Kloman served during the World War as a chaplain at Chateau Thierry and the Argonne. He became post chaplain of General Headquarters at Chaumont, and is now major in the Reserve Chaplain Corps. He has completed nearly 40 years in the ministry.

Board Refuses 4-Year School In Bladensburg

Senior High Petition Meets Protest of Expense by County Head.

The Prince Georges County Board of Education yesterday turned a deaf ear to a delegation of 50 persons who asked establishment of a senior high school at Bladensburg.

Nicholas. Orem, county school superintendent declared the board can not approve such a project while county elementary schools so greatly need assistance.

He said Prince Georges County now has 13 more senior high schools than any other county in the State. This, he said, would hinder final approval from the State Board of Education.

The delegation, headed by Robert W. McCullough, attorney, presented a petition said to contain 600 signatures. The delegation contained representatives from the Bladensburg, Lanham and Riverdale districts.

McCullough declared that children who graduate from the Bladensburg Junior High School are forced to go many miles to a high school. Mount Rainier High School has been selected to serve this district.

The citizens asked that a third year be added the Bladensburg School next year and an additional grade the following year, making it, in two years, a four-year high school. The cost, they said, of adding the two grades would be about $150. The school board, however, declared the cost would be several thousand dollars.

Other speakers for the delegation included John White, attorney; P. J. Newmaker, secretary of the Bladensburg Parent-Teacher Association; W. R. Beattie, John R. Riggles, Mrs. W. F. Batch and A. R. Lee.

Teachers Ask Hall to Speak

State Superintendent May Address Meetings at Bristol.

Bristol, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of education, has been invited to address the 2,000 teachers expected here March 30 and 31 for the Districts I and K meeting of the Virginia Education Association.

The invitation was extended by W. L. Allen, of Marion, president of District I. Dr Hamilton W. Mabie, president of Rollins College, also has been invited.

Others who may appear on the program are Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the House of Delegates finance committee, and President Lucy Mason Holt of the Virginia Education Association.

Teachers who are assisting in preparing the programs are C. J. M. Kyle, Tazewell; J. L. Walthall, Lebanon; Miss Sudie E. Cowden, Clinchco; Miss Mary Lou Mason, Meadowview; Miss Effie Bagwell, supervisor, Smyth County; John B. Roller, Coeburn; W. D. Bradberry, Pennington Gap, and Miss Mattie Richmond, Scott County.

Teacher Is Named FERA Director

Susan Dickinson Appointed in Spotsylvania.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The appointment of Miss Susan Dickinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Dickinson, as Federal emergency relief director for Spotsylvania County was confirmed yesterday by the Spotsylvania Board of Supervisors.

FERA headquarters are temporarily established in the home of T. B. Dickinson, 2 miles east of Spotsylvania Courthouse, pending construction of a permanent office as an addition to the courthouse by means of civil works funds.

Miss Dickinson, before her acceptance of the FERA post a teacher in the Marye public school, is being initiated into her new duties by Miss Ann Saunders, FERA field representative, who is establishing bureaus in Northern Virginia counties. Miss Dickinson has had previous experience in relief work.

Heavy Damage To Peach Buds By Cold Noted

Up to Nine-tenths Ruined in Panhandle Within Recent Days.

Martinsburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Heavy damage has been done to the peach bud crop in this section by the acute cold of the past week. Damage estimates made at this early stage indcate killing from two-thirds to nine-tenths of the buds.

Bud-killing and freezing out the peach crop are two entirely different things, it is pointed out. Veteran growers note that a tree heavily set with buds will produce something like a crop with nine-tenths of the buds killed, provided the one remaining bud in ten comes through safely into good fruit.

Reports from nearby Pennsylvania indicate a kill of from two-thirds to three-fourths. Reports from Orozet, Va., section point to an injury not quite so severe. New Jersey, heavy peach producing section that is competitive with this section, reports almost a total kill in central and northern portions of the State, with serious bud injury in the southern part. Nothing definite has been heard here from Georgia.

Growers here assume on present evidence that the peach crop will be greatly shortened from any possible bumper crop, but they do not assume that the crop will be an entire failure.

Apple buds also have been injured, but not seriously enough to affect the crop, it is believed.

Elks Entertain Ruler.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). On a swing through the Nation making visitations to Elk organizations, Walter F. Meier, Seattle, National Exalted Ruler of the Lodge, paid an hour's visit to Annapolis Lodge today and was entertained in the Elks Home.

Court Halts Foreclosure Sale Of Famous 'Scottish Castle'

Jefferson County Show Place Once Brilliant Social Center.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Foreclosure on one of Jefferson County's most famous show places was halted today when Circuit Court Judge D. H. Rogers issued an injunction restraining the sale of the Scottish Castle of Bolivar Heights.

Erected in the early eighties, on the site of Gen. James' historic surrender, the castle stands as an imposing memento of past social and artistic brilliance. It was built by Col. Whitman, of the United States Army, and later acquired by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hallam, after being temporarily held by Judge L. W. Vail, of Washington.

It was under the Hallams' regime that the castle was completed and beautified and became the scene of outstanding social programs. Changing the name from Greystone to Scottish Castle, the Hallams carried out the unfinished plans of Col. Whitman and incorporated many of their own.

Walls throughout the building are decorated with paintings. The drawing room depicts the seasons of the year and the elements, while walls in the library and other rooms represent the muses and scenes of rustic beauty.

Among the famous regular guests were President Grover Cleveland and the Count Rospopoff, of Russia. The territory nearby was the annual encampment site for the Columbia District Guards.

The original owner was a lover of horses, and the hillside home is so constructed that the ground floor forms the stables. Above this level is the main floor and reception rooms. Bedrooms comprise the third story, while on the top floor is a billiard and card room.

Following the death of Mr. Hallam, Mrs. Hallam remained in Florida and has not lived in the castle for several years.

Class Play Planned.

CWA Student Aid Assured on Share

Washington College Offers Help for 25.

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.). Washington College will cooperate with the Civil Works Administration in providing funds for over 400 students in Maryland, who must discontinue their college education at once unless aided financially, President Gilbert W. Mead said following a conference of college and university heads of the State.

The local college will provide for 25 men and women students. Estimates range from 65 for Johns Hopkins to 6 for the University of Baltimore. From $10 to $20 a month will be given per student by the CWA and the colleges will provide jobs for them.

Either new work or an extension of present work may be assigned the students, it was said by Harry Greenstein, CWA administrator for Maryland. Washington College, President Mead said, will seek to aid Eastern Shore students.

Dr. G. B. Young, Retired Health Officer, Is Dead

Prominent Physician, 73, Noted for Clean-Up in Chicago.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb 13 (Spl.). Dr. George Bright Young, 73, prominent surgeon in the United States Public Health Service for a quarter of a century, died at his home here today.

Born at New Orleans, Dr. Young was educated at private schools and the University of Virginia, receiving his degree in medicine at the University of Maryland in 1887. He was commissioned an assistant surgeon with the United Public Health Service in 1890, and in 1905 was named a surgeon. Until his retirement in 1924 he held a number of important places.

Notable among his achievements was the "cleaning up" of Chicago during his four years as city commissioner of health between 1911 and 1915. His efficient handling of the work brought him into National prominence.

He served as medical adviser to the Fifth Naval District during the World War and afterwards was named surgeon in charge of the United States Marine Hospital at Stapleton, N. Y.

Upon retirement, he moved to Charlottesville, and for seven years was joint health officer of the city, county and university.

He married Miss Ellen Miles Marshall, daughter of Col. James M. Marshall, of West Point. She survives together with two sons, George B. Young, jr., of Florida, and Marshall Young, of Birmingham, Ala., and two daughters, Mrs. Harrison Echols, of New Orleans and Miss Catherine F. Young, this city.

County Farm Debt Group Is Formed

Prototypes For Mr. Hopkins.

Perhaps Americans will come to regard the spending vagaries of the reckless monarchs of the past with more charity, now that we have the happy thought of labeling their monumental extravagances as carefully-planned schemes for the provision of employment. A National Geographic Society bulletin refers to the Palace of Versailles as a "Public Works Administration" project of the age of Louis XIV. That casual reference at once calls up a vision of a paternal king designing work for 30,000 men for several years. The thought of the populace sunk in misery, groaning under taxes, and growing ripe for revolution is replaced by this picture of a benevolent sovereign engaged in a great social experiment.

Following this line of argument, the American tourist may eventually come to gaze with additional admiration at the Pyramids of Egypt. We had never before regarded them as a public works undertaking, but why not? So, in a sense, was the program of that other King of France, who, with 20,000 men, "marched up a hill and then marched down again."

For truly skillful planning, however, all these must yield to the forgotten emperor who constructed the Great Wall of China. Under the taskmaster's lash a million men are said to have died in its building, thus providing employment and preventing future unemployment in a single self-liquidating project.

It Must Be Good.

Two interesting comments on "The New Dealers" have just come in from the same neighborhood, though presumably not from intimate friends.

Why has The Post "sold out" to the Administration in this serial, demands the other.

Such uniform unpopularity, we must conclude, is the highest possible tribute to the skill with which our "Unofficial Observer" holds this mirror before the dance of contemporary politics.

An Instructive Sidelight.

Reginald McKenna, formerly Chancellor of the Exchequer and now chairman of the Midland Bank of Great Britain, is one of the most unwavering and persuasive of managed-currency advocates. He seldom loses an opportunity to assert that Britain's abandonment of the gold standard, combined with easy money policies, has been one of the chief aids to economic recovery in that country. In a recent address he reiterated these views and also made passing reference to the American monetary experiment. His remarks are especially interesting because they were in no sense hostile, but merely an attempt to explain why the task of managing a currency with no fixed gold value is so much more difficult for us than for the British.

"President Roosevelt," said Mr. McKenna, "has to battle against difficulties which our authorities are happily spared. He is called upon to bring about a business recovery at the same time that he undertakes great social reforms which elsewhere have taken generations to achieve. He is required to do so largely through the instrumentality of an unresponsive banking system, and in face of the problems created by inveterate habits of speculation and occasional proneness to panic and hoarding. The position has no parallel in this country."

Mr. McKenna's position is well taken, because a monetary experiment launched in connection with a complicated recovery program is much more likely to get out of control than one conducted in a setting where economic institutions and social mechanisms are relatively stable. It is also true that the British banking system lends itself more readily to a control of credit policy than does that of the United States, with its 48 different State systems, its National system and its superimposed Federal Reserve system.

In commenting upon the effect of suspension of the gold standard upon the position of a central bank, Mr. McKenna's observations are likewise illuminating. He says, for instance, that with abandonment of the gold standard the principal limitation upon the Bank of England's freedom of action was removed. In other words, it is conceded that the gold standard operates automatically as a control mechanism, despite its admitted imperfections. Consequently, with that control eliminated, it became necessary to place some check upon the Bank of England. According to Mr. McKenna, "obviously the government alone could have the necessary power and authority to instruct the bank."

Although no contrast is suggested, it is evident that political control of banking policy under a managed-currency system is more hazardous and more difficult in the United States than in Great Britain. Our untrained and shifting bureaucracy, our emphasis upon political appointments, our tendency to substitute statutory regulations for administrative discretion, and above all our decentralized banking system all make monetary and credit control exceptionally hard to achieve. Unintentionally, the chairman of the Midland Bank has revealed both the immensity of the task that confronts us and the inadequacy of our administrative preparation for such effort.

Austria Boils Over.

With each new telegram, during the past two days, the horror of the calamity in Austria grows more clear. It is no mere unorganized street fighting which rages in the streets of Vienna and the less cities. Here is no parallel of the recent rioting in Paris. Two strongly organized groups, the Socialists predominant in the towns, the Dollfuss dictatorship paramount in the agricultural sections, are literally at death grips for mastery of the little republic.

And hinging on this struggle, there is no exaggeration in saying, is the future of democracy versus dictatorship, with all thereby implied, in Europe. With the applause of the world in his ears, "Millimetternich" Dollfuss has been making an admirable fight against the invasion of Fascism, either Italian or German. Why he should have suddenly abandoned this fight in favor of civil war is beyond explanation at the moment.

Three elements have been warring for control of the country: The Socialists, controlling Vienna and strong in other cities; the Heimwehr, under Prince Starhemberg, advocating Fascism along Italian lines, with a strength of 15 or 20 per cent of the population; and the Nazis, with an undetermined strength, but believed to be as numerous as the Socialists. The latter have not liked Dollfuss but have supported him because he was fighting dictatorship, which quickly liquidates Socialism. The Heimwehr has been supporting Dollfuss, but demanding that he declare Fascism and liquidate the Socialists. He has been walking a tightrope between them, taking support from both and from his Catholic peasant party. His hand has been strengthened by the threat of what might be the consequence, from the outside, of an upheaval in Austria. The natural casualness of the Austrian people has been an ally.

The present trouble had its immediate inception last week, when Dollfuss, for some unaccountable reason, went to Hungary and left the country in charge of Maj. Emil Fey, vice chancellor and vice leader of the Heimwehr. Maj. Fey, regarded as a possible dictator of the future, is in supreme command of the police and the troops. Dollfuss' departure was timed, whether by purpose or coincidence, with the fall of the government of the Left in France, to which he had made promises that he would not disturb the Socialists. No sooner was he out of the country than Maj. Fey discovered a great "Socialist plot" to overthrow the government. Raids were made, not by regular policemen or soldiers, but by Heimwehr troopers, giving the Socialists great provocation. That was doubtless the purpose. Of course munitions were found on Socialist premises; all parties in Austria possess them.

At any rate, the raids set off the present trouble. Fey told troops in a speech last Sunday that Dollfuss is a Heimwehr man and that the time had come to clean up the Socialists. That is the purpose behind the immediate movement. If it is successful, as it appears it will be, the Heimwehr will doubtless take over the government for a time, perhaps with Fey as dictator. But few expect Heimwehr control to last. The Fascist dictatorship of the Heimwehr might be only the Kerensky government of Austria. If events follow their natural course—that is, if there is no intervention from the outside—it may be expected that within a few months, the country will plump to the Nazis and that Anschluss will be a fait accompli. That depends, of course, upon whether France and her Allies intervene.

The present role of the Nazis is to lie low and wait. If they attempted to seize power, they would have to wipe out the Socialists. It is better, they reason, for the Heimwehr to wear themselves out doing that. Moreover, if the Nazis jumped into the present situation, it would give France provocation to say that Germany had intervened. It is therefore wise tactics for the Nazis to wait until the Heimwehr is established in control and then, by penetration, take over the government as it did in Germany after the alliance with the Nationalists of Hugenberg.

Alliance with Germany is natural and perhaps inevitable in the long run. The underlying factor is the economic situation, which goes from bad to worse. Few comprehend the real poverty of the Austrians. Vienna alone had 1,000 suicides and 3,000 attempts at self-destruction last year. Austria must import twice what she sells abroad. The people are in desperate straits and are willing to turn to anybody who promises them relief. Hitler has done that, by the plausible method of telling his fellow countrymen that only by union with Germany can they be something more than pawns in the game of European diplomacy.

A Difficult Selection.

A search has begun in the District for the individual who during the last year has done most to promote the cause of law enforcement. Citizens have about 15 days to submit the names of candidates for this honor. The Washingtonian finally selected will be awarded the law enforcement medal of the American Flag Association.

This newly created annual award is a contribution by the flag association to a truly patriotic cause. Its purpose is to confer honor and distinction upon men and women who are leading the fight against crime. Awards will be made in every State as well as in the District. Executive officials, prosecutors, detectives, attorneys and other citizens who are taking an active part in anti-crime movements are eligible for nomination.

F. Regis Noel, president of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, is chairman of the jury that will present this award to the Washingtonian selected for the honor. Other members of the jury are Leo A. Rover, former United States Attorney for the District, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police. Mr. Noel has invited citizens to submit the names of local candidates to the headquarters of the award jury in the Transportation Building.

Law enforcement in Washington is maintained on a level for which we all have cause to be grateful. Numerous candidates for the award may be expected, and the jury will doubtles find it a difficult and somewhat invidious task to single out any one individual for this distinction.

Cavalier Treatment.

Col. Lindbergh's telegram to President Roosevelt protesting the cancellation of air mail contracts deserves no such cavalier treatment as it has been accorded in Washington.

Admittedly, it was unfortunate that a message from an individual should have been given out by his attorney before it was received at the White House; that may even be construed as lacking in courtesy. But this breach of etiquette did not justify the House of Representatives yesterday in refusing to allow the message to be incorporated in the Congressional Record, or the imputation by Secretary Early at the White House that Col. Lindbergh was merely seeking publicity.

Such imputation is utterly without substantiation and, if there were discourtesy in the colonel's method, it has been more than matched. No man in the country has desired publicity less or has been so sedulous in his effort to avoid it. Newspapermen and cameramen are anathema to him, not only because publicity is against his nature but because it symbolizes a great tragedy in his life. The charge that he courts self-advertisement comes with particular illgrace from a source which itself so assiduously employs all the media of high-pressured salesmanship.

After all, Col. Lindbergh has an unquestioned right to protest as strongly as he pleases. He has a singleness of devotion to aviation and is genuinely concerned about its future. It would do much more honor to the Administration if its leaders accepted his right to protest with good grace and did not undertake, apparently, to distort and shade the meaning. Such tactics indicate that the Administration is unduly anxious to bolster a course which already has aroused mistrust among many with no personal interest in the development of civil aviation in this country.

Art For Propaganda's Sake.

Revolutionary artistic circles profess to be outraged because somebody who directs the affairs of Rockefeller Center, that group of monumental buildings in midtown New York, has had Diego Rivera's controversial mural erased from one of the walls.

Last May Mr. Rockefeller told Rivera to stop his work when it was discovered that Rivera had painted in the head of Lenin, demi-god of revolution. It was charged that the artist had done so without including the head in a sketch he submitted. Anyway, Rivera served an ultimatum that he would make no change and that either his work stayed or he didn't. Mr. Rockefeller paid him to the full amount of his contract and Rivera walked out. To show how he felt about it, he went up to Columbia and made a hot speech on capitalism to a student assembly.

Since then the mural has been under burlap and thousands of persons have walked by without even suspecting the social dynamite beneath. Saturday night workmen with pick-axes took down mural, plaster and all, and put back a new, bare, plaster wall without any sort of covering. Structural changes, it was said, necessitated the removal.

Rivera, however, cables from Mexico City that "the Rockefellers have committed an act of cultural vandalism" and that justice should prevent the "assassination of human creation." The New Workers' School, a Communist institution, is at least equally irate. Even so mild and philosophical a crusader as Lincoln Steffens is moved by the incident to say that "Capitalism can't take it."

Perhaps capitalism isn't able to take it, but a man who has accepted as much as Mr. Rockefeller is reported to have taken with his Radio City venture, should at least be able to determine whether or not a head of Lenin belongs on one of his walls. After all, art isn't yet so sacred that it should be imposed, willy nilly, upon those who find it distasteful. Let Mr. Rivera try to deify a capitalist spokesman on the walls of the Kremlin and his faith in the inviolability of artistic conception will probably be even further shaken.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

A Veteran's Viewpoint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Replying to your article of January 28, captioned "Economy Act Repeal Urged by Veterans," in which reference is made to Harry H. Semmes, of Maryland, representing a so-called "American Veterans Association:" Mr. Semmes stated that his association objected to any change of the economy act, but gives no reason why. We veterans of the United States wish to have him and his backers tell us who he is and what his so-called association represents.

To enlighten Mr. Semmes I beg to say that this economy act is unconstitutional and the most unjust and inhuman act ever forced on the United States, since it now has caused wholesale poverty of vast numbers of the honor veterans families and the losses of their homes, their insurance policies, their furniture, while many are near starvation.

As to the worthy facts of this letter, and bearing on this subject I will state further that the writer hereof is a two-wars veteran, and was overseas in the World War nearly a year and is a National and State delegate of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the town of Irvington, N. J. I traveled the whole of the United States on a 9,000-mile tour, en route three months, and carried the message of "Cheer and Good Will" of Gov. Roosevelt of New York during the summer and fall of 1932, lecturing to vast numbers of Veterans Posts for the election of the solid Democratic party, by cause of the shooting of the Bonus Army in D. C.

We are able to prove that the Democratic party's election was secured absolutely by the veterans, with my own vast efforts.

Elevator Etiquette.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A newcomer in Washington, I have been a bit puzzled by the insistence of many male elevator riders in business buildings on removing their hats in the presence of female passengers.

I think I have the solution. Washington is filled with hay-shakers, who until now have had very little to do with buildings over two stories high with marble and granite trimmings. The only thing back home of comparable elegance and dignity was the church and the mental association causes them to remove their hats.

I would like to ask any literate hat taker-off-in-elevators to answer me in this column these questions:

If you take off your hat to a lady in an elevator, which is vertical transportation, why don't you do it in a street car, which is horizontal transportation?

Why do you fail to remove your hat when the only female occupant of the elevator cab is the operator?

I am tired of having derbies crushed because of extravagant and misguided politeness.

From the NRA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I take this opportunity to express to you my sincere appreciation for the enthusiastic and energetic support which The Washington Post has given me for the last six months in carrying out my duties of directing information and compliance for the NRA in the District of Columbia. This splendid cooperation on the part of The Washington Post has materially aided in the progress and accomplishments of the NRA in the District of Columbia.

I am deeply grateful for the support The Washington Post has rendered me.

Agreeeing With Unemployed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very favorably impressed by what was said in a letter in your paper of February 3, signed "Unemployed." I could not help but think how much truth there was in it. Especially in the sentence that said, "If the dissatisfied would place their trust and faith in our peerless leader, and consent to leave all to him, there is no doubt but what it would make bigger men and women of them." We are so fortunate at such a time to have a man in the White House so well qualified and so able a man, of whom all good thinking and worthy people can well feel proud—and above all things a Christian gentleman of the highest type, a man of Heaven-born charity, of loving disposition and Christian character. No wonder he has the united support of all the people, regardless of party or politics. Not to admire him would be an admission of a blind soul.

I have been wondering through these winter days, when so many worthy people are out of employment, why all the departments, as I understand the Government Printing Office and Post Office Department did, have not been required to enforce the act of Congress providing for the laying off by either husband or wife when both are employed by the Government, thereby giving work to a family where no one was employed. This Government does not belong to any group, but is the Government of all the people. Government positions are always in demand. Then why is it not right to divide, and thereby be of benefit to a greater number of people? I am told that there are hundreds of cases where husband and wife are drawing large salaries and have no children. I have also been advised by members of Congress and Senators that many of them do not oppose this. In nine of the departments the furlough system is still practiced, and if this law were enforced and the 30-year retirement bill passed, there would be no necessity for furlough, and no real hardships to any one. Personally, I have never believed that it was a wise move by the Government to reduce the salaries of those under $2,000, but I believe every employe of the Government, as well as others, should be willing to yield to whatever action the President or the Congress may see fit to take, without a murmur.

EMPLOYED.
Washington, Feb. 3.

Replying to Mr. Jones.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I submit a little animated answer to Mr. E. C. Jones' letter of February 2? Mr. Jones seems to think the Government is some unseen "octopus" corporation that has schemed to take 40 per cent profit on all gold from the people. The Government consists of the legislators we, the people, elect to legislate for our good, and the few billion dollars, profit and more has been spent for honorable relief to those who sorely need it. When the holes are fixed in the income tax laws to prevent the wealthy from pouring their incomes through to their wives, relatives or friends, to evade their just responsibility to the Government and when laws are passed to prevent the bulls and bears of Wall street from fleecing the lambs (the people), then, though they may squeal and "strange as it seems," the hogs will be goats and the hungry and needy can sing in truth "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"

Accentuated Accents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of February 6, headed "A Jolly Ideah!" is a bit of a shock to one who over a period of years has admired the truth and accuracy of your newspaper.

Representative Britten is absolutely correct in stating that those members of the "diplomatic service" who affect a certain accent (generally known as the Oxford accent) should be brought home forthwith. The Oxford accent is most obnoxious to the great majority of the English people.

Sir John Reith of the British Broadcasting Corporation, allows speakers with this accent on the air only on rare and exceptional occasions. The heads of the two great British film companies, John Maxwell of British International Pictures Ltd., and Isadore Ostrer of Gaumont British Pictures Ltd., have banned this accent from the studios. Before these bans, London newspapers printed frequent accounts describing how the Oxford accents of political and radio speakers and of movie stars and actresses got the bird from their audiences.

London newspapers have frequently praised the radio speeches of King George and President Roosevelt as the highest types of spoken English. Indirectly, however, Representative Britten has opened up a much more important subject regarding the kind of men we should have today in our diplomatic service, especially in England.

Representatives of England are always for England, first, last and all the time. The English despise and suspect Americans who ape English manners and speech. Real Englishmen like the way Representative Britten speaks and they know where he stands. Therefore, they respect him even when they disagree with him, which is not as often as might be supposed.

Street Railway Service.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to enter a protest as to the lack of service on the part of the street railway. I use the cars every day and find that lately it is almost impossible to get a seat, and, in fact, standing room, although I leave Fifteenth and H streets northwest around 3 p. m. This morning between 7 and 7:30, with the mercury at zero, our cook was unable to get a car at Eighteenth and U streets until after three heavily loaded cars had passed. She got the fourth car and then had another long wait for the bus at the Bureau of Standards.

A few evenings ago I waited in vain to get a car around 5 p. m. on Seventeenth street northwest and had to hail a passing cab. Surely, conditions are worse than before the consolidation. Can't something be done to give proper service?

The Starling War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reading of the various accounts of battles fought in the Starling War have been very amusing, and the one in this morning's issue of The Post caps the climax, especially, as it is illustrated, showing the brave officers of the law doing their duty, who, no doubt, would much prefer working along their regular line of duty.

'Tis true, the starlings are a pest, but many of the plans tried have been childish.

Having spent many years in the Southwest, and knowing of the splendid work performed by the Biological Survey, through its Predatory Animal Division, I suggest through your valuable paper, that the general in charge of this war against the starlings communicate with the above said survey.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

IF for nothing more than that I enjoy good arguments I should like very much to see the Lindbergh controversy carried on. To my mind it is one of the most dramatic phases of the revolution. The turning under of the cotton and pigs, the seizure of the gold, the cracking down on the vested interests, the redistribution of wealth, the throwing of the Morgans and Rockefellers into the streets and putting us in their homes—all of these were trifles, in my opinion, to the clash of two heroes, Mr. Roosevelt and the colonel.

BARGERON.

Make no mistake about it, this is what it was. The Democrats are trying their best to crowd the front pages to drown the incident out, or every time the Republicans raise their voices about it, of trying to out-shout them. The Austrians are helping the Democrats.

It may not have registered so deeply out in the country where people have other thing to do rather than politics but the plain truth is that nothing has caused more palpitations of the political heart here.

It had long been recognized here that Lindbergh was the aviation interests' ace card. Had not things been forced as they were by the cancellation of the air-mail contracts it is my understanding that the air-mail operators had intended at the conclusion of the hearings to bring him down and let him give a long story about how aviation had developed in this country since his memorable flight to Paris. This, they thought, would take the curse off the testimony that had gone before. As things developed, they had to throw him into the breach immediately.

• • • •

There is a question, though, of whether the White House's clever handling of his telegram protesting the cancelation of the contracts has not checkmated them. In fact, Steve Early, of the White House secretariat, is being looked upon in all quarters hereabouts, where the value of propaganda and counter-propaganda is known, as having done a most excellent job.

His professed surprise that Lindbergh should make the telegram public before it reached the President was bunk, of course, but as a counter-propaganda stroke it was most effective, as was the intimation that Lindbergh did not write the telegram himself. From this the Democrats generally are taking their cue. In their carefully guarded statements they profess to believe that the hero is being taking advantage of by the air-mail malefactors.

It is an interesting game of wits, that's why I should like to see it carried on. Of course, Lindbergh is acting on the advice of older aviation heads. His telegram was probably written by his attorney. Can there be any serious doubt in anyone's mind that his chief value to the aviation industry since his Paris flight has been his prestige, the popular interest he developed in aviation by his flight in the first instance, and his periodical flights since? He is aviation's dramatizer and was dramatizing when the telegram was sent in his name.

But what of it? His contribution can not be minimized, and I doubt that even the revolutionists would say he is overpaid. However, they might.

As a dramatizer, though, he is up against it this time. He is up against some very capable dramatizers. For the present the Administration plan is to try to dissociate him from the operators. If that doesn't succeed in quieting things they are, I am satisfied, prepared to smear him. When heroes clash there is usually some fun.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Year 1809

The year 1809 produced more men of genius than any other year since Adam and Eve left the garden of Eden. It is, of course, impossible to assign any reason for this; it just happened.

Charles Darwin and Abraham Lincoln were twins; they were both born on February 12, 1809. They will both be remembered as long as there are human beings left on the earth.

Edgar Allan Poe, one of the great poets of the world, was born in 1809.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in 1809, and though he was not so great a genius as Poe, he resembled Poe in attaining almost equal eminence in both poetry and prose.

W. E. Gladstone, the famous English statesman, was born in 1809, entered Parliament in 1833, and thanks to the splendid British system, which enables the best men to stay in public life, he remained in the House of Commons without a break for exactly 60 years.

Mendelssohn, the great music composer, was born in 1809; and among many other famous compositions, he will be remembered for one piece by all women who had a wedding day.

Gogol, the distinguished Russian novelist, was born in 1809, and his two novels Taras Bulba and Dead Souls are immortal works. He was also the author of the best comedy in the Russian language, Revizor.

Alfred Tennyson was born in the summer of 1809, in a tiny village in Lincolnshire.

Until comparatively recently, it was supposed that two other persons of genius were born in 1809, but it has been discovered that Chopin was really born in 1810 and Elizabeth Barrett Browning in 1806.

Fireside Gardening.

It's hardly the time, in the midst of this blustery weather, to take triangular hoe and three-pronged rake into the garden. You might not even be able to find the place under the snowdrifts. But, unlike armchair traveling, which may be relished in any of the 12 months, the open season for fireside gardening now begins, and you can sit in peace and comfort for a month or two planning what to do with the early smooth peas and the petunias this year.

Possibly you are one of those strong souls who are quite satisfied with the way the backyard flower garden looked last year, and who have no intention of doing anything new about it. In that case, Messrs. H. Stuart Ortloff's and Henry B. Raymore's little book, "New Gardens for Old" (Doubleday Doran, $2), is not for you. But if your sleep is beginning to be troubled with the memory that your hardy asters have been crowding out your marguerite carnations, that your linden tree has sent up so many roots to the topsoil that the grass there is starving to death, or that your red cedar shrub isn't doing so well by the windy corner of the house, then here is your complete "vade mecum."

The two authors, landscape architects, tell you how to make the most of the garden plan you have—what to do about trees, freshening up your foundation planting, reshaping borders, and adding new flowers. If the fundamental lay-out doesn't please you, they tell you how to begin from scratch with professional thoughtfulness. Axial lines, levels of land, types of soil and exposure are all considered, and the suggestions are flexible enough to fit your own situation. Invaluable are the lists of conifers and shrubs for planting in the various climatic zones, arranged according to growth, sun and soil. Flowers are listed for an old-fashioned garden, one predominantly blue, one with continuous color, and one of annuals. A chapter treats of lawns, and another of the care and maintenance of the whole garden.

The book is simply written and well illustrated. If you can read it without an intense itch to do over the grounds of your home entirely, then fate should commit you to the insulated life of an apartment-dweller. If you are already the latter, you can make your garden on paper out of dreams. That, at least, involves no back-aches.

* * * *

Once in a while the above book seemed to take for granted a knowledge most of us haven't got. Here is another volume to fill the gaps. L. H. Bailey, a learned and prolific writer on gardening, gives us a straightforward reference work on the growing of flowers, fruits and vegetables in "Gardener's Handbook" (MacMillan, $3.).

The topics are arranged alphabetically, from abutilon ("commendable flowering shrubs of the mallow family") to zinnias, with hundreds of varieties of plants in between, and way-stops at soils, lawns, hedges, vegetable gardens, and even an aquarium. For each variety of plant Mr. Bailey gives popular name, botanical name, characteristics and specific advice on cultivation. There is no nonsense about the book. But if you want to learn quickly what perennials have white blossoms, or which kinds of eggplant are best, or how to grow water lilies, Mr. Bailey will tell you briefly and with authority. It is a grand book to keep handy on a shelf even after the fireside gardening season is over and the work begins.

Murder a La Economist and Diplomat.

To one class of readers G. D. H. Cole, instructor in economics at Oxford, is known as the author of such excellent treatises as "The Intelligent Man's Guide to World Chaos" and "The Intelligent Man's Review of Europe Today." To another (and yet I am not sure but that it is the same class), he is the author, with his wife Margaret, of such lively mysteries as "Burglars in Bucks" and "Corpse in Canonicals." The rewards of such versatility are thoroughly deserved.

"End of an Ancient Mariner" (Crime Club—Doubleday Doran, $2) is the latest Cole mystery involving Superintendent Wilson of Scotland Yard. It tells the story of Philip Blakeway, peaceful and secure with his rich wife until an old sea captain rises out of his past. Blakeway murdered the ancient mariner, and the excitement of the book comes from Wilson's efforts to pin the crime on Blakeway and Blakeway's wriggling to escape.

As mysteries go nowadays, it is a quiet and sedate book. But Mr. and Mrs. Cole have written it so well that there is no need for a corpse in every chapter. I think you will find that a relief.

"Slow Death at Geneva" (Coward-McCann, $3), by "Diplomat," resembles an Oppenheim thriller of international intrigue. Moxley Cadwallader, envoy at large to the "World Political Conference at Geneva," is poisoned before he can bring to a head a great political coup. Amid an array of diplomats, spies, correspondents and hangers-on at this thinly disguised League of Nations conference, a tense trail of action is laid. There are poison potions, shots in the dark, a murderous telephone. Little has been left out of this highly colored yarn. If your taste runs to a fantasia on the contemporary international scene, you will enjoy it.

Although he still uses the nom de plume of "Diplomat," it is well-known that the author is J. Franklin Carter, late of the State Department and commentator in Vanity Fair, under the name "Jay Franklin," on political topics.

300 Attend Club Dinner.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—About 300 persons, including a number of clergymen from surrounding towns, attended the annual ladies' night meeting and dinner of the Men's Club of the Lutheran Church, the Rev. Dr. Amos John Traver, pastor, last night. The new president, Martin L. Bowers, will enter upon his duties next month.

Little Rock's leading lawyer and citizen. Came to Congress in 1902. Within a period of two months, in 1912, he was a member of the House, elected Governor of Arkansas and appointed to the Senate. Al Smith's running mate in 1928. Sturdy, leather-lunged, pugnacious and formerly fistic, he has grown steadily in political stature and Senate esteem. Goes in for golf and duck hunting, once shot an alleged record bag of grouse in Scotland. Has fished for tarpon and the muddy Arkansas River's catfish. Succeeded the late Oscar Underwood as Democratic leader of the Senate in 1922. Has been in on all important party pow-wows since. Woodrow Wilson once said of him, "He is the real moral and intellectual leader of the Democrats in Congress."

Shoes Sent Children Over U. S. By Baltimore Philanthropist

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Adequate footwear will be sent every mother, in any part of the Nation, who has written to ask shoes and stockings for her suffering children from the second annual Maryland state-wide donation of Raymond A. Sinskey, Baltimore philanthropist, it was announced here today by W. Raymond Moody, chairman of Maryland district distribution.

Distribution will begin on Washington's birthday, and approximately 50,000 pairs of shoes will be distributed in Baltimore and Maryland's 23 counties through police, welfare workers, city and county officials. Health and Red Cross executives and workers also will help in the distribution, it was announced. Meanwhile, hundreds of letters from mothers in every State will be answered with shoes and stockings.

Publicity given last year's donation is believed to have prompted letters received by the Baltimore financier this winter from outside the State. Only apparently authenic requests from mothers will be answered outside of Maryland.

Distribution is designed to aid needy school children whose educations are being retarded because of lack of proper footwear. Similar donations are being made by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The shoes are being ordered from a New York manufacturer, and will be shipped to Baltimore, and distributed from there.

Doctors Dine At Convention

Tri-State Association Past Presidents Hear Present Chief.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Seven former presidents of the Tri-State Medical Association gathered at dinner here tonight during the associations annual convention for an address by Dr. F. B. Johnson, of Charleston, S. C., present president.

The dinner was attended by Dr. H. J. Crowell and Dr. John Peter Munroe, both of Charlotte; Dr. Beverley R. Tucker, Dr. W. Lowndes Peple, Dr. James K. Hall, all of Richmond, and Dr. J. H. McIntosh, of Columbia, S. C.

A tumor clinic was conducted in the Medical Building this afternoon by members of the staff of the University Hospital tonight. Dr. Gabriel Tucker, of Philadelphia, spoke.

Dr. Matt O. Burke, of Richmond, discussed treatment of influenza, suggesting avoidance of fatigue and correction of any tendency to acidosis as valuable in prevention.

Papers were read by Dr. H. H. Wescott, Roanoke; Dr. L. A. Crowell, jr., of Lincolnton, N. C.; Dr. J. A. Lyon, of Washington; Dr. Frank S. Johns, of Richmond; Dr. David T. Smith, of Durham, N. C., and Dr. J. A. Norton, of Conway, S. C.

Richards Raps $10 Auto Tags

Delegate Charges Plan Forces Poor Owner Off Roads.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Threatened imposition of a $10 minimum automobile license fee was criticized today by Delegate Paul C. Richards, jr., Warrenton, as an "attempt to discriminate against the poor man."

Richards sponsored a successful amendment to fix the lowest tag charge at $8 when the House passed a bill of Delegate William D. Medley, Clarendon, for reduction of from 70 to 40 cents per 100 pounds in the license plate rate.

Several senators predicted the upper House would restore the original $10 minimum.

"The small car owner," he explained, "formerly paid $12.25 for his license. If the minimum is fixed at $10 he won't get the 40 per cent reduction that will go to the man with enough money to operate a heavy automobile."

Richards stressed the view that an $8 minimum would encourage wider use of small machines and substantially increase income from gasoline taxes, used in road construction and maintenance. He predicted that this would be true in Fauquier and other rural counties particularly.

"Over 50 per cent of the cars in my county," he added, "were idle until July 1 last year because their owners could not afford to buy licenses."

Maryland Catholics Will Hold Tercentennial Fete on May 30

Baltimore, Feb. 13 (AP).—Terming the Archdiocese of Baltimore the "the cradle of American Catholicity," a proclamation issued by Archbishop Michael J. Curley set May 30 as the date for a celebration here in commemoration of the tercentennial of the founding of Maryland and the centennial of the birth of Cardinal Gibbons.

"I am personally desirous that this event be the most colorful, edifying and orderly religious demonstration ever held in the Archhdiocese of Baltimore," said the Archbishop.

The Rev. Peter Guilday, D. D., of the Catholic University at Washington, a noted historian and writer of the biographies of several great churchmen, will deliver the sermon of the day.

The ceremonies, which will be held in the Baltimore Stadium, will consist of a "Mammoth and colorful" parade, followed by a pontifical military mass. The archbishop expects more than 100,000 to attend, including many prominent men.

The proclamation also said:

"I am asking the fullest cooperation from every priest, every religious and lay man, in the Archdiocese of Baltimore, that this may be a spiritual demonstration of the part Catholics of Maryland have played, and are playing, in the glorious growth of the Catholic Church in America."

Ickes Wants Supreme Court Oil Code Test

Sees "Serious Situation" in Adverse Rulings on Texas Cases.

Recognizing what he termed "a very serious situation," Secretary Ickes yesterday moved to throw into the United States Supreme Court two Texas "hot oil" decisions interpreted here as the most serious Constitutional challenge to the National recovery act and the petroleum code yet to arise.

Handed down by three Federal judges in two cases, the decisions involve action of the Government against the Amazon Refining Co. and the Panama Refining Co. of Texas. The Panama case decision, entered by Judge Randolph Bryant, of the East Texas District, held the petroleum code and its NRA counterpart, section 9-C of the recovery act, to be unconstitutional.

Ickes, the oil administrator, said he considered the two cases as clear-cut tests of the constutionality of the hotly contested petroleum code and its source in the recovery act, section 9-C, and that he was taking steps to get the decision into the Supreme Court for a final test.

"Serious Situation."

Asked what effect the decisions will have on the finely balanced and complicated oil charter, the Secretary replied with considerable vigor: "It will raise hell with it. It makes a very serious situation."

Ickes disclosed that he had dispatched J. Howard Marshall, National Oil Board attorney, to Texas by plane to seek criminal indictments charging "hot oil" violations in the face of adverse rulings simply to get the matter into the Supreme Court. Late yesterday, it was reported that five indictments had been returned in east Texas in accordance with Ickes' plan.

Section 9-C of the recovery act specifically gives the President authority to regulate and control interstate movement of crude oil and to bring before the Interstate Commerce Commission actions to set rates for pipeline transportation. President Roosevelt delegated the authority to Ickes, appointed oil administrator.

Set Production Figure.

When the long-debated petroleum code was framed, its powers of regulation were founded on Section 9-C, put into the recovery act at the insistence of oilmen. Under the code and the section, Ickes promulgated each month the amount of crude oil to be produced by all States.

The allocation was applied to Texas by the Texas Railroad Commission, and amounts for each field, pool and well was designated. Oil produced in excess of these quotas was termed "hot," and violators of the allotments were prosecuted under the State law.

The Amazon company, faced with "hot oil" actions, asked an injunction against the Texas Railroad Commission and the Oil Administration, holding the commission, the Administration, the code and Section 9-C to be unconstitutional. A three-judge statutory court, which includes Judge Bryant, upheld validity of the commission's orders and section 9-C, but refused rulings on the other points, Judge Bryant dissenting in a 2-to-1 decision.

Injunctions Granted.

The Panama company then sued in Judge Bryant's District Court making the same charges, which were upheld by Judge Bryant, who ruled the Petroleum Code and the disputed section unconstitutional. He then granted injunctions to the company forbidding the the Oil Administration to institute "hot oil" action against the firm.

Recognizing the threat to the far-reaching Petroleum Code, Ickes instructed Marshall to seek indictments in East Texas on the identical grounds which Judge Bryant overruled. This, it was pointed out, will provide the means of getting directly into the Supreme Court, should the indictments be quashed.

Asked what the Government could do if the higher court upheld the lower, Ickes remarked: "Congress is still in session."

Officials pointed out that the situation involves more than mere defeat in "hot oil" prosecutions. Should the code and its source in the recovery act be found invalid, a large part of the foundations of NRA and other codes will have been swept away, they contended.

Boys' Strategy Board To Aid Danville Fair

Danville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The Danville Fair Association has elected 28 honorary vice presidents, all of them boys from rural high schools in this district.

The boys will be asked to suggest ways and means of modernizing the fair and to provide features that will appeal to young people.

Martinsburg Teacher Enters Civil Service

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Miss Lida D'Aiuto, for several years an instructor in English at the high school here, has resigned to become a clerk in the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

Miss Catherine Byrer, an alumna of the high school and a graduate of Randolph-Macon Women's College at Lynchburg, Va., will succeed Miss D'Aiuto.

World Peace Orators Listed for Conference

Dover, Del., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Advocates of international peace have been invited to address the fourth annual youth conference of the Delmarva Peninsula in Wesley Methodist Church here, February 23, to 25. "Youth and World Peace" will be the theme. Prof. James J. Bishop, director of Christian education of the Wilmington Methodist Conference, will direct the sessions. Speakers will include: Dr. Alvin C. Goddard, Harry N. Holmes, Nevin Sayre, Edward H. Brewster and Edwin C. Johnson.

Norris Rises As Fulfillment Of TVA Miracle

Tennessee Wastes Turned to Thriving Sector Over Night.

Editor's note: Following is the second in a series of dispatches on the Tennessee Valley program, detailing the building of Norris, model city and architects' dream.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Norris, Tenn., Feb. 13 (U.P.).—This is a city which reflects tangibly the ideals behind President Roosevelt's Tennessee River development program.

It has no counterpart for beauty and sheer livability. Not even the wealthy suburbs on the gold coasts of New York and Chicago can offer the advantages which the humblest householder of Norris takes as a matter of course.

Two months ago Norris was a rugged plateau between the Buffalo Creek and the Clinch River Valley. It contained a few mountaineers' shacks, some cut-over timber—and many trainloads of limestone bowlders.

Today Norris is a scientifically planned city of winding streets and parkways. The shacks have given way to homes which bring smiles to architect and housewife alike. The bowlders are being pulverized and strewn on the ground as fertilizer.

500 Houses Planned.

About 500 houses will be built. Some 200 already are in process of construction. Most of the workers on the Norris dam are housed in substantially built dormitories.

When the dam is completed some 2½ years hence, the dormitories will be converted into the furniture factories, the spinning mills and the china plants which are intended to make the villagers self-supporting.

About 15,000 pounds of maple tree seeds are being set out in CCC and CWA workers are putting in flag-stone walks, curving roads and lawns. A community center for church, movie and town hall use is nearly completed. A modern cafeteria is operated by college women.

Life, of course, centers around Norris dam, named like the city, in honor of Senator George W. Norris, the Nebraskan, whose dream of an integrated modern life along the Tennessee River a decade ago finally is coming true.

The cofferdam has been finished. The main dam soon will rise to the height of a 20-story building between two mountain peaks on each side of the valley. It will form a lake of 83 square miles in the valleys of the Clinch and Powell Rivers. Shore line of the lake will be nearly 900 miles long. The shore line of Lake Michigan is little more than 1,000 miles.

Work at the dam continues 22 hours a day. The other 2 hours are used for servicing electric shovels, drills and trucks. The highlanders labor in four shifts of a little more than 5 hours each. They use their spare time in developing their farms.

Supplies Lacking.

The TVA experienced great difficulty in obtaining the carloads of nails and the trainloads of lumber necessary to build the cofferdam and the houses in Norris. Depression-ridden mills and factories simply didn't have supplies enough in stock.

Material now is arriving in quantities, however, so that Earle S. Draper, director of land planning and housing for the TVA, hopes to have the city of Norris virtually completed within another six months.

Florida Booms Again.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 13.—The 50-cent dollar is okay with Florida. It is getting enough of them to show a profit after a long spell of deficits on the 100-cent type.

Miami and Miami Beach are having such a boom that even the Florida real estate salesman has ceased hibernating in the Everglades, dusted off his business suit and is talking "binders" again.

Hotels are packed with people who have either stopped worrying or decided that the future of American money is so uncertain that they might as well let the other fellow have it.

Miami Harbor is so full of de luxe yachts that even the Democrats regard it as a little embarrassing.

There is one 200-footer beside the Clyde Beatty with four motor lifeboats as big as the average cruiser. And the Forgotten Man would have another sinking spell if he could see the fleet of private yachts in Biscayne Bay.

Even the fishing boat skippers who had to eat their own bait last year are making reservations in advance and cutting the bait thick enough for a sailfish to see again.

The New Deal is working in the cracker belt and Miami is drawing aces.

Prosperity down here is reflected on all sides. Mr. Widener has added about 50 pink flamingoes to his Hialeah flamingo flock, and the boys at the track have so much ready money they will bet you which one will lay an egg first.

The attendant at the $50 mutuels window now sees a human face at close range frequently, the $10 window boys are swamped and the ladies and gentlemen who were glad to be seen in the $2 line for the last several seasons now wear smoked glasses and false whiskers when they are that thrifty.

Down at the Miami Beach dog racing track business is so good they have put in a streamline mechanical rabbit with knee action.

The beaches are so crowded that after using sunburn oil diligently for 15 minutes you find you have been rubbing a neighbor's back, and the night clubs are back in the money to such an extent that when two burned down recently the owners complained.

And this region is so full of entertainment notables that there is talk of building a special causeway to the beach for orchestra leaders, saxophonists, torch singers, night club performers, swimming champions, masters of ceremonies and radio stars just to give other traffic a chance.

Business is so good it reminds Floridans and Northern investors of the Florida boom. That's the only drawback.

Get High in Your High Hat, Repeal Edict, Brings Hat Boom

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Back to their once esteemed level have come the high hat, the stiff shirt, the inverness cape and other items of formal male attire.

Repeal did it, say New York haberdashers.

Since drinking shifted from speakeasies to quiet cafes and modernistic cocktail terraces of smart hotels, it has been placed on a high sartorial basis.

The proprietor of a prominent Fifth avenue clothing establishment said today there has been something of a major boom in the sale of men's evening clothes since December.

"Business in our dress suit department has increased 40 per cent," he said. "Business is in fact, if I may use the vernacular, swell.

"Repeal did it. Drinking must be done at the right time, and in correct attire. It must be done with eclat. Evening dress, that's the thing."

The management of a large chain of haberdasheries added some vital statistics on the top hat.

"Whereas we sold one or two, maybe three top hats a year," the manager said, "we now sell a topper with virtually every full dress suit that goes out of the store."

Norfolk Will Furnish Ducks Drinking Water

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 13.—Assistant Director of Public Works A. B. Pleasants today ordered workmen at the City Lakes, Norfolk's reservoirs, to break ice there so wild ducks and other fowls can obtain drinking water. Hundreds of ducks were seen on the ice yesterday.

The Isaac Walton League has named a committee to obtain grain and other feed for wild game.

Thrush, cardinals, wrens and other birds are flocking into farm and city yards in search of food, H. B. Goodridge said. He advised all residents to put food in their yards for the starving birds.

Whooping Cough Kills 4th Child

Two Others in Family Ill; Father Recently Hurt.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Whooping cough today had claimed its fourth victim in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wagaman, of near New Baltimore, north of here.

Upton, one-year-old son, was the fourth of the family of nine to die of whooping cough in the last 20 days. Two other children are convalescing.

Two months ago the father fractured his collar-bone and several ribs in an accident at a sawmill where he was employed.

(Associated Press.)

Away from the friendly atmosphere of the Senate Agriculture Committee proposals for agricultural production control, as exemplified in the Bankhead cotton bill, got a cool reception on the House side yesterday with Secretary Wallace giving the measure only lukewarm support.

The Secretary made it plain to the House Agriculture Committee that he agreed to go along with the bill only because he was convinced that a great majority of Southern cotton growers desired some form of compulsion. In addition, he suggested a series of amendments and a further study which might result in a wide alteration of the measure.

Opposition Is Shown.

Wallace was questioned by committee members after he had concluded his prepared statement. The queries showed apparently that quite a few of the Representatives had little liking of the compulsory idea.

Chairman Jones did not express his attitude toward the Bankhead bill, but he suggested it might be possible to keep the present voluntary program through the use of a combination baleage and acreage plan.

The Bankhead bill would limit the amount of cotton marketed in the cotton year 1934-1935 through a tax of 75 per cent on the value of all cotton ginned in excess of 9,000,000 bales.

Hit by Witness.

The voluntary plan of the Farm Administration aims at reducing the cotton surplus by cutting the 1934 plantings to 25,000,000 acres. This campaign is in progress and is scheduled to end on February 15.

One witness, Oscar Johnston, Mississippi cotton planter now attached to the Farm Admiinstration, said he thought the Bankhead bill "unconstitutional and impractical."

"I think the voluntary plan will succeed," he said.

Dahlia Fanciers Plan Meetings

West Virginia Series Starts On April 5.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Because of outstanding success achieved by West Virginia dahlia growers in competition with others from all parts of the country, a series of regional meetings throughout the State has been arranged by the West Virginia Dahlia Society. They will be held as follows:

Grafton, April 5, with J. A. Keller, State president, in charge; Philippi, April 6, with Mrs. Benjamin M. Wilson in charge; Buckhannon, April 10, with Dr. C. E. Lauderback in charge; Parkersburg, April 12, with Dr. E. W. Crooks supervising; Fairmont, April 27, with Dr. A. B. Scott in charge, and Wheeling, April 18, with Dr. W. S. Webb in charge.

National honors were won by several West Virginia dahlia growers last season.

L. R. Waesche, Thurmont, Md., Builder, Dies

Mr. Waesche, a native of Carroll County, built the Monocacy Valley Railroad from Thurmont to Catoctin Furnace, which later became a part of the Hagerstown & Frederick Railway system.

He was one of the promoters of the Mechanicstown water works and in establishing an electric light system for the town. He was a charter member of Acacia Lodge, Masons, of which he was made a life member in 1921.

At the time of his death, he was president of his contracting firm and director in the Thurmont bank.

Surviving are eight children, George, Glenridge, N. J.; Donald, Teaneck, N. J.; Commander Russell Waesche, of the United States Coast Guard, Washington D. C.; Miss Mary Waesche, Philadelphia; Mrs. L. M. Heimaerman, Emmitsburg; Clinton, Daisy and Mrs. David Firor, all of Thurmont.

The funeral will be held Thursday, with services at the home conducted by the Rev. Charles H. Corbett. Interment will be in Blue Ridge Cemetery.

U. S. Helps Fruit Men in Maryland

97% of Loan Pleas Pass, Frederick Meeting Told.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Fruit diseases and their control and Federal financing of this year's fruit crop were discussed at a meeting of horticulturists of Frederick and Carroll Counties today.

The speakers were Dr. E. N. Cory, State entomologist; Dr. A. F. Vieheller, Dr. R. A. Jehle and J. W. Englar.

Mr. Englar said more than $100,000 has been sought for assisting orchardists in financing their crops in Maryland and that 97 per cent of the applications have been approved.

Webb Funeral Held.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Jack Webb, 40, former Marine of Doswell Field, were held today from the North End Chapel, followed by a military funeral in the National Cemetery conducted by the Bowen-Franklin-Knox Post, American Legion. His widow survives.

Dividend Checks Mailed.

Kitzmiller, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Checks for $70,000, first payment by the First National Bank of Kitzmiller, Garrett County, of 37½ per cent to depositors, have been received by John H. Bane, receiver, and will be mailed during the week. The dividend is made possible through a loan by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Radioactive

Danville Arrests Grow in New Call System.

Danville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Police records show a score of arrests made here over the week-end as a result of the new police radio system.

Chief of Police Martin himself was surprised at the effectiveness of the service. Yesterday he telephoned from his home for a car to call for him. He had hardly hung up the receiver when the siren blew at his door. A passing police car had received the broadcast half a block from his home.

One call was a matter of life and death. Percy Martin, Negro, was dying from a bullet wound and wanted to make a dying declaration. Two policemen answered the call and hastened to the hospital but Martin was already unconscious.

Thomas J. Hicks, 70, Paid Final Tribute

Winchester, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services were conducted here today for Thomas J. Hicks, 70, Frederick County farmer, who died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bayliss Sunday, by the Rev. J. D. Russell.

Surviving are five children, Mrs. Joseph Miller, Winchester; Mrs. J. H. Bott, Washington; Mrs. R. J. Maher and Miss Virginia Hicks, of New York City, and Elmer T. Hicks, Willard, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Belle Johnson, Winchester, and three brothers, Edward M. Hicks, Charles A. Hicks, Willard, Ohio, and F. L. Hicks, Bowling Green, Ohio.

Three Are Convicted On Disorderly Charge

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Three Negroes, alleged operators of a disorderly house, yesterday were given prison sentences ranging from four months to a year by Assistant Police Justice Lemuel W. Houston.

Clarence Daindrige was sentenced to 12 months, while William White, 27, and Rex Bundy, 22, were sentenced, respectively, to six and four months and fined $50 each.

Not Guilty Plea Entered In Border Patrol Death

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP).—Ralph S. Senterfit, charged with the killing of Daniel E. Romberger, Federal customs border patrolman, entered a plea of not guilty when charges of murder, resisting an officer and attempting to bribe an officer were read in United States District Court here today.

Romberger was killed in a fight while efforts were being made to unload a cargo of liquor at Dania Beach, north of here.

Oil Propsals Accepted.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Committees representing bondholders of Richfield Oil Co., Pan-American Petroleum Co., and unsecured creditors of the former, announced today that new reorganization proposals made by the Standard Oil Co. of California have been acepted.

Mrs. J. L. Jennings Rites at Danville

Tribute to Choir Leader Given at Church.

Danville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Helene Hall Jennings, 55, wife of Dr. J. L. Jennings, who died yesterday.

The Rev. N. E. Wicker conducted the rites at Epiphany Church, where Mrs. Jennings for many years was choir leader and soloist, and where her father, the Rev. J. Cleveland Hall, served as rector.

Mrs. Jennings, born in Jamestown, N. Y., came to Virginia in girlhood and to Danville in 1895. She was chaplain of the Eastern Star, a charter member of the Danville Art Club, the Wednesday Club and the Music Study Club.

She is survived by her husband, three sons, Leonard Jennings, jr., Cleveland Hall Jennings and James Wilson Jennings, all of Danville; a sister, Mrs. Theo. Parker, and a brother, Raymond Hall. Interment was in Green Hill Cemetery.

Art Prizes Given At Hagerstown

Maryland Sculptor Wins Second Honors.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Samuel F. Hershey, of Waynesboro, Pa., was awarded first prize in the second annual Cumberland Valley art exhibition held at the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts here. The winning exhibit was an oil painting, "The Auction."

Harold Hodges, of Hagerstown, with his sculpture, "Madonna," was awarded second prize. Honorable mention was awarded to "French Village," water color by Dan Nelson, of Greencastle, Pa.; "New England Wild Flowers," oil painting, by Mary E. Marshall, of Philadelphia, and "Hillside," oil painting, by Charles W. Coffman, of Waynesboro, Pa.

6,000 Pupils Get Diphtheria Check

Washington County Tests for Immunity Given.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The Washington County Medical Society, in cooperation with the health department, has started to check 6,000 school children who were given diphtheria immunization last November during the epidemic.

Of the 10,000 given the Schick test in the county, 6,000 were found to be susceptible, and of this number 5,688 were immunized. Usually about 5 per cent of those immunized are found still susceptible after a three-month period, and these again will be inoculated.

Since the campaign, there have been no cases of diphtheria in the schools here and only three cases outside the schools. All three had never been immunized.

Radio Waves and Ripples

BOBBY MARON, 26, is one member of the Casa Loma Orchestra you never hear about. Yet the band would have difficulty functioning without him.

His job is to see that the boys and their instruments arrive on time and in good condition. He's a combination porter and valet. He carts around the band's equipment and he attends to getting the boys' clothes out to the tailors every day or so.

For years, Bobby sold pop, peanuts and popcorn at Boston prizefights. He got his instrument-hauling experience later working as a truck driver for a couple of New England dance hall proprietors.

He joined the Casa Loma organization in 1931, and since then has traveled more than 90,000 miles.

Bobby (are we tiring you?) claims to have heard every dance band in America, and he still thinks, officially and privately, that Casa Loma is the best.

"The dance crowds used to go in for a lot of hokum," said Bobby. "You know—the trick drummers and prancin' orchestra leaders—but now they like to listen to good music. You know, I used to be like the old dance crowds—I went in for gymnastics, but not in dance halls. I went to fights for that."

Bobby admitted that he dances sometimes now, and that he can play a melody or two on the piano with one finger.

Starling Note:

The thing to do, of course, is to take the starlings philosophically. We've felt that all along, and now Radio Joe comes along with about the same idea. He intends to try to reconcile people to them in his Thursday night broadcast.

Our idea is that they should be accepted, like our summer heat, and then ignored. They've been getting too much attention lately. All this rattling of tin cans and shooting of guns is diverting them and wearing our nerves to a frazzle. Pretty soon they will begin to expect it. If we let them alone now they'd probably die of ennui.

Note of Joy:

We just found out that Alice Joy, who sings like a contralto, isn't one at all. She sings in a lower pitch, the tenor range.

As a matter of fact, Alice began her vocal career, we were told, as a soprano, and her sisters, who were also singers, wanted very much to make a dramatic soprano of her. But Alice had made up her mind it would be nicer to be a contralto. When her voice teacher insisted upon making her a soprano she stopped taking lessons. Hasn't taken one since.

Sad, isn't it, that after all that splendid determination she should turn out to be a tenor?

We haven't seen it, but we were told that they've roped off a place in the lobby in which Marvin meets the lady autograph seekers. The ropes, the management has found, do pretty well at saving most of the lobby fixtures.

Arthur Godfrey's Sun Dial program was put on WJSV from New York as promised yesterday morning.

In fact, it was a little more than we had counted on. WJSV kept the microphones open at this end to pick up the canaries and parrot at whatever they might be doing. We don't know what that was, but it seemed a little unrestrained.

Warren Sweeney carried on for Godfrey in the last half hour or so.

It's all right for Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone to carry on this way. They're married. Jack and Mary are Sunday night broadcasters for N. B. C.

$3,492,000 Bonds Sold by Maryland

Baltimore Syndicate Pays 105.833 for Issue.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The State Board of Public Works today sold a block of $3,492,000 4 per cent bonds authorized by the last Legislature. The First National Bank of Baltimore and nine associates took the loan at a bid of 105.833, which Gov. Ritchie and his associates on the board called gratifying.

The bid represents an interest rate of 3.22, said to be second highest in the history of State loans, being exceded only on a loan floated last August, when 3.24 was received.

Of this loan, $3,000,000 will provide for unemployment relief in Baltimore City, and the remainder will be used for State construction work.

Father of Eight, Suicide, Buried in Pennsylvania

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Grant Mitchell, 43, of Upper Strasburg, who was found dead with a bullet wound in his head. His son, William, 7, discovered the body. Coroner A. W. Thrush returned a verdict of suicide.

Mitchell had been despondent since the death of his wife recently, the coroner said. Eight small children survive. Recently, the father asked a fraternal organization to take care of the children.

Casualty Meeting Called.

Baltimore, Feb. 13 (AP).—A special meeting of stockholders of the Maryland Casualty Co. has been called for February 23. The stockholders will act on a proposal to amend the company's charter pertaining to a $7,500,000 preferred stock transaction with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and operation of the refunding mortgage program.

Cattle Raisers Plan Meetings

Holstein - Friesian Group to Hold Convention at Baltimore.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—J. Homer Remsberg, of near Middletown, president, has called a meeting of directors of the Maryland State Holstein-Friesian Association in Baltimore Saturday at which plans will be laid for the annual convention of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America in Baltimore, June 4, 5 and 6.

At the same time, the State association will be invited to hold its spring meeting in this city.

It will be the first time the American Association convention has been held in Maryland. About 125 delegates, representing every State in the Union, the District of Columbia and Canada, in addition to hundreds of owners and breeders of Holstein cattle, will attend.

The delegates will be taken on sightseeing trips, including Annapolis, Washington, D. C., and the Green Spring Valley. The annual banquet will be held Wednesday night. The sessions will be presided over by A. J. Glover, Atkinson, Wis., national president, with Houghton Seaverns, Brattleboro, Vt., secretary.

The national organization was formed 50 years ago and has a membership of approximately 32,000, of which 2,285 enrolled the past year.

Prince Georges Roads Taken Over by County

Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday ordered three roads taken over by the county roads system.

They included Eastern avenue, from Sligo Mill road to the corporation line of Takoma Park, Md.; Cockerville avenue, extending from Sligo Mill road for a distance of one-half mile; a road from Rock Branch road, near North Keys, Md., to the Brandywine-North Keys road.

A petition, carrying 50 signatures, asking the construction of 800 yards of road to connect the foot of Lohrs Hill, on the Leonardtown pike, to Branch avenue at the District line.

Girl of Cumberland To Wed Englishman

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 12 (Spl.).—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brennan announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss M. Madge Brennan, to C. Howard Newbold, of Long Eaton, Nottinghamshire, England. The wedding will take place in the summer.

Mr. Newbold, formerly with the Celanese Corporation of America here, is under several years' contract with British Celanese, Ltd., at its plant in Spondon, England. Miss Brennan is a native of England, having come to Cumberland when a little girl. She is a graduate of Ursuline Academy here.

U. S. Envoys Make Ready For Changes

Transfer of Mr. Wright to Czechoslovakia Awaits Approval.

Mr. Bullitt Will Sail Tomorrow as Envoy to Moscow.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Even now the new order of United States diplomats is not completed. Every few days the President announces the name of some new appointee, or the transfer of a chief of mission already in office to another post.

The nomination of Mr. J. Butler Wright as Minister to Czechoslovakia has been sent to the Senate by the President. Mr. Wright was a member of the delegation to the seventh Pan-American Conference held in Montevideo in 1930.

A career diplomat, Mr. Wright has served in many foreign posts, and before going to Montevideo served as Minister to Hungary. He is now Minister to Uruguay, and will succeed Mr. Francis White, recently resigned Minister to Czechoslovakia, and former Assistant Secretary of State.

Mr. Messersmith To Uruguay.

The post of Mr. Wright in Uruguay will be taken over by Mr. George Strausser Messersmith, another career diplomat who has recently come to this country from Germany, where he has been serving as Consul General at Berlin. Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith visited the Capital recently and will sail February 28 aboard the Manhattan for Germany, where the former will finish some work in Berlin before they go to their new post in Montevideo.

Tomorrow the United States Ambassador to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. William Bullitt, will sail aboard the Washington for his new post, to take up his duties officially as the first United States envoy to the U. S. S. R. With him will go members of the new staff including Mr. Loy Henderson, who has been at the State Department for the past year, and Mrs. Henderson, who will not go to Moscow immediately, but will stop in her native country, Latvia, to visit in Riga until the house of the attaches of the embassy is completed.

New Embassy Ready For Mr. Bullitt.

Mr. Dana A. Hodgedon, who also has been in Washington for the past few years attached to the State Department as chief of the visa division, and Mr. John Wiley also will be members of the party sailing tomorrow.

When the Ambassador reaches Moscow he will find the new embassy, which has been leased for two years, in readiness for his arrival. The building, a modern stucco residence, set in its own charming gardens, is about a mile from the center of the city, and looks out on a square which is dominated by a handsome church. The house was formerly used by the central executive committee of the Communist party, and boasts several large drawing rooms suitable for entertaining.

The new chancery will take up a temporary abode in a building in the center of the town, and after May 1 will be in a new building not yet completed which will be equipped with apartments for the members of the staff. It is situated between the National Hotel, where the members of the staff will live until the chancery is ready, and the Moscow University.

The Kremlin and the Soviet Foreign Office each will be about three blocks distant from the new chancery.

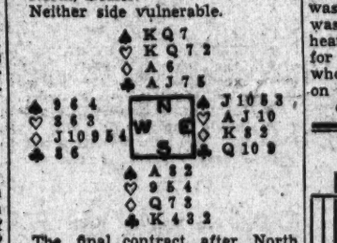
Third Hand Play.

It is often true that the defensive play of Third Hand is much more difficult than that of the player charged with the lead.

After all, even though there has been no bidding by the defending side, the bidding of the opponents in their march to game or Slam or the hand held by the leader himself will suggest the best Opening lead. Third Hand—that is, the defending player who plays after the Dummy and before the closed hand—frequently, however, is faced with very difficult decisions as to the line of play he should adopt—in other words, as to whether, if he can do so, he should win a trick or refuse it. It may be laid down as a safe general rule that any player, when winning a trick in Contract, should do so unless he has a reason which appears to him sound for refusing to do so.

On the hand below refusal to win a trick brought about the defeat of a contract that would otherwise have been made.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The final contract, after North had bid hearts and clubs, was three notrump played by South. West's opening lead was the diamond Knave, and the Declarer played the small diamond from the Dummy. Most players with East's hand would immediately play the King as the Queen is plainly marked in the South hand, but the East player in question went much more deeply into the situation than this one on superficial consideration. It was obvious to him from the cards in the Dummy and those in his own hand that West must be void of entry cards in any other suit but diamonds. If the Opening lead was from a six-card diamond suit, then failure to play the King would cost the defending side one trick, but if, on the other hand, the King was played and the suit from which the original lead was made was of but five cards, then West would be effectually stopped from cashing any more tricks in that suit. East's holding in itself was not sufficiently strong to defeat the contract of three notrump. It was strong in one respect, however, in that it had tricks, or potential tricks, in all the other suits. The vital thing, as East viewed the matter, was to establish the diamond suit in two leads. Hence, after taking into consideration all the possible distributions, he played a small diamond, and South won with the Queen. South then led a small heart to the King in Dummy, and East won with the Ace and returned the diamond King, clearing the diamond suit while he still retained a card to give his partner entry to his hand to cash the three remaining diamonds. Thus played, the contract was automatically defeated. South was held to two diamonds, one heart, three spades and two clubs for a total of eight tricks, due wholly to East's brilliant defense on the Opening lead.

Sympathetic Coiffeur Tells Truth on Needs

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Found at last—a hairdresser who views his clients through ordinary, human eyes. He sees them as they are, and then quick as a flash, sees them as they should be. But he admits that he has clients whose hair judgment he regards as impeccable.

"If a woman comes to me, and her coiffure suits her—why I tell her so. I wouldn't have her change it for the world!"

That should interest a great many women who fear to enter the portals of a hairdressing shop lest some ogre swoop down upon them, shears in one hand, curlers in the other. Not here!

This artist regards the coiffure as truly a woman's crowning glory, and though her hair be long, or short, straight or wavy, he's all for it—so long as it is becoming. And if it isn't, it can be and will be by the time his adept fingers have finished with it.

"It is my business," he told us, "to arrange a woman's hair to suit her personality, to accentuate it, in some cases. Is there a trick to such a trade?" He said emphatically not.

In his opinion the necessity for studying the face for hours is "hokum." He takes one look at a client, appraises and "depraises"—and then works by impression.

"There are, of course, technicalities," he admitted. "If a woman has a long face, it is necessary to arrange her hair to counteract longitudinal lines, to suggest width. I usually do this by parting the hair low to the side. Very often I give the hair a slanting part, even suggest confusion of line."

On the other hand, he told us, if the subject's face is short, he would often suggest waving and brushing the hair backward, to give length.

These are only generalities. As an artist in his line he naturally suits the coiffure to the individual, and in many cases to the professional needs of the person. A working woman who wants her hair neatly, trimly and becomingly arranged, will find his suggestions very helpful.

"I never recommend an elaborote coiffure to a woman who hasn't time to keep it that way. It might look well temporarily, but after that——" he shrugged.

But the lady of leisure is a different question. With her hairdress he allows his imagination to run riot. He curls, pins, tucks and rolls, if she is the type of person for such trimming.

Most women have two ways of wearing their hair, one for daytime, the other for evening. Here is a hairdresser who can and gladly will give expert advice for both occasions. There is no charge for a consultation with him. It will only take a few minutes, and his suggestions are sure to prove beneficial.

Real Russion Carnival.

There's going to be a carnival fete, a real Russian affair. There will be a wealth of color and original design in the variety of rich costumes. As for entertainment. it's going to be intensely interesting. There will be exciting songs rendered with the guitar, fantastic Russion ballet, fortune telling, and dancing.

This affair is "open." Anyone wishing to make further inquiries may call here and we'll refer them to the proper parties.

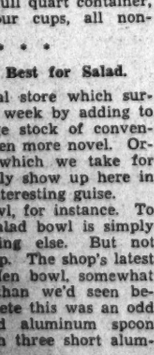
Cocktail Set Bargain.

Last week we stopped a long time admiring the plain chrome cocktail set featured in the gift department of an F street store. This week we admired it still more. The price had dropped from $7.50 to $4.95.



The girl in charge of the shop was perfectly honest about the sudden change. She explained that although the set was now selling at a losing cost, they hoped by this "come-on" to attract a lot of customers who might also be interested in other attractive items. At any rate, here's an honest to goodness bargain in a cocktail set.

Wood Bowl Best for Salad.

There's a local store which surprises us every week by adding to its already large stock of conveniences others even more novel. Ordinary things, which we take for granted, suddenly show up here in some kind of interesting guise.

The salad bowl, for instance. To most of us a salad bowl is simply that and nothing else. But not here in this shop. The shop's latest is a large wooden bowl, somewhat more shallow than we'd seen before. To complete this was an odd wooden handled aluminum spoon and a fork with three short aluminum prongs.

Here is a set which lends itself to the concoction of delicious salads. A great many foreign chefs say they would never dream of preparing a salad in any but a wooden bowl.

But there's another use which endears it to hostesses. They will find there are few more attractive platters or plates to serve from at a Dutch supper.

Women Have Reached High Places in Public Service, Anniversary of Brave Pioneer Suffragist Reminds

Susan B. Anthony, Scorned as Meddler, Was Born 114 Years Ago.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

"The cab drew up in front of the hotel and Miss Anthony and two other men alighted."

In this ironic manner did a metropolitan newspaper 40 years ago describe the arrival of Susan B. Anthony, pioneer suffragist, in a Western city.

Tomorrow the celebration of the 114th anniversary of Miss Anthony's birth finds women firmly established in the seats of the mighty. What a victory for that indomitable warrior! What a triumphant invasion of uncharted lands for those whose "place is in the home!"

Twenty-seven years have elapsed since the death of Miss Anthony. Fourteen have passed since her dream of woman suffrage became a reality. Her greatest regret was that she could not live to see women vote. An even greater tragedy was that she could not have known that her sex was finally to batter down the barriers to public office and even statesmanship.

Women in High Places.

The greatest fruition of Susan B. Anthony's dreams have come in the last two years. Today we have:

A first lady who has established the precedent that President's wives shall be active leaders as well as expert tea pourers.

A woman minister to a foreign country.

That august body of presidential advisers, the Cabinet, listening to the words of a woman Secretary of Labor.

We accept these women calmly as a part of our everyday life; yet there are women alive today who remember when Susan B. Anthony was an outcast because she dared to fight for woman's rights. There are women in Washington who suffered arrest because they demanded the unheard of privilege of voting in a national election.

How She Was Ostracized.

Dramatic and inspiring is the story of Susan Anthony's lone battle. For not only men but women fought her efforts to bring equal rights to women.

Women pulled their skirts aside when she passed, and declared that her "shameful behavior"—the horrible act of speaking at a teacher's convention!—caused them to be ashamed of their sex.

She was the target not only of rotten eggs, but of verbal abuse as well. At one time a hideous effigy of Miss Anthony was dragged through the streets of a Northern city. When she attempted to address meetings her voice was drowned in jeers and groans. She was arrested for voting in a State election and fined $100 for disturbing the peace. She was accused of being immoral because she advocated coeducation. She was pictured as a woman who desired to destroy the sanctity of the home. She was ridiculed, scorned and persecuted. Yet she never lost faith in her cause or admitted the possibility of defeat.

What She Was Like.

Miss Janet Richards, a Washington woman who knew Miss Anthony personally, describes her as charming and lovable.

"What was Miss Anthony like?" she repeated. "Why she was like Aunt Susan. In fact, that is the name by which some of her privileged admirers called her. She was a very womanly woman, gentle and sweet. She wore her hair parted in the middle and drawn back over her ears. She always wore a black silk dress and a little red wool shawl.

"There is one picture of her which always stays in my mind. It was at the birthday party given here for her at the old Belasco Theater on her 80th birthday. She sat in a chair on the stage, and a long line of children passed, each placing a red rose in her lap. She was the loveliest picture I ever saw as she sat there with her arms full of red roses."

Citadel Recently Taken.

When Miss Anthony died her battle was far from won. Only four States at that time had woman suffrage. But other dauntless women carried on her work. In 1917 women picketed the White House for days. They stood through snow, sleet and rain and even when they were at last arrested did not give up the battle. Today many women, proud that they suffered to attain their goal, wear the prison pin showing a prison gate.

Since that memorable date in the year 1920, woman's influence in Government, business and the professions has steadily broadened. The past year has seen amazing things accomplished. Today there is no door closed to a woman. The barriers are down, the road lies shining and fair before them. A little Quaker girl blazed a new trail.

Furs Find New Ways to Flatter Coats

Trim, Spirted Models Are Seen in Displays of Spring Fashions.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Feb. 13.—Everybody's on the watch for spring coats. Even when the weather's chilly enough to make them pull their heads down turtle-like inside high winter collars, you see women planted in front of shop windows taking in every new detail of new season fashions.

And this is what they're seeing: Trim, spirited coats so new they've never even heard of a depression! Silhouettes that follow lithe young figure lines . . . natural shoulders, fitted-in waists that are often belted, and straight skirts. Sleeves with the swell of their fullness coming at the elbows—where it's most needed, after all. And they see that many of the earliest coats are fur-trimmed.

Many Flat Furs Used.

The dare-to-be-different Schiaparelli streamline coat always flags attention. Its flat-furred revers stand straight up. Its new skirt fullness is pushed to the front. Even its front-placed pockets help to give it that forward motion, with sides flowing in straight, unbroken stream lines.

Dressy coats of wool crepe . . . such as the one sketched . . . have thought of entirely new ways to manipulate their sleek, flat furs. This coat shows how galyac may be rippled into revers as soft as if they were fabric. Its chin-up, straight collar surprisingly circles back into a yoke effect. A most feminine coat—and how Fashion does dote on feminine things this spring!

Some Swept-Back Lines.

Some coats persistently turn their backs to window shoppers. Not rudely, but with polite intent, to let you see their new monk's hoods, softly draped and edged with fur. Unbroken, streamline sides again, this time with a swept-back motion.

Of course, lots of the early fur-trimmed tweeds have already stepped out of the showcases to go traveling and jaunting about town. They wear flat furs such as baronduki tipping their scarfs or making entire scarfs. And they wear big fur shawls, especially the lovely long-haired blonde kind—and you can count on gentlemen to keep right on preferring 'em!

(Copyright, 1934.)

Spring coats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. Evans.

Parents have much to say, sometimes wisely and sometimes otherwise, about the misbehavior and the conduct problems of their children. Daily they chide and punish their children for their shortcomings. Perhaps children complain of their parents and their peculiarities and shortcomings, but they have no clubs to complain before and no one provides them with rostrums from which to speak.

It is strongly suspected that most of the problem children belong to problem parents, and come out of problem homes. Dr. Arthur Berk and associates of the Massachusetts department of mental diseases had the usual suspicions on this subject and they undertook to get at the facts by studying some 100 parents of problem children.

Some insanity and material departure from normal behavior is due to forms of mental disorder caused by definite organic brain pathology. Illustrations are: Paresis, syphillis of the brain, arteriosclerosis of the brain and others. But most of the social "misfitting" that causes people to land in asylums, jails or reformatories is the result of disorders of personality. Therefore, Dr. Berk and associates began their study of the responsibility of the home and the parents for the delinquencies of children by defining some of the terms used. There may not be unanimous agreement with all of these definitions, but they are much better than those most of us have and, in this study, they are especially valuable because they tell us what the investigators meant by certain terms and statements. We quote these definitions somewhat briefed, but essentially as given:

Personality is a combination of physical inheritance, intelligence, mental content, and emotional reactions. We add that we are apt to like or dislike a person because of his physical appearance, his manner, his mental makeup, his emotional reactions, and his behavior generally. This combination largely determines whether or not he fits in and, if he does not, the type of problem he is.

Normal personality embraces good intellectual endowment, self-criticism, good insight, and adequate adaptability to the environment.

The extravert personalities are the happy-go-lucky people. The introverts are those who are introspective.

A situational neurosis signifies that pressure of external factors have been great enough to affect the personality of the subject temporarily, but with the removal of these pressures one expects to see the personality revert to its former self. Children with problems that grow out of a very bad home can be expected to become about normal after being in good surroundings for a while.

What Today Means

"Aquarius"

If February 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 1:25 to 2:25 p. m. and from 6 to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m.

If you were born on February 14, it is advisable not to allow yourself to become supercilious. An arrogant person has few friends. Everyone should have a certain amount of pride, but an overabundance is just as bad as not having sufficient. One never knows when they will have to ask a favor of a person they have "high hatted," and nothing is more humiliating. It is a good rule to always conduct yourself toward others, as you would expect them to act. Assumed haughtiness is dangerously like a gas-filled balloon, it takes mighty little to cause it to deflate.

The woman born on February 14 may find tactfulness, next to diplomacy, is one of the most essential arts to be proficient in, and well worth while cultivating. There is hardly a day that one does not have to resort to adroitness to smooth over what threatens to be annoying situations. If February 14 is your birthday, you are a music lover, and should improve your knowledge by attending the opera, whenever possible, and musicales. Music proves not only a pleasure, but a great solace in times of tribulation or sorrow. Fortunately you shall only have to depend on it for entertainment.

Successful people born on February 14:

Samuel Osgood, statesman.

James Thacher, physician and author.

William Coleman, journalist.

James Appleton, "The Father of Prohibition."

Christopher L. Sholes, editor and inventor.

Winfield S. Hancock, brigadier general.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter, British Home Secretary, is kidnaped by a masked band, placed upon a gallows and told he will be hanged unless he spares Cecil Brandt, doomed to be executed the next morning for murder. A messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is at Rossiter's London home with fresh evidence. He is released, hears her story and agrees to grant a reprieve. He collapses in a faint as he is about to telephone Wandsworth Prison. Revived, he learns of Brandt's execution.

Mrs. Brandt vanishes on her way to have dinner with Sir Humphrey. Scotland Yard detectives find him missing when they answer a summons to his home. Young Detective Pank goes to Norwich and learns the astonishing fact that Lord Edward Keynsham, from whose home Sir Humphrey was returning the night of his abduction by the masked band, had directed the kidnaping.

With startling unexpectedness Sir Humphrey returns home, telling his household servants and the Prime Minister he was at a hospital. Even Scotland Yard's chief can not make him tell more.

"Let me remind you, general," Sir Humphrey pronounced, "that you jump to conclusions when you state definitely that I was decoyed away. I acted that night, and I am acting now, as I think fit and best in my own interests and the interests of others, and I repeat to you what I have told Col. Matterson—for the immediate present I have nothing official to say."

"You will permit me to remark—even if it involves handing in my resignation—that I find your attitude preposterous," Gen. Moore declared.

"Such a remark does not involve your resignation for one single moment" was the suave reply. "I agree with you entirely. The situation is preposterous, but there, you see, I am in a preposterous situation. I claim the right to use my own judgment in my struggle to escape from it alive."

The chief commissioner responded quickly to the more friendly note in Rossiter's tone. He was nevertheless, very sad.

"You are notoriously a man of common sense, Sir Humphrey," he acknowledged. "The position you have taken up is utterly incomprehensible, but no one, of course, can compel you to speak. I hope you will admit that I am only doing my duty in protesting."

Only Doing Duty.

"Certainly I admit it, general. I should feel just the same if I were you. Let me tell you this, if it makes you feel any more at ease—I may be keeping details back from you, but what the mischief this whole business means, in which I have become an unwilling participator, I can assure you that I don't know. I am more mystified than any man ever was in this world. It is because I fear to do the wrong thing that, until I get a ray of light, I am keeping silent."

"But silence means inaction," the chief commissioner protested.

"And action might mean stirring up a hornets' nest," Rossiter rejoined. "One has to temporize sometimes to attain the best results."

"But don't you feel that you are in any danger?" the Chief Commissioner persisted.

"Possibly," was the equable reply. "Fate deals out a certain amount of danger into the lives of every one of us. This particular risk which I am running now I am going to run for a short time longer.

The general rose to his feet.

"I have nothing more to say," he decided. "I daresay you realize that you have already the Cabinet Minister's dole."

"What do you mean?"

Police Protection.

"You are under police protection so far as we can afford it. There are detectives in this building, one guarding your house and one will be on the outside of your car or following it in a taxi when you leave here."

"Have I asked for this sort of thing?" Sir Humphrey demanded.

"A request from you was not necessary," was the dogged answer. "We have ourselves and our reputation to protect. Any one who has been threatened as you have is guarded as a matter of course. If anything were to happen to you the first people to be blamed would be Scotland Yard."

"I'm glad you have told me of this," Sir Humphrey said, "because it gives me an opportunity to speak plainly. You will be so good as to withdraw these men."

"I'm sorry," the Chief Commissioner objected. "They are there in accordance with custom, and the necessity for their presence has already been proved."

"No misunderstanding about this, please," Rossiter insisted. "The three men are to be withdrawn. I won't have my house watched. If any one wants to pay me a visit as friend or enemy I want the road to be open. Neither will I be watched here or in the streets. If any one wants particularly to assassinate me, a detective hanging around won't improve my chances."

"These are your orders, sir?"

"My definite orders. I will not be guarded. Especially I will not have the avenue to and from my house blocked."

"Meaning that you actually want to get in touch with the criminals?" the Chief Commissioner suggested shrewdly.

Shrugs His Shoulders.

Sir Humphrey shrugged his shoulders. For a moment he seemed at a loss.

"That is my business," he answered.

There was a brief silence. There were a great many things which the Chief Commissioner was longing to say, but he was beginning to realize their hopelessness.

"Would you mind putting your orders in writing, Sir Humphrey?" he begged.

The Home Secretary adjusted his eyeglass and scribbled a few lines which he handed over.

"That will let you out officially," he observed, "if I am removed bodily again or transported to another sphere. Good morning, General. My first day back in harness and a busy one. Interviews are all curtailed. Forgive me."

He rang the bell. The Chief Commissioner folded the paper he had received, and took his leave. Outside he tore it into small pieces which he dropped into the muddy street out of his taxicab window.

"How are we getting on, Carthew?" Sir Humphrey asked his secretary an hour or so later.

"We have cleared up everything important, sir, when you've signed one or two more letters," was the cheerful reply. "It's 4 o'clock now. No need for you to be down at the house until half-past 7 or 8. I have ordered the car round. I thought you might like to rest at home for a short time. I can come along in case there is anything there."

"Sounds All Right."

"That sounds all right," the Home Secretary agreed. "Bring the letters at once and we'll get along."

Tea and buttered toast in the warm luxury of his study, a pipe of fragrant tobacco and a very comfortable chair. Sir Humphrey relaxed gratefully and shook out the Times. The wind was blowing outside but there was little to be heard through the closely drawn curtains. It was the most peaceful hour of the day. Carthew came in from his own room with some papers in his hand.

"Glad to see you looking so comfortably drowsy, sir," he observed. "Do you good to take a nap. I'm afraid you will have to say a few words tonight about that Maryford affair. Simple business, though. I have all the notes here. There's nothing else to trouble you about except one caller."

"A man I think you will have to see, sir. Mr. Debenham, of the firm of Debenham, Twiss & Debenham. Excellent firm of lawyers in the West End. He had been asking to see you personally every day for a fortnight."

"A firm of repute, you say?"

"Without a doubt, sir. Mr. Debenham, the one who is calling to see you, was in the House for some time—member for Wolverhampton. Lost his seat at the last election."

"I remember," Sir Humphrey murmured. "Yes, he must be all right. I will have a word with him when he calls. Meanwhile, take the telephone over to your room and leave me undisturbed."

The period of quiescence was brief, however. It was less than a quarter of an hour afterward when Carthew reappeared ushering in the expected visitor. Mr. Debenham, as a West End solicitor and representative of an old-established firm, conformed to type in every respect. He was fashionably but quietly dressed, pleasant, well-mannered and well-spoken.

Lawyer Is Apologetic.

"Terribly sorry to disturb you, Sir Humphrey," he apologized, as he accepted the chair to which the latter motioned him. "It really is in a way, though, an urgent affair. It has to do with the estate of that poor fellow, Cecil Brandt, who was hanged."

"Good gracious!" Rossiter exclaimed. "How am I interested?"

"Well, curiously enough," the other announced, "you appear to be one of his executors."

Sir Humphrey frowned. This was a contingency which had never occurred to him.

"Brandt should not have done that without asking my permission," he muttered. "I'm not at all sure, Mr. Debenham, that I shall feel inclined to accept office."

"That course is quite open to you, sir," was the courteous reply. "In your official position you would naturally have every excuse for refusing. I must tell you that Mr. Brandt's affairs are largely in the hands of a New York firm of lawyers for whom we in this country act only as agents. They asked us to see you to ascertain whether you would be content to serve, and also to put one or two questions to you."

"Mrs. Brandt is a very old friend of mine, as she was of my wife's," Sir Humphrey reflected. "Who is the other executor?"

"Only Mrs. Brandt."

Matters Simplified.

"Humph! That simplifies matters. What questions were you to ask me?"

"Well, they appear to be based upon the supposition that you were intimate enough with Brandt to know something of his affairs. The estate in New York is of considerable dimensions, but there seems to be an idea on the part of the lawyers that Mr. Brandt also possessed a large fortune over here."

"I know no more about his affairs than the man in the moon," Sir Humphrey declared. "He always had the reputation of being wealthy and he has certainly spent large sums at times—the theater, for instance, which he gave to his wife."

"Our correspondents speak," Mr. Debenham confided, "of a large quantity of bonds or similar securities deposited on this side. They have no idea where they are, and his bank, although they hold a considerable balance, know nothing of any securities. I naturally called first upon Mrs. Brandt, but unfortunately she was away."

"I see," Sir Humphrey meditated. "Well, so far as information about poor Brandt's estate goes I'm afraid I am useless to you. I was on no sort of terms of intimacy with him. It was his wife entirely who was our friend."

Teach your daughter how to guard her health

"Caroline used to ache all over. She had cramps and severe headache and backache and would stay in bed most of the day. Your Tablets helped all this."—Mrs. Frank Quinn, 914 West 19th St., Erie, Pennsylvania.

Mother . . . You Must Do Your Part

Most girls need a tonic and regulator when they come to womanhood. If your daughter is languid, nervous and cranky . . . if she complains of new pains and aches . . . see that she takes Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly. When she is a happy, healthy wife and mother she will thank you.

"My daughter Leona is a stenographer and switchboard operator. She was nervous and weak and often had to stay home from work. Never cared to go anywhere, lost her appetite and always had headaches. Your Compound helped her wonderfully. She is more peppy and can work now every day".—Mrs. B. Trommer, 2320 W. Juneau Ave., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Used by women for more than 60 years

Belgian Writer Finds Charm Secret of Roosevelt Success

Mme. Royon Has No Kind Word for American Hats for Women, However.

MME. ANDREI V. ROYON.

He will pull America and eventually the world out of the present crisis.

But our women wear simply atrocious hats.

Mme. Andrei V. Royon, Belgian journalist, has garnered these and many other kaleidoscopic impressions of America in the course of less than a month's stay in Washington.

She was sent here by La Flandre Liberale—paper with largest circulation in northern Belgium—to clear up contradictory reports filtering through about conditions in America under the NRA. She is also doing some Washington corresponding for L'Etoile Belge—the Belgian Star—in Brussels.

Presidential Charm.

Mme. Royon is lean-limbed and smart. She wore a fascinating astrahkan fur turban at an inimitable angle. An eyeglass dangled on a narrow black ribbon. She had a certain air.

"The thing that's simply wonderful is the President's popularity," she confided, with a slight breathlessness.

"The impression he made on me—I suppose it must be the experience of everyone—is one of compelling personal charm. As if he had a sixth sense. He knows exactly what he can do in this world emergency. How far he can go. He makes himself loved by everyone who approaches him. He gives one such a wonderful feeling of confidence."

Mme. Royon attended the President's press conference a week ago.

"The Government's experiment in industry is wonderful," she continued. "America is going to pull out of this crisis and simply lead the world. I am convinced of it, and I am sending this report back to my papers.

Lauds National Discipline.

"My impression is that the discipline of America is wonderful." She hesitated. "Though some tell me it's indifference." There was a question in her voice. "But I haven't written that back to Belgium."

"What do I mean by discipline? Oh, I mean every single shopkeeper is under the NRA. Everyone is an NRA consumer. Everybody falls in line. There is no quarreling in Congress!

"You like my hat? Oh, everyone in America is so kind. They are so hospitable. If only I had another hat, I would give you this one. But I came with very light luggage.

"The other day, when the weather grew warm, I thougnt my fur hat was not suitable. I shopped for another one. I went into a shop here. One of your very smartest shops. The hats they showed me—! For $30. Atrocious, simply atrocious! And for $5 or $10, which I had thought to pay—! Impossible, quite impossible!" Her expression was eloquent.

"It's so strange about the American hats. The American clothes are lovely, and so cheap. I suppose it's because they're made by the millions."

Back "Facials" Are Imperative

Prevalent Evening Fashions Require Make-up There as on Countenance.

Party dresses being what they are, backs are certainly in the limelight and the smart young woman is careful to give her back as much attention as her face. Evening "facials" consist not only of cleansing, bleaching and nourishing the face, neck, arms and shoulders, but also the back. The better beauty salons are now offering back "facials." After a treatment of this kind the skin is the same all over; smooth, soft and silky.

If you can not afford salon treatments you can successfully give yourself a complete back "facial" at home. Start with a warm cleansing bath. Completely relax and stay in the tub for about fifteen minutes. With a mild soap work up a good lather and use a rough Turkish wash cloth or one of the body brushes.

Bring up the blood circulation by a stimulating friction treatment. Rinse the back thoroughly, dry, then apply a good nourishing cream. Ask mother or sister to help you. Have them start at the waist and apply the cream up and out to the nape of the neck. Allow the cream to remain on the back as long as possible; the longer the better. Then apply a skin tonic.

The back should be made up the same as the face and neck. Use the same powder on your back that you do on your face. Powder the back generously and go over it with a damp cloth. The powder will then cling to the back and will not come off on your partner's coat.

The fastidious young woman, after a treatment of this kind, can go forth, attired in her backless evening gown, content in the knowledge that she can stand close scrutiny.

Sibley Guild Devotions.

Mrs. Martha Stauffer, assistant to the pastor of Petworth M. E. Church, will have charge of the devotional period at a meeting of the Women's Guild of Sibley Hospital in Rust Hall chapel tomorrow at 10 a. m. Luncheon will be served following the meeting.

Junior Hadassah Dance.

A record attendance is anticipated for the twelfth annual dance of the Washington Chapter of the Junior Hadassah in the Willard Hotel, February 21. Pauline Millstein and Pauline Blumberg are chairmen of the dance committee. Assisting are Hattie Witt, Ida Orlove, Ethel Witt and Jean Sober.

How It Is Worn Decisive Factor With Spring Hat

Vanities Chorus Girls Aid Hecht's Display of Newest Models.

It's not so much the hat this spring as the way it is worn. Chorus girls, who of all persons should know how to make the angle of a hat spell Paris, demonstrated the art of hat-wearing yesterday afternoon at Hecht's spring millinery showing.

Hollywood hats, which have been displayed in recent movies were worn by Earl Carroll's Vanities girls in the pert, jaunty manner that is necessary to hat-wearing this spring.

Many of the hats were tilted at rakish angles. The off-the-face trend was emphasized in the hats dipped to reveal the forehead. Other hats were worn far back on the head, hair lines framing the faces.

The perky dip to one side was much favored by the Vanities girls. This broke the severity of brims with upward rolls by revealing soft waves of hair brushed away from the face.

Breton sailors, smart adaptations of quaint hats of the fishermen on the Coast of Brittany, added dash with their smart hook quills and creased crowns. These were worn with a flattering side swoop to break the straight line across the forehead.

An easy-to-wear hat with trim spring lines was the Alpine model. It was placed back on the head leaving the face clear. The small brim was softening for those who don't care for the more definite sweep away from the face.

For those prefering the more advanced way of placing the hats, lish school boys were worn slightly the plain straw sailors with the brims rolled like the hats of England back and straight across the forehead.

Right Perfumes Foe of Divorce, Prince Asserts

Matchabelli Holds Correct Odor Enhances Romance and Stifles Discord.

By Frances Mangum.

Proper perfumes will reduce divorce.

They will engender romance and smooth out matrimonial difficulties.

The Georgian Prince Matchabelli, one of America's leading perfumers, who is spending a few days at the Shoreham Hotel, spoke authoritatively on the subject yesterday.

"Our sympathies and antipathies are based on the sense of smell," he declared. "It is that mysterious foundation on which human relations are based.

"Often we see a young couple, ideally matched we think, and then we hear later that they're divorced. Simply couldn't get along, they say. In nine out of ten cases of this kind the woman could have saved the situation simply by wearing a perfume that appealed to her husband.

Odors Dominate Opinion.

"Does it sound strange? Well in this day and age we take little pains to educate our sense of smell. But when we do we will understand how terribly essential and important scents are.

"When a man meets a woman he might think to himself, 'Your hat is terrible! Your dress is worse!' But if she attracts him by the perfume she is wearing, he will excuse hat, dress and everything. When he thinks of her he will not even remember how she was dressed. He will simply associate her in his mind with a delightful fragrance!" Prince Matchabelli became earnest.

"Romances which begin this way," he declared, "are usually the great, the real romances!"

The prince explained that few women know how to choose perfume.

"Perfumes Choose You."

"You see," he said, "a perfume is not to be picked. It must pick you!

"It is made up of a number of oils which either do or do not blend with your skin. A woman should always test several before she makes a definite choice. She should put some on her hand. She might even buy a sample bottle and try it for a week. If it is the right kind, she will know.

"American women are excellent customers for the cosmetician. They buy for display. Their dressing tables usually show a line of bottles, this variety, that variety. European women know more about the art of perfume. They have one, possibly two bottles, and they use these consistently. Their bath oil, eau de cologne, powders and rouges are all cousins to their perfume.

Thus they manage to typify a fragrance—to make it a part of themselves.

"When I was in college," he said, "I studied mining engineering, geology and chemistry. My family had estates where mining was the chief industry.

"Later I was in Berlin studying at a laboratory, when I met a charming young lady who asked me what we made on our estates. I told her everything. So she gave me a bottle of perfume which had no label and asked me if I could make more of it for her.

"She was a very charming young lady, so I studied and studied until I knew enough to make an attempt. She said the perfume I made was better than that she had. That was all the encouragement I needed. From then on, I spent most of my spare time experimenting with perfume oils.

Chef Buisson, of the Washington Hotel, may have discarded the customary white uniform, but his duties of chef and steward did not diminish with the displacement of the tall cap. He believes that the best cooking is in New Orleans, and that there is no accounting for the tastes of the people. One of the hotel's pastry cooks examines the pans of cookies baking in the huge oven.

Buisson Holds New Orleans Brand of Cooking Best of All

Veteran Furnishes Woman's Page Readers With Typical Crescent City Menu; He Will Serve Broiled Strawberries on Request, But Favorite Dish Is Ham and Red Beans.

By Susan Mills.

"No, I wear no white cap," said Chef-Steward Buisson, of the Washington Hotel, "I put it off 11 years ago. And I do no more cooking—it is easier to boss the cooks!

"It is not hard to boss. Most of the cooks do what I want. If I tell them once, they always do it right. I have about five nationalities in the kitchen. French, Italian, German, Spanish, and one American-born Syrian. They don't fight, because, cooking business has a system. It is all in the routine.

"But cooking changes in the different parts of the country. Why? I guess it is the psychology of the people. In New Orleans—I was chef there in St. Charles Hotel—they have about the best cooking of all.

"In New Orleans they like things heavily spiced, much high seasoning. In New York they have ham and cabbage, and everybody eats it! There is more spice the farther South you go, and in the North they eat things boiled—vegetables and meats, with little seasoning. In the Middle West it is much the same.

Broiled Strawberries!

"So wherever a chef goes, he must cook to suit the people. He must find what the people like, and give 'em that, or the house loses money. Sometimes people like chicken country style, and the dish goes over big; sometimes they like hash, so we fix it for them.

"But we can not cook any longer by the classic rules. Time was when they could be used, but no more. Americans like more and more simple cooking—a dinner table with one or two simple things and no more. That is what I like, too.

"My favorite dish, that is, what I like best to eat, is red beans and ham! Yes, prepared like baked beans, and it is a good dish. I don't know whether other people like it or not, but it suits me.

"Sometimes people order things for us to cook. Once I had an order for broiled strawbtrries. Well, I put 'em on the stove, and broiled 'em, and they were all right, I guess. I didn't taste them; they didn't look good enough to eat. And broiled bananas—but they aren't so bad.

Trial and Error Method.

"Oh, yes, and somebody wanted milk toast with goat's milk. So we went out and got the goat's milk, and gave it to 'em.

"I started in a kitchen by washing pans in the pastry shop. I didn't learn much, the cooks were too busy bossing me around. When I was 20 I came to this country, and then I really learned. It was a long time ago," said he, rubbing his bald head. "I started from the bottom and learned everything I could."

Yes, I am French. Most cooks are French. I was born in LePuy, France, I have been 30 years in America, so I guess I know what Americans like to eat all right!

"Sometimes I make up the dishes. I put 'em on the bill of fare, and see what happens. I put on some wonderful New Orleans recipes, but the people didn't like them, so I took them off and forgot about it. Then I may try again, make up something, and if people like it, it stays on the menu.

Dishes Built Like Gowns.

"How do I make up dishes? Just like a lady makes a dress. I have a pattern, and I cut it until it fits, or I add a ruffle here or some more trimming there, until it sells like the clothes of a French coutouriere.

"Of course, like the clothes people wear, sometimes they tire of foods and they like a change in dishes. So we fix what they like, take off ruffles, or add a lace collar. You see?

"But I suppose I am like most people—I want to do what I'm not doing. I think I'd like to be an engineer, if I were not a cook. Maybe the engineers would like to be in a kitchen, but I don't think so.

"I think I would like to give you a real New Orleans menu. I'll tell you about it. The sauce for the shrimps must be well seasoned with plenty of tabasco. The shrimps are served with the shells on. With the crab, the rice is served separately. The fish is cooked and served in an oiled paper bag. Remember that the duck season in Louisiana is of three months' duration, and there are plenty of them. The duck on the menu should be served rare, but very few people like rare ducks, so most of the time those birds are stuffed with pecans or oysters.

Proper Way to Make Coffee.

"And the coffee—it is made this way: Fill a demitasse cup half full of coffee. Place a teaspoon across the top. Fill it with good cognac and a lump of sugar and light. Let burn until the light goes out and stir into the coffee.

"Now I will give you the entire menu.

Milk Market Talk Irrigated By Cocktails.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

The chap who signs himself "E. B. W." below the leading paragraphs in the New Yorker was a recent guest of his old Cornell University friend, Russell Lord, and Mrs. Lord for cocktails at the Dupont Circle Apartment. Because "E. B. W." was in the Capital in search of copy on the Washington scene, a number of New Dealers had been invited.

"You Washingtonians go in for cocktail shaking and end up in a discussion of the milk market," commented "E. B. W."

Just so milk shakes don't supplant cocktails. Are there any objections, Mr. White?

"E. B. W." stands for Elwood Brooks White, but "Andy" is the handle usually given Mr. White, because this sandy-haired strip of a writer was a student at Cornell in the days of Andrew Dickson White, president of that institution, although he is not related to the educator. "Andy" White had many free-lance manuscripts accepted by the New Yorker before he was invited to join its staff. He is the author of the amusing "Alice Through the Cellophane" and of a book of verse known as "The Lady Is Cold." He collaborated with James Thurber in "Is Sex Necessary?" His early writing was published in Seattle, Wash., newspapers.

Katherine White, Mrs. E. B. W., is managing editor of the New Yorker. She wore a becoming pastel rose gown during the cocktail hour, when, with her husband, she chatted with Washingtonians. She easily held her own in a discussion of current affairs with the handsome Dr. Tugwell, and talked over things with Washington's own Caroline Springer, and others.

Dilapidated, but picturesque, is the house on a 22-acre tract of land in Maryland, purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lord for their intended country home. Mrs. Lord, a gifted artist, is making sketches of the house as she and her husband would like to have it restored. Mr. Lord ghost writes for Secretary Wallace. He is an associate editor of "The Country Home," a frequent contributor to other magazines, and the author of "Men of Earth," a book of character sketches of men in agricultural life in this country and abroad.

Prof. Kinji Tanaka, of the University of Commerce, Kobe, Japan, is spending a month researching into American economic problems. He is grateful for detailed information supplied him by one Government official.

"You have been most kind," the professor said to the American at a second conference. "I bring you token of my appreciation." His token was a large, handsome American flag, "made of the purest silk in my country," as the giver expressed it. The executive contrasted in his mind the gratitude of the Oriental with the take-it-for-granted, demanding attitude of Americans toward their Government's executives.

Women waiting to be received by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at a White House reception the other night scored as good a record for restraint as the sex ever will achieve. During the long wait of an hour or more no woman was seen to indulge in rouging, powdering or lipsticking. Only after the feminine guests had passed down the line and reached the informality of the smoking room were the prinking-up tools brought out.

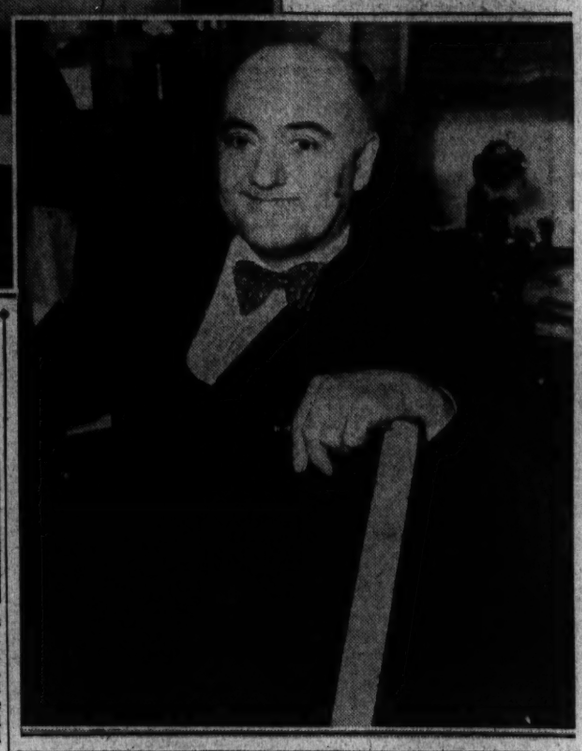
"How the President and Mrs. Roosevelt managed to be gracious to so many persons in one evening is a marvel," said Mrs. Virginia Suburbs to her husband-in-the-Government as they drove the long, snowy way home from the White House. "It was worth that wild hunt for my studs and the agony of making over your old dress, wasn't it, old thing?" said Mr. Suburbs. "To say nothing of our mortification in driving our rusty old car to the White House."

"And think how all those crested invitations from the Roosevelts will go into family archives the country over and how, as the cards turn yellow, children will talk of their grandparents going to the White House looking as funny as we must have——"

"How you keep talking on and on when only fruit punch was served, I don't see," sleepy, tired Mr. S. interruptingly offered. "Anyway, you saw, I hope, that the boss didn't keep his infernal old white gloves on all evening, either."



Il Duce Would Soon Suppress Kidnaping, Traveler Believes

Mrs. J. Renfield Vose, Capital Sojourner, Tells of Audience With Mussolni and How He Has Made Italy Unhealthful for Criminals; Contrasts.

Kidnaping would be wiped out of the United States in record-breaking time if Mussolini were over here, believes Mrs. J. Renfield Vose, of New York, who is spending the winter at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Vose, after living in Italy for almost a year and after being presented to Il Duce, is convinced that Mussolini is the greatest man in the world. His commanding presence and piercing black eyes inspired her with a fearful admiration at the time of her audience with him.

"I probably should have been completely overawed if I hadn't been suffering with a touch of the flu," said Mrs. Vose yesterday morning as she recalled her experiences in Italy. "But," she laughed, "I was so busy looking after the seven handkerchiefs I had with me that I didn't have time to become uncomfortably excited."

Italian Crime Suppressed.

Mrs. Vose's audience with Il Duce lasted about two minutes, but in that short time she feels that she gained an accurate conception of his forceful personality and great magnetism.

"He has eradicated crime to the extent that people do not even think of breaking the law," she continued. "Kidnaping cases were almost unheard of in Italy even before Mussolini. Now there are absolutely none. Children over there, in fact throughout Europe, lead much more sheltered lives than American children and this makes it difficult for strangers to come in contact with them. Then, too, public opinion in Italy is so strong against the dreadful crime of kidnaping that a person guilty of it would be torn limb from limb by the mob as soon as he was caught. And you may be sure that he would be caught. Mussolini has seen to that."

Rome's Brilliant Society.

While in Italy, Mrs. Vose divided her time among Genoa, Florence and Rome. She found all three delightful, but almost unbearably cold in winter. Rome, in her opinion, has the most brilliant social life of any capital, as well as the most beautiful women. The men impressed her as being handsome and fascinating, but rather annoying in their estimate of American husbands.

"They believe that all American husbands treat their wives as spoiled children and make themselves slightly ridiculous by doing so," explained Mrs. Vose. "Of course it is quite the opposite over there. It is the husbands who are babied and petted and spoiled. But the Italian women seem just as happy as the American ones. I guess it all depends upon what one has learned to expect."

Every country would be better off if it had a Mussolini, in the opinion of Mrs. J. Renfield Vose, who recently returned from a long stay in Italy. Mrs. Vose is spending the winter here.

10,000 Women Aided By Prenatal Clinic

More than 10,000 women used the prenatal clinic of Columbia Hospital during 1933, the women's board of the institution announced yesterday.

In addition, according to the board, almost 3,000 home calls were made, approximately 1,000 more than in 1932. This, the board pointed out, indicated the growth of the use of the clinic, which the board supports by its work in the Thrift Shop.

Officers elected by the board for the year ihcluded Mrs. Sidney F. Taliaferro, president; Mrs. J. Spalding Flannery, first vice president; Mrs. Dwight Clark, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan, third vice president; Mrs. Edward Shouse, fourth vice president; Mrs. Paul Sleman, recording secretary; Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, treasurer.

Cheerful Small Dining Room Grows Possible With Care in Selection of Decorative Scheme

Miss Maxson Relates Steps Necessary to Obtain Welcome Results.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

In the small home or apartment the dining-room has been diminishing until it is little more than a slice off the living-room about the size of a closet. But what it has lost in spaciousness and dignity it has made up for in effective new color schemes and a spirit of gay informality.

Because cheerful surroundings add much to the pleasure of food, primrose yellow is chosen as the dominant note in an attractive small dining-room. The light-giving qualities of this color give a sunny warmth to an otherwise dull, drab room.

The wall paper, which has a very small design of white calla lilies with leaves of green and blue-lavender against a yellow background, determines the rest of the color scheme. This completely harmonious combination of colors lends a fresh, modern accent to the room without being too daring in effect.

The woodwork is painted the same soft yellow as the background of the wall paper, and the floor is covered in carpeting of dull green with fine lines of a brighter green.

The windows are hung with sheer ruffled curtains of cream dotted net. They are held back by ruffled bands of the same material. No over-drapes are used, as the maximum amount of light is desired.

The oval mahogany table has a removable top of amber mirrored glass which makes an attractive background for dainty lunch doilies and reflects the flower arrangements.

Built-in corner cupboards are painted inside in the effective blue-lavender tone in the wall paper. These shelves hold gleaming white china which is simply banded in gold, and amber glassware. Interspersed with these are odd bits of bright pottery and shining brass candlesticks with white, hand-dipped candles.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Lecture Will Describe Hebrew Temple Model

Mrs. Annie Carpenter Otto will exhibit and deliver a lecture on the Hebrew Temple model fashioned by her aunt, Mrs. Adda Ulen, in Wyoming, at the Columbia Heights Christian Church at 8 o'clock tonight. She will address the District Federation of Women's Clubs on the same subject at 2 o'clock tomorrow at Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Roberts Quits Veterans Post For Law Work

Drafted Provisions and Benefit Regulations of Economy Act.

James O'Connor Roberts, solicitor of the Veterans Administration, who drafted the far-reaching veterans' provisions of the National economy act, has severed his connections with the Veterans Administration, it was announced yesterday.

Mr. Roberts, a native of the District, is to take up a private law practice, it was stated.

Numerous Governmental moves with regard to veterans' affairs have been superintended by Mr. Roberts. Among these are his assistance to Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, in consolidating the Pension Bureau, the National Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and the Veterans Bureau.

Mr. Roberts acted as special adviser to Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, as well as to Gen. Hines, in the preparation of the Economy Act and its regulations.

During his connection with the Veterans Administration Mr. Roberts has held the offices of Assistant General Counsel, Veterans Bureau; Special Assistant to the Administrator of Veterans Affairs, and Solicitor.

The resignation of Mr. Roberts, which becomes effective on March 1, was accepted with reluctance by Gen. Hines, a Veterans Administration announcement said.

Mr. Roberts served overseas with the three hundred and twelfth Machine Gun Battalion and the headquarters detachment of the one hundred and fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade.

Ball Bat Killing in Cell Costs Youth 30 Years

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 13 (AP).—Thomas Leroy Morland, 19, who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the "ball bat" slaying of Hubert Lyle McGowan a year ago, at the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary, was sentenced today to 30 years in Federal prison at Atlanta.

Moreland confessed he hit McGowan over the head with a baseball bat in a cell. The slayer was serving a term for violation of the Dyer act, and his victim had been sentenced for breaking into a postoffice.

Nine Americans, Saved From Boat, in Havana

Havana, Feb. 13 (AP).—Nine Americans, including H. C. Farrington, of Philadelphia, who were rescued from the wrecked launch Pieces of Eight off the north coast of Pinar del Rio Province Sunday, arrived in Havana today.

The party was fishing when the boat struck a reef. They lost all their belongings, including $5,000 in cash.

Officials of PWA To Speed Projects

Coast-to-Coast Tour to Be Made.

Pushing the drive to get Public Works Administration projects into construction, four Administration officials will leave today on a coast-to-coast trip.

The group will be headed by Col. Henry M. Waite, deputy administrator of PWA. With him will be Edward H. Foley, jr., assistant general counsel; Philip M. Benton, PWA director of finance, and Michael W. Straus, PWA public relations director.

The tour intinerary includes New York, Boston, Detroit, St. Paul, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Little Rock, Fort Worth and Atlanta. Meetings will be conducted with regional and State officials of the PWA.

Dry Cleaner Refuses Price Fixed by NRA

Winston-Salem, N. C., Feb. 13 (AP). John T. Nicholds, local dry cleaner, announced today he was not able to operate under the price-fixing provisions of the dry cleaning code, cut his price for cleaning a suit 20 cents and tendered his Blue Eagle to E. A. Tucker, superintendent of mails at the local postiffice.

Baroness Levi Wins Nevada Divorce Suit

Minden, Nev., Feb. 13 (AP).—Baron Giacomo Giorgi Levi, Italian nobleman, was divorced here today by Baroness Maude Levi, seventh ranking woman tennis player in the United States.

She charged cruelty and non-support. They married in Paris in 1927 and have a 5-year-old daughter whose custody was given to the mother. Baroness Levi formerly lived in New York City.

Minister Is Charged With Killing Nephew

Morristown, Tenn., Feb. 13 (AP). The Rev. Sam Hurst, 50, a Baptist preacher living in Hamblen County, was in jail here today, charged with killing his nephew, Alvin Ward, 24, of Middlesboro, Ky.

Deputy Sheriff C. I. Fowler, of Dandridge, said Hurst and his nephew engaged in an argument.

Banks Had to Shut, Comstock Holds

Governor Defends Drastic Step a Year Ago.

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP).—"All I could do would be to declare another bank holiday under the circumstances."

Those were the words of Gov. William A. Comstock tonight as he recalled the momentous occasion of one year ago when, with a stroke of his pen, he closed Michigan's banks for an eight-day "holiday" that was to spread like an epidemic to other States and close many banks forever.

"I believe it prevented a greater calamity," he added.

The first anniversary of the proclamation that set off one of the major financial debacles of modern times finds the scars it created here healing rapidly.

U. S. Ship Aground, Tug Hurries to Aid

Key West, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP).—The wrecking tug Relief today went to the assistance of an American freighter I. K. Ward, reported as aground 100 miles west of Havana.

The freighter was reported as being pounded hard by high seas.

Coast Guard Will Lose Destroyers by June 30

New London, Conn., Feb. 13 (AP). All destroyers now operated by the Coast Guard, it was unofficially learned here today, will be decommissioned by June 30, the close of the fiscal year.

It was reported likely that the destroyers would be replaced by new craft of smaller type.

Roosevelt Alumni To Elect Officers

Alumni of Roosevelt High School are planning their annual get-together at the school for February 22.

The program will open with a basket ball game betwen Roosevelt and Eastern High Schools, at 7:45 p. m. The annual meeting will follow, at which officers will be elected. A dance will be held, starting at 10 p. m.

Midshipmen's Jail To Get Overhauling

The time-honored "Spanish brig" of Annapolis is in for some Public Works Administration renovating. The Reina Mercedes pier, as it is officially known, was the subject of a $35,000 allotment from the PWA yesterday. The ancient Spanish hulk's pier, badly deteriorated, is to have new substructure and superstructure.

Work on the academy jail will start at once, officials explained, to provide midshipmen with a safe place in which to think over infractions of academy rules.

New Yorker Kills Mate, Then Self

Bodies Found in 1-Room Apartment.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The bodies of an elderly retired interior decorator and his wife were found in their one-room apartment today. Police described the case as a murder and suicide.

The man, Emil Phillipson, apparently fired a bullet into the left temple of his wife, Marie, and then shot himself in the mouth.

The letters, apparently written by Phillipson, were found, one of which said "I can stand the pain no longer." The police said this mention of pain might refer to the suicide a month ago in China of Mrs. W. S. Brooch, believed to have been a daughter of the Phillipsons, who jumped off the roof of an eight-story apartment house, with her two sons, one under each arm.

PWA Says 'No' To Zeppelins

Ickes Decides to "Ground" Cash, Disapproves Commercial Plan.

Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, is not particularly anxious to put any PWA money into Zeppelins, he indicated yesterday.

He was told that a move was afoot to have PWA finance construction of two Zeppelins for passenger service. Involved in the scheme are the Goodyear Zeppelin Co., of Akron, Ohio, and the Metalclad Airship Co., of Detroit, each of which wants to construct a lighter-than-air craft to go into transoceanic service.

The Department of Commerce and the Navy Department were consulted by the firms, and indorsement was given provided money could be obtained from PWA.

The pocket of the PWA, however, proved a bad air pocket for the ships when Secretary Ickes heard about the idea. "It doesn't appeal to me," he said.

Lucky Strike presents the Metropolitan Opera Company

Saturday at 1:45 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, over Red and Blue Networks of NBC, Lucky Strike will broadcast the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York in the complete opera, "Faust."

In making Lucky Strike, we actually discard most of the tobacco plant—because we select only the center leaves—and for these center leaves farmers are paid a higher price. We do not use the top leaves—because those are under-developed. Nor the bottom leaves—because those are inferior in quality—tough, coarse and always sandy. But these center leaves are the mildest leaves, silky, smooth, tender. And so only these center leaves are used in making Luckies the fully packed cigarette—so round, so firm—free from loose ends. The tobacco doesn't spill out. That's why Luckies draw easily, burn evenly—and are always mild and smooth . . . And then, too—"It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste.

Channel Plan Awaits Policy Of President

National Program Will Be Announced Soon by White House.

The proposed development of the Washington Channel and numerous other waterway projects on which hearings have been held before the House Rivers and Harbors Committee may be indefinitely delayed because of President Roosevelt's desire to set up a National waterways program, it was learned yesterday.

Representative Mansfield (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, admitted that the committee probably will not report on the projects it has already considered because of the President's wish not to have a bill reported at this session.

Just when the President will submit his National program is not known; neither are the projects it will encompass. Representative Mansfield said the committee probably would await further word from the White House before taking any action.

Several Hearings Held.

The Washington Channel development, which now apparently has the support of all civic factions, providing it does not cost the District too much, was only one of several projects on which hearings have been held by the committee.

The pending plan, as outlined by Maj. J. D. Arthur, jr., United States district engineer, provides for a yacht harbor in four sections, a wharf for the use of the harbor police and harbor fire boats, a workhouse pier and three new commercial piers.

Maj. Arthur estimated the entire project, which is a modification of a proposal rejected last year, would cost $1,650,000. He suggested that the District be required to pay only $389,000 of this cost, or the amount necessary to build the two municipal piers.

The board of enginers, which transmitted his report, did not concur in this however, holding that the cost should be divided equally between the Federal and the District governments.

Commission Indorses Plan.

The plan was indorsed by the District Commissioners, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the Board of Trade, the Washington Chamber of Commerce, and several citizens' associations.

The Commissioners made it clear, however, at the hearing that they would not agree to pay more than the proportional share of the expense suggested by Maj. Arthur.

Session Planned By Peoples Lobby

Nation's Public Ownership Program Is Topic.

A conference on "America's Public Ownership Program" will be held by the Peoples Lobby, Inc., at the Continental Hotel next Monday.

The program is divided into three sessions, one beginning at 10 a. m., the second at luncheon, at 12:15 p. m., and the third at 8 p. m. Speakers at the first session include Dr. Colston E. Warne, of Amherst College; Dr. John Bauer, director of the American Public Utilities Bureau, and Benjamin C. Marsh.

Dr. Warne will address the luncheon gathering, as will Dr. W. Jett Lauck and Dr. Harry W. Laidler, former president of the National Bureau of Economic Research. Dr. Charles Lane, secretary of the emergency committee of consumer organizations, and Prof. Anton A. Friedrich, of New York University, are the featured evening speakers.

Girl, 7, Files Suit For Crash Injuries

Isabelle Karsiensky, 7, of 3616 Seventeenth street northwest, yesterday in District Supreme Court filed suit for $25,000 damages against Margaret B. Woodson, 1601 Monroe street northeast, for alleged injuries she suffered while a passenger in the defendant's automobile.

Through her father, William R. Karsiensky, she charged that May 2, 1933, the automobile operated by the defendant struck another automobile at Sixteenth and Monroe streets northeast. The girl claimed she was seriously hurt.

Miss Delano to Sing For Democrats Today

Rose Marie Delano, dramatic soprano, will present a program of operatic arias and popular songs for the monthly reception of the National Democratic League today at the Recquet Club. She will be accompanied by Reggie Newton, well-known radio pianist, who will also present some solo selections.

Miss Delano is a graduate of the National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., and of the University of California. Her vocal studies were pursued in this country and abroad, and she has made operatic appearances in Italy, Los Angeles and New York.

Lorton Disease Peril Charged Before House

Some of Reformatory's Laundry Workers Ill, Is Claim.

Charges that some of the inmates of the District Reformatory at Lorton who are assigned to the laundry are suffering from social diseases were made in the House yesterday by Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Before Shoemaker could amplify his charge or introduce a resolution asking for a Congressional investigation, he was ruled out on a point of order raised by Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas.

Shoemaker first asked unanimous consent to address the House on the alleged conditions at the laundry which does work for the Capitol and all Federal departments, but an objection was voiced.

He then rose to a question of personal privilege and warned the members of Congress that they were endangered by the condition at the prison laundry, but he got no further before the point of order was sustained.

Towels and other linen used by the various Governmental departments are laundered at Lorton.

D. C. Police Probe Mysterious Death

Passerby Dies at Home Where He Sought Rest.

The mysterious death of a man identified as George Ruzanski, about 45, was being investigated last night by the Coroner and members of the police homicide squad.

Ruzanski died at the home of Mrs. Katherine Burress, 731 Fourth street northwest, where he had sought aid. He told Mrs. Burress he was ill and wanted to sit down. A few moments later he collapsed. Mrs. Burress summoned an ambulance from Emergency Hospital.

Ruzanski's name was learned from papers in his pocket. An effort is being made to locate friends or relatives.

Merger by March 6 Hope of Bank Heads

Officials of the Mount Vernon and Washington Mechanics Savings Banks expressed hope yesterday that the combination of these institutions will be completed not later than March 6.

The consolidation will result in reopening of the Mount Vernon Savings Bank as a branch of Washington Mechanics Savings Bank and make available 40 per cent of the deposits, or $800,000, of the former institution. At a later date the Franklin National Bank will reopen as a third component of the merger.

Swat 'Em!

Blue or Pink "Skeeters" Just Painted.

If you see blue mosquitoes this spring don't mistake them for NRA blue eagles—swat them just the same. And it is only fair warning to tell you that you may see pink ones too.

The mosquito color scheme is just a way of marking the little insects which has been devised at the Department of Agriculture to determine how long they live, how far they travel and other facts of their life.

Mosquitoes are painted just about the way that your automobile gets its coat. They are sprayed with methylene blue or eosine, a pink color.

The spray must be very fine or the insects will drown. But if a fine mist is used they dry off in a minute or two, leaving a shade that won't wear off.

Capital Opens Lenten Rites This Morning

Ash Wednesday Address to Be Delivered by Dr. Bratenahl.

With special services scheduled in all churches during the next several weeks, Washington begins observance of the Lenten season today.

A service of morning prayer, litany and penitential office will be held in the great choir of Washington National Cathedral today at 11 a. m. The Ash Wednesday address will be given by the Rev. G. C. Bratenahl, dean of the cathedral, following the evening prayer in the great choir at 4 p. m.

The Rev. Malcolm S. Taylor, of the National Commission on Evangelism, will deliver the Lenten sermon following evensong in the great choir tomorrow afternoon. Members of the cathedral staff, local clergymen and out-of-town ministers will deliver Lenten addresses on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the weeks preceding Holy Week, when Canon Peter will speak each afternoon on "The Significance of the Day in Our Lord's Life and Ministry."

A succession of weekly Lenten music meditations will begin today at 5 p. m. in the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S streets, under the direction of Dr. Albert W. Harned, organist and director of music. Dr. Harned will play the opening program today. On subsequent Wednesdays, Joseph Hauber, Malton Boyce and Dr. James Dickinson will be in charge of programs.

The meditations will be climaxed by rendition of the first part of Gounod's "The Redemption" on Good Friday night, by the National Capital Choir, directed by Dr. Harned.

Food Exhibits Hold Interest In Auditorium

Wayne Leizear, 11 Months, Captures Contest for Babies.

The non-commercial exhibits in the third annual food exposition of United Food Stores, Inc., have been commanding widespread attention among visitors to the Washington Auditorium this week, show officials announced yesterday.

Notable is the exhibit sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture, which gives a comprehensive picture of the relationship between food and health, and the essentials for the "well-balanced meal."

The display sponsored by the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind, in which sightless workers demonstrate tasks they practice in their workshops, including chair caning, manufacture of rushbottom chairs, and the making of other products, also is attracting interest.

The baby contest yesterday, open to babies between 6 months and 1 year old, was won by 11-months-old Wayne Leizear, of 5802 Fourth street, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Leizear. A contest for infants between 1 and 2 years will be held this afternoon.

The show sponsors award a prize each night. Mrs. Florence A. Hoover, of 702 Sligo avenue, Silver Spring, Md., and Mrs. J. A. Lankford, of 1750 F street, have each won a valuable prize. An automobile will be given away Saturday night.

Tonight the largest family visiting the show will receive an award, in addition to the capital prize which goes to some lucky visitor.

Slow Street Cars Blamed On Weather

Transit Company Chief Answers Criticism by Commission.

Declares Steps Under Way to Improve Service.

Replying to a demand for better street car service, made by the Public Utilities Commission after many complaints had been filed by residents and citizens' associations, John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Transit Company, yesterday blamed the weather for unsatisfactory operation.

"With ordinarily favorable weather conditions," the traction president declared, "the service we are now rendering would be well within the commission standards."

Hanna blamed slowness of street criticism of the commission, which followed more than a hundred complaints. He said the company has ample cars and has ordered 10 new buses.

Honna blamed slowness of street cars under ordinary weather conditions on traffic lights "operated at numerous intersections throughout the day when the need does not exist for more than one or two hours, if at all."

Raps Double Parking.

The other factor slowing cars, President Hanna said, is "double parking, which exists throughout the business distrcts."

Following receipt of Mr. Hanna's reply, delivered in person to the commission, Commissioner Riley E. Elgin said he believed the company would be able to give satisfactory service.

Elgin said that since the snowfall of February 1 the commission had received an average of three written and four telephoned complaints per day. There were practically no complaints before the snow.

Failure to provide for increased patronage of transit lines resulting from the new pass and free transfer system, which were adopted with the merger of the companies, was a factor blamed for the poor service, Mr. Elgin said.

Revenue Increase Shown.

That this increase has occurred is evident from figures of Mr. Hanna. In December, he said, total revenue jumped 6 per cent, which means patronage increased 20 per cent or more. In January the revenue jump was 12½ per cent, with patronage increasing more than 30 per cent.

In saying that present equipment was inadequate, Mr. Hanna added that the old side-seat cars used during rush hours are being equipped with cross seats. He said the company does not wish to purchase new cars because those on the market are not superior enough to the ones in use to warrant buying.

In regard to overcrowding, the utility president told the commission that approximately 60 more cars are being used during rush hours than were in operation during the same periods before the merger.

137 Men Employed.

Since unification of the lines, 137 men have been employed, Mr. Hanna said. Of these, 69 are still under instruction.

One serious factor affecting service, Mr. Hanna told the commission, was the large amount of sickness at present among employes.

The commission was assured that steps to heat all cars properly were being taken and also that cars will be swept twice daily.

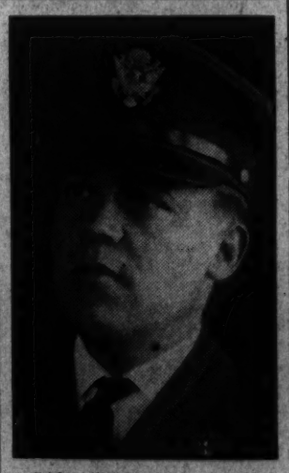
Capt. W. J. Flood, Balloonist, To Graduate From Kelly Field

Noted Capital Expert Has Added to Laurels Since 1917.

Capt. William J. Flood, Washington Army balloonist and airship pilot, was listed by the War Department yesterday for graduation from the Air Corps Advanced Flying School, Kelly Field, Texas, February 20.

Capt. Flood, who lives at 1322 Massachusetts avenue northwest, will be one of the comparatively few Army airmen to hold pilot ratings for both heavier-than-air craft and airships. He gained Nationwide recognition as a balloonist in 1925, winning second place in the National balloon race and seventh place in the international contests in Belgium.

Four years later he landed the Army airship TC-5 on the roof of the Munitions Building here to deliver official correspondence to the chief of the Air Corps. The day before, on February 4, 1929, he showed Air Corps chiefs how mail could be picked up during flight from a ship at sea, performing the feat for the first time from the steamer Virginia Lee in Hampton Roads. He also was the first pilot to pick up mail from a building while in flight. He was one of the pilots of the TC-2, the last of the hydrogen-filled airships, which burned at Wilbur Wright Field in 1924.



CAPT. WILLIAM J. FLOOD.

Capt. Flood began his air career with the 102nd Aero Squadron, Mitchell Field, Long Island, in 1917. From 1918 to 1919 he was in command of the 101st Aero Squadron, A. E. F., and the Eighth, Twelfth and Nineteenth Airship companies from 1920 to 1929.

Capt. Flood attended George Washington, National and St. Louis Universities. He was born in Peoria, Ill., July 15, 1895.

200 Blue Eyes Has This Baby—And 10 Hatpins for Each Eye!

This animal resembling a large chestnut burr or a small porcupine is Astropyga Magnifica. It is a new and weird kind of sea-urchin just received at the Smithsonian Institution. Austin H. Clark, curator of echinoderms, holds the spiny creature.

New Sea Urchin Hasn't Enemy in the World—Guess Why!

Not an enemy in the world has this blue-eyed baby of the sea—a new species of sea urchin—just discovered in the Atlantic Ocean.

Although it has 200 bright, blue eyes arranged in double rows like the bulbs on a theater marquee, it is no cuddlesome baby.

This is because its body is covered with hundreds of barbed, black spines nearly a foot long, which make it impregnable and, hence, without foes.

In describing the creature, Austin H. Clarke, Smithsonian curator of echinoderms, said yesterday that few more weird animals inhabit the sea than the new "Astropyga magnifica."

The animal was found on the sea bottom south of the Dry Tortugas Island by Dr. P. Powers, biologist of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, who sent it to Smithsonian.

The creature is especially interesting for the development of its eyes, Clarke said. If the hand is placed in the water near one of the animals, the barbs are immediately pointed in the direction of the hand.

The animal, which has more the appearance of a porcupine than of any other animal of terrestrial habits, is a scavenger of the sea bottom. Although it never kills its own food, it has five sharp teeth for tearing away the flesh of dead animals.

Like others of its related groups, including among which are the starfish, it has no head—that is, the development of its nervous system and the direction of locomotion are not set in a forward direction as is the case with insects and vertebrates.

This "sea porcupine" says Clarke, has a peculiar method of locomotion. It has thousands of sucker-like feet which are hollow and attached to tubes within its shell. It moves by forcing water through the tubes and into the particular feet it wishes to use.

The creature is the first member of its genus to be discovered since the Pacific and Indian Ocean representatives were described approximately 100 years ago.

Officials to Select CWA School Art

Committeemen Will Pool Individual Choices.

All three members of the buildings and grounds committee of the Board of Education have selected the pictures and other art done by CWA artists that they would like to see displayed in District schools, and will confer today on a definite selection.

The school art is now on exhibition at the Phillips Galleries at 1600 Twenty-first street northwest. Enthusiasm over the work was expressed by the members of the committee.

The committee will meet prior to a closed conference between Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and members of the Board of Education, understood to have been called by the superintendent to acquaint the board with educational problems that he encountered on recent visits to Eastern cities.

Hacker Reports Holdup; Police Arrest Suspect

A few hours after James Stockhouse, a cab driver, reported he was robbed at knife point early yesterday, police arrested Harold R. Kirby, colored, 23, of 1526 Church street northwest. He was allegedly identified as Stockhouse's assailant.

The driver said he picked up Kirby and a companion near Fifteenth and O streets northwest, and that after driving for some time one of the men drew a knife and robbed him of $1.12.

Sub-Committee Passes "Buck" On 4c Gas Tax

Shifts Bill to Full House Group Without Any Proposals.

The House District Committee today confronts the delicate problem of what to do with the Smith bill to raise the gasoline tax here from 2 to 4 cents a gallon.

The Fiscal Relations sub-committee, headed by Representative Clark (Democrat), North Carolina, yesterday decided to report the bill without prejudice, thereby passing the buck to the whole committee.

While Chairman Norton has announced that she is opposed to the measure, introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, or any bill intended to increase taxation in the District, other members have kept their opinions secret.

May Die in Committee.

Unless Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, takes a stand in favor of the bill and insists on a report, the measure may never get beyond the committee.

Last year a similar measure passed the House without objection, largely because of the sympathy of members with Virginia and Maryland, where gasoline dealers in the metropolitan area have difficulty competing with the lower District tax.

The House committee is scheduled to consider the old-age pension bill today, but action has been delayed so frequently recently that a report may again be postponed.

An opinion is expected from the District Commissioners this morning, but a further complication may result from the fact that the District heads have decided favorably on the Black bill, while the committee has already more or less accepted the Norton measure.

Not Much Difference.

The only important difference in the measures is that the Norton bill authorizes appointment of a commission to administer the fund and sets up a maximum income of $9 a week for indigents, whereas the Black bill leaves the matter of benefits to the Board of Public Welfare.

The committee has already amended the Norton bill to conform with the Black bill on the maximum age, raising it from 60 to 65 years.

No action is scheduled on the Capper-Norton alley bill, as a report has not been received from the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Grocery Store Robbed.

Groceries valued at approximately $12 were reported stolen from a Sanitary Grocery Store at Third and C streets southwest yesterday. William E. Osburn, manager, told police thieves smashed a show window.

Economy Act Curb Sought By Pay Bloc

Senators Backing U. S. Workers to Fight Restrictions.

Plan Riders to Offices Bill, Despite Wishes of Roosevelt.

Assured that most of the Government salary cut will be restored at the beginning of the next fiscal year, leaders of the fight for Government workers in the Senate have launched a drive to wipe out of the economy law restrictive provisions the Administration wants reenacted.

These include provisions suspending automatic increases in compensation, prohibiting filing of vacancies, reducing travel allowances, restricting transfer of noncivilian personnel, authorizing temporary assignments in the postal service, authorizing transfer of appropriations and reducing jurors' and witnesses' fees.

Support of a majority of the 35 Republicans and many Democrats is expected for the amendments, which are to be offered by Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa, when the independent offices appropriation bill, carrying salary and economy provisions, is brought to the Senate floor.

Quick Passage Sought.

The measure was favorably reported by the appropriations committee Monday and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who reported the measure, hopes to get it passed this week.

Restoration of the full 15 per cent cut from Government salaries is to be sought on the floor. Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, a leader in the fight for restoration, said the proposal had wide support in the Senate and undoubtedly would be passed if the President eased pressure against it. Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, and others agreed.

Administration leaders and other influential Senators, however, said they expected the bill to be passed by the Senate with the pay provisions recommended by the committee.

Part Restoration Approved.

The committee approved restoration of 5 per cent effective February 1 and another 5 per cent effective July 1, with the President authorized to restore all or part of the remaining 5 per cent if the cost of living increased to or beyond the 1928 level during the fiscal year.

Senator McCarran's pay cut amendment will provide for the 5 per cent restoration from February 1 and full restoration with the beginning of the year.

Fight over the veterans' provisions is expected to be lively, with Administration leaders seeking to hold their forces against most of the demands.

Emory Glee Club Sings Here Mar. 2

Alumni to Sponsor Concert at Mayflower.

Sponsored by Emory University Alumni of Washington, the Emory Glee Club will come from Atlanta, to give a concert at the Mayflower Hotel March 2 at 8:30 p. m.

The glee club was founded in Atlanta in 1919. Its director is Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, head of the Fine Arts Department at Emory University. Dr. Dewey recently was appointed to the honorary board of the National Music Guild.

When Georgia Hall was dedicated at Warm Springs, as a tribute to President Roosevelt, the Emory Glee Club was the only organization asked to participate.

Stream-Lined Train Visits Here Friday

Washington will have its first view of the Union Pacific's new stream-lined, high-speed train when it stops at Union Station Friday on a tour of the East.

It will be open to the public from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. on the lower level. Stream-lined to a degree never before attempted in railroad design, the train is capable of a speed of 110 miles an hour.

Good morning! Ties with champagne bubbles, ties with streamline contours, ties with polka dots, ties with plaids are among the first arrivals. Gay in color tones, rich in patterns, our new ties will help clear the snow and ice out of your mind and bring Spring nearer. Attractive assortments at 55c, $1.00 and $1.50.

Maryland Conquers V. M. I. Quintet With Second-Half Spurt, 36-27

Zone Defense Turns Back Cadets

Buscher Leads Attack With 8 Points; Hancock Also Scores 8.

RITCHIE STADIUM, College Park, Md., Feb. 13.—Virginia Military Institute's basket ball team fell before a sluggish Maryland quintet in Ritchie Coliseum tonight, 36 to 27. The victory was the Old Liners' sixth in seven Southern conference starts.

It was a nip-and-tuck battle for the first half, with Maryland leading, 19 to 15 at the intermission. Ins the second period the Cadet gradually fell back and after 10 minutes the Old Liners had achieved a 29-18 advantage. V. M. I. was held safe the remainder of the game.

Maryland's attack was below par all the way, with much loose handling of the ball and poor passwork. The Old Liners' zone defense functioned well, however, and the Cadets were forced to take most of their shots from long range.

Scoring for Marylnad was well divided, with Buchy Buscher getting 8 points, Rufus Vincent and Bob Snyder 7 each and Bernie Busher, 6 points.

V. M. I. was the first to score when Goodwin dropped in a 2-pointer from the 15-foot mark after a minute of play Chase tied the count at 2-all and Bernie Buscher sent the Old Liners ahead at 4—2.

Maryland held the lead until after 7 minutes the visitors cought at 8-all on Hancock's foul toss. Emmett Heerdt's long looper sent the visitors head and the lead shifted several times before the Old Liners went ahead just before the midway whistle on floor goals by Bucky Buscher and Snyder.

After the first few minutes of the second half, V. M. I. was outdistanced as Snyder, Vincent and the Buscher brothers found the basket consistently.

Downey and Hancock, each with 2 court goals, were the only Cadets to score from the floor in the second half.

Junior Girl Swimmers Vie at Shoreham Friday

Five events are listed for the Junior Girls Swimming meet, to be held in the Shoreham pool Friday afternoon under auspices of the District A. A. U. They are the novice 50-yard free style, open 75-yard free style, 75-yard breast stroke, 75-yard back stroke and fancy high-board diving.

To the individual winners of the meet, which is scheduled for 3 o'clock, ribbons will be awarded for first, second and third places. The meet is open only to girl swimmers 14 years of age or under, and registered with Charles Fyfe, 230 C street northwest. There is no entry fee.

Gonzaga Passers Defeat Swavely

Forging ahead in the second period after a nip-and-tuck battle in the opening period, Gonzaga yesterday defeated Swavely Prep, 25 to 26, on the local team's court.

Gonzaga led at half-time, 12 to 10, but with Bill Boyle and Tommy Follard showing the way, gradually drew away from its rival. Tom Roache's splendid floor work and guarding played an important part in the victory. Roache blocked innumerable shots near the basket and invariably took loose balls off the backboard.

Virginia Faces Yale Boxers Saturday

Meet in Richmond Will Be Last Before Tourney for Cavaliers.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The "Big Four" of the University of Virginia boxing team is no more. Since the 5-to-3 victory over the Navy last Saturday night it has become the "Big Five." It will be tested again when the Cavaliers box Yale in Richmond Saturday.

Lyndon Lee, who moved down into the middleweight class to defeat Frank Herold of Navy and make sure a team victory for the Cavaliers, has earned the right to be grouped with the other Virginia boxers who haven't been defeated this year.

Began as Big Three.

The so-called "Big Four" began as a "Big Three." Included were the trio of veterans who remained from the team of last season. They were Capt. Harold Stuart, middleweight; Archie Hahn, jr., Southern Conference bantamweight champion, and Gordon Rainey, featherweight.

Maynard Womer, welterweight, muscled into the select company and turned the trio into a quartet by his slashing victory over the Harvard, V. M. I. and North Carolina 145-pounders.

Somehow or other Lee hasn't been getting the credit he deserves. He has had close decisions in several of his bouts and got a forfeit in the match with the Cadets. Still he wasn't regarded as a sure winner. Hahn, Rainey, Womer and Stuart were counted on to win against Navy. They lived up to expectations.

Won Over Herold.

That left clinching the team victory up to Lee. He came through in fine style against the much more experienced Midshipman Herold. In the last round he removed all doubt as to the outcome when he dropped Herold for the count of nine. It was Lee's first scrap in the middleweight division, for he had previously boxed up in the light-heavyweight class.

The Yale match is the last dual meet on the Cavalier schedule, with the Southern Conference tournament following.

Officers Are Elected By Club at Frostburg

Frostburg, Md., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—At a meeting of the Frostburg Baseball Club of the Inter-State League a permanent organization was effected with the election of Earl Sterry as president; Enoch P. Price, vice president; Elmer Kight, secretary; John Hitchins, treasurer, and Fred Boettner, business manager.

The board of directors elected is composed of Griffith Lewis, Capt Harry C. Balch of the Salvation Army; Sol H. Brode, jr., Earl James and George Sanged. Members of the entertainment committee are Harry Winner, William Glorious and George Albright, while the publicity committee comprises H. Gerson and C. B. Ryan.

The Boxoffice Blues

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13 (Spl.).—What is this that has come to my ears? The course of true love in Miami is not running true? The "happy marriage" between Primo Carnera, the heavyweight ogre of the world, and Tommy Loughran may not occur? It is true that a postponement of the nuptials from February 22 until February 28 has been announced on grounds of conflicting attractions.

But I have heard disquieting rumors around our town that Carnera's love for his bride-to-be is cooling a little, that his advisers have suddenly come to realize that this is not the happiest match in the world for him, that he has everything to lose and nothing to gain except a few dollars. And even the dollars are bidding fair to be very few indeed. A fight between a worn-out, built-up heavyweight who never could hit against a fast, burly fellow 70 pounds heavier is not one calculated to stir the pulses and quicken the blood. Loughran's only hope of survival would seem to be to make a jolly game of squat tag of the fight. This is still a game that is played for nothing by little girls around the ages of 7 to 10.

The Madison Square Garden folk have had so many viscissitudes of late, so many of them manifestly unfair, and the corporation has seemed so pleased with its heavyweight championship fight beneath the palms of Miami that I have hesitated to indicate my opinion of the true worth of this proposed brawl as an attraction. I would say that 50 cents were a fair price to charge for the best seats, since that is the top price exacted by any Musee or Congress of Freaks for a peek at the dog-faced lady and the three-legged girl on the platform inside.

To classify the affair as anything but a freak show is, I am afraid, inflicting too great a hoax on a gullible public. I am not so sure that the spectacle of a small man pushing his fingers into the face of a large man and the large man boring the small man about the head and stomach is even a good freak show. May be I set my top price too high. Make it 35 cents.

According to one story, Carnera has reinjured the right hand which he bruised while pummeling Paulino Uzcudun about the skull last fall in Rome, and does not know when he will be able to box again. I do not blame Primo for exercising the greatest caution in this match. Against such a terror as Loughran, he will need his full armament. Before the evening is over, Tommy is apt to powder his nose with a right or irritate his breast bone with a flicking left. Just how Da Preem came to reinjure this right hand has not yet developed, since he has not been doing any serious fighting. There is one yarn going the rounds that he was eating spaghetti a la Milanese and used the Bolognese twist to wind them up, or maybe he used the Milanese twist on spaghetti a la Bolognese; any way, he is supposed to have dislocated his wrist in this manner, but I doubt it. No one has ever yet accused Primo of not knowing how to eat his spaghetti.

While I am not a fight promoter, if I went to stirring up a brawl for pay in Florida, I would, I think, be sure that it had certain elements that would overcome the lethargy of citizens on vacation, in an expensive land, many of them with limited budgets. The appeal of the Carnera-Loughran bout is, I'm afraid, no more than that of the sign outside the amusement park concession advertising the only mermaid in captivity. I should think that all promoters would learn the lesson of the Coney Island Stadium, a nifty little fight arena constructed to hold 20,000 and set down in the heart of Coney Island, New York's "Isle Joyeuse," which draws hundreds of thousands of people daily and nightly.

Fine cards were arranged and it was figured that surely, out of the hundreds of thousands who swept past the arena, 10 or 15 per cent would be lured inside to view the beak-busting. But the Coney crowds cared nothing for fights and fighters. Their spirits led them to roller coasters, the movies, the whips and the Red Mills, they jammed Luna and Steeplechase, spent their frugal dollars for hot dogs, pop corn, taffy, soda pop, weak beer and dancing, and left the battlers to punch one another's ears in comparative privacy while they got their own thrills dashing down a 60 per cent grade for 10 cents on nearby rides.

You may bet your bottom dollar that if the Garden felt it had a real red hot attraction, it wouldn't postpone its show for any other conflicting attraction. There wouldn't be any conflicting attraction. Old Dr. Gallico doesn't believe in fooling his patients. I diagnose it as acute low blood pressure in the boxoffice.

Adams to Pilot Cup Trials Sloop

At Least Three Big Craft to Compete for Honor of Final Races.

BOSTON, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—At least three big sloops will compete for the honor of defending America's cup late next summer against England's fourteenth challenge, made by the Royal Yacht Squadron last October on behalf of Thomas O. M. Sopwith and his Endeavor.

That the trials will be almost as exciting as the cup races themselves was assured tonight when it was learned that a recant "substantial contribution" will enable the Boston-owned Yankee, with former Naval Secretary Charles Francis Adams at the helm, to enter the 1934 sailing.

Weetamoe, which with Yankee and Whirlwind lost out in the 1930 trials to the now outlawed mechanical marvel, Enterprise, will be in the salt sea running once again. She and Yankee must be altered considerably to meet new requirements and to make worthy joust with the new prospect, Rainbow, now building at the Herreshoff Boat Works in Bristol, R. I.

To Be Assembled Soon.

From Bristol came word that Rainbow, designed by Starling Burgess to combine the best features of Enterprise and Weetamoe, will be assembled during the coming week. The keel of 80-odd tons has been cast, all of the frame has been bent, the keel plate is in place, and all the sails are on hand. Sixty-five men have been at work on the new yacht, which will be sailed for a New York syndicate by Harold S Vanderbilt, who pointed Enterprise to four straight victories over the late Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V some three years ago.

Bostonians are banking on the yachting craft of Charles Francis Adams to lead Yankee into the finals. They point out that Adams' duties as Navy Secretary in 1930 prevented him from boarding her except to sail her in the trials, and that he never really got the true "feel" of Yankee.

Humphreys and Marine Boxing Teams in Draw

The Fort Humphreys boxers staged a great comeback to earn a draw with the Quantico Marines, in a series of six bouts held in the Engineer Theater at Fort Humphreys. The Marines won the first two bouts by knockouts, drew in two others, and lost two by knockouts.

Schramko, promising Fort Humphreys heavyweight, earned a draw for the Army boxers with a K. O. over Eastley, Marines, in the final bout.

Gyro Barely Up to Win New Orleans Feature

New Orleans, Feb. 13 (A.P.).—M. Goldblatt's good gelding, Gyro, scored his third success of the meeting when he barely got up to win by a nose over W. F. Axton's Frank Ormona in the Mardi Gras Handicap here today. J. J. O'Bryne's Chrysostom, a winner last time out, was third, beaten a length for the place.

Gyro, a slow beginner, gradually worked his way up on the outside and collared Little Lad, the pace setter, coming into the stretch. Little Lad held on gamely but could not withstand the stretch drive and had to be satisfied with place spoils.

Gyro, the favorite, paid $4.60 straight, $3.60 to place, and $2.60 to show for a $2 ticket across the board and ran the mile and a sixteenth over a slow track in 1:48 flat.

Twin Water Polo Bill Is Carded Friday Night

Te Washington Water Polo Association offers a twin-bill Friday night at the Shoreham Hotel swimming pool. Shoreham and George Washington teams clash in the first game at 8 o'clock, and the Washington Canoe Club will meet the Baltimore "Y" natators in the second match.

Only George Washington remains in Shoreham's path to a clear claim to the series championship, and though the Colonials are tough, Shoreham looms as the winner.

Gaithersburg Wins.

Poolesville High basketers proved no match for the home team here this afternoon on the Gaithersburg High court and bowed, 29 to 14.

Reed, with 10 points, and Gloyd with 8, were the game's high scorers.

Simmons Joins in Kids' Game —And It Costs Him Puh-lenty

The story of how Al broke two bats and lost three balls for the youngsters came to light today, as the owners of the property were repaid handsomely by the slugger.

Simmons went to Whittington Park three weeks ago to work out, and found a lively baseball game in progress between boys ranging in ages from 8 to 13 years.

He joined them and the damage resulted. But the youngsters were pleased, despite their losses, for they had played baseball with the mighty Al.

The losses apparently were forgotten until H. King Wade, local sportsman, delegated for the purpose by Simmons, looked up the addresses of the youngsters and presented them with the "replacements."

To Joe Sweat and Freddy Young were given special bats with their names on them. They also received autographed baseballs, as did Joe Williamson and Bobby Lewis.

Rosenbloom Settles $3,156 U. S. Tax Lien

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13 (A.P.).—Receipt of a check for $3,156.96 in settlement of a Government lien against Maxie Rosenbloom, world's light heavyweight champion, for income taxes for 1929 and 1930, was announced today by J. Edwin Larson, deputy collector of internal revenue.

Larson said the payment had been accepted and a certificate of discharge of the lien was filed in Federal court.

Income taxes amounting to $2,292.88 and interest of $864.08 constituted grounds for the lien.

Carnera Bout Reset for Feb. 28

Date Shifted Because of Conflict With Other Feb. 22 Events.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 13 (A.P.).—Postponement until February 28 of the world's heavyweight title fight between Champion Primo Carnera and Tommy Loughran, originally set for February 22, was announced today by the Miami Boxing Commission.

Setting back of the date for the bout was sanctioned because of a number of other sporting events scheduled for February 22.

Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston of the Madison Square Garden Corporation made the formal postponement request to the commission. He was joined by Bill Duffy, Carnera's manager, and Joe Smith, who came here from the challenger's training camp at Palm Beach.

May Aid Carnera.

The delay is expected to benefit the champion—if any one is to be favored by the postponement—as reports have come out of the giant Italian's camp that he recently sprained his right hand in training and has been taking workouts lightly to favor the injured member.

Johnston pointed out that other sporting events scheduled for Washington's Birthday included the Miami Biltmore Horse Show ball, a milk fund entertainment, a greyhound derby night and a Palm Beach celebration.

6-Club Valley League Is Likely This Season

New Market, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Directors of the Valley Baseball League today announced plans for the league circuit to include six teams this season instead of only four which composed the circuit last year.

Efforts will be made to embrace eight Valley cities and towns, including Staunton, Waynesboro, Fort Defiance and Weyers Cave, of the Augusta League, and New Market, Harrisonburg, Bridgewater and Woodstock of the Valley League. Only six teams, however, will be placed in the field, as it is expected New Market, Bridgewater and Weyers Cave will form combines putting two teams in the circuit.

Officials also announced the selection of George Holtzman, of Mount Jackson to succeed Verne R. Slater as president for the coming season. Holtzman served the league last year as first vice president. W. C. Chandler, Harrisonburg, and Carlos Thuma, Bridgewater, were named vice presidents, and A. L. Garber, Harrisonburg, is the league's new secretary-treasurer.

Abramson, D. C., Lost To Virginia Trackman

University, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Virginia's track team will be handicapped by the loss of its ace sprinter, Milton Abramson, who has won his "V" in the 100 and 220 yard dashes during the last two seasons. Abramson has withdrawn from the University to go into business.

Grover Everett, who, like Abramson, lives in Washington, will try to show his heels to the best sprinters in the State when Virginia competes against V. M. I. and Washington and Lee in a three-sided dual meet here Thursday. Griff Dodson and Bill Mincher are two new men entered in the 50-yard sprint.

Council Head Defends Va. Regime

William White, Jr., Hits Critics of Dawson and Driver.

Declares He Is Back of University Set-up 100 Per Cent.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Feb. 13 (A.P.).—William H. White, jr., of Washington, chairman of the University of Virginia Athletic Council, in a statement published in College Topics today, deplored and denounced attempts to oust James Driver as athletic director, and Fred Dawson as head coach.

In his statement to the undergraduate paper, Mr. White said he considered "a vicious and unmerited attack has been made upon a loyal, honest and efficient alumnus and a member of the university faculty, and if those who are making the attacks are correctly quoted in the newspapers they show either ignorance or a complete disregard of facts."

"I do not consider the movement in any sense a general or important one, as I am satisfied that right thinking alumni who acquaint themselves with Driver's record at Virginia will resent this attempt to discredit and belittle his accomplishments.

Confidence in Integrity.

"Coach Dawson's contract runs to December 31, 1934. The Athletic Council will live up to the terms of that contract.

"I have the utmost confidence in Driver's integrity, and high regard for his ability and am back of Him 100 per cent."

Resolutions were adopted Saturday by an alumni committee advocating that both Driver and Dawson be removed and that Gus K. Tebell, present basket ball and baseball coach, be installed as athletic director.

The resolutions were submitted to the alumni advisory council, which deferred action because of the lack of a quorum until a meeting to be called at the university on February 24.

Merrily On, at $15, Scores Mild Upset, Taking Feature Race at Hialeah Park

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Key West purse, a dash of 6 furlongs, attracted eight of the better variety of platers here today and resulted in a mild upset when G. W. Ogle's Merrily On, a winner at Tropical Park, registered his first success of the local meeting. Allen Tipton, who loses his apprentice allowance the latter part of this month, scored a double on the son of John P. Grier, which beat the Warm Stable's Sabula by three parts of a length. J. Kelly's General A. was headed for the place. Merrily On, paying $15, made the good time of 1:11 4-5 over a track that was not quite at its best following recent rain.

The crowd got a scare when Earl Porter was unseated by Zorana as the field, pretty well bunched, came to the head of the stretch. However, the apprentice sensation escaped injury and was back in the saddle for the next race.

Takes Early Lead.

Merrily On outfooted his field virtually all the way, taking the lead just after the start and gradually drawing into a daylight advantage. Zorana and Sobieha tried in vain to catch the pacemaker. Entering the stretch General A., on the outside, and Sabula, on the inside, began powerful challenges, but under Tipton's strong handling, Merrily On held on with splendid courage to the end.

General Lejeune, Tipton up, foiled the favorite players by scoring a handy victory over Boy Crazy in the mile curtain raiser. Three parts of a length separated the pair, while Pardee was a close third. The latter cut out most of the running, but faltered in the last furlong. General Lejeune's bid on the outside took him to the front. Boy Crazy, ridden by Porter, closed fast on the inside, but her move came too late. The winner paid $11.50.

Below Zero Disqualified

The second race, a 3-furlong dash for maiden 2-year-old fillies, produced the second disqualification of the meeting when the stewards set back Below Zero, the favorite, which finished first by four lengths. The action made Maddening the winner, the Greentree miss beating Alanova, a field horse, by a head. Molly was third, a half length farther away. Maddening paid $13.80.

Below Zero swerved badly after the start, causing Maddening and several others to take up in the jamming. Below Zero then stole far clear. Maddening made up ground fast after recovering and was hard ridden to overtake Alanova. The disqualification was a lucky one for anyone backing Alanova for place, as she returned $76.30.

Hokuao Is Winner.

Hokuao, winner of his last start here and before that a victor at Tropical Park, carried his high speed over the mile distance in the third event and won in a canter by a half-dozen lengths for three in a row. It was a popular victory, the veteran paying $4.80 straight. Apprentice Hughes shot his mount into instant command and the favorite increased his advantage at every pole. Prince Tokalon closed well to beat Major General by two lengths for the place.

Squeeze Out squeezed out a half length victory over Barkantine in the mile contest, occupying fourth place on the card. Off Duty was third, four lengths back. Davoc, which beat Squeeze Out in his last appearance, was installed favorite, but Squeeze Out out ran that colt into early defeat today. Barkantine moved up fast after a half mile and made a game effort, but Joe Renick kept Squeeze Out going long enough to win. The winner returned $17.50.

Charlie K. Scores

Hunch players had a grand opportunity to enrich themselves in the sixth. Charlie K, a very honest plater, had Charlie (K) Urtsinger in the saddle and the combination got home to pay $14.40. Pot au Brooms and Live One followed, all noses apart. Kurtsinger put up one of his best rides, keeping Charlie K on top by a very narrow margin throughout.

Vox Pop, $27.50, took the nightcap by a nose from Bright Bubble, with Volta Maid third.

House of David Beats Charles Town Quintet

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—The House of David basket ball team gave the Charles Town American Legion its first defeat of the season by a score of 49-34.

The teams battled on fairly even terms the first quarter, but in the second, Woods cut loose with five baskets in as many minutes to give the Davids a lead that was never headed.

Admiral Nelson, who stands in history as England's greatest naval hero, suffered just like a landlubber from seasickness. About a year before he won undying fame at Trafalgar he wrote: "Dreadfully seasick, always tossed about and always seasick." Not many months later he signaled his famous "England expects that every man will do his duty."

Man is not the only animal that yawns to express boredom. It may be frequently seen in zoos that other animals, especially cats, yawn now and then from inactivity. Naturalists say that birds will yawn if sufficiently bored by their surroundings.

The biggest farm in the world, as distinguished from big ranches, is the famous giant farm in U. S. S. R., where 550,000 acres of land are under cultivation. The farm, which is run like a huge corporation, is devoted largely to wheat and other grains. There are, however, ranches of greater acreage in the United States and other countries, where the land is largely fenced-in grazing lands for beef herds and horses.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 13.

Perhaps Clocker Mike and Mrs. Bennings' lovely youth have hit their stride. Three winners walked the dog for the one-time bookmaker wreckers today. Below Zero, Hokuao and Charlie K all looked the judges in the eye from the most profitable position. Not much price. However, in these times a winner is a winner any way you look at him.

Mike spent an hour after dinner telling me of his new dream system for picking horses. He is anxious to try it out, but I guess he will have to buy a newspaper plant before he can peddle the idea. It's those kind of things, however, that work up his appetite.

BILL.

First race—Dark Conquest, 115 pounds and all, appears to have an edge on these sprinters. Heiress, off some races, could be dangerous. Shuffle Off is reported fit and ready to make a money appearance.

Second race—Prosecutor looks like the goods among these maiden 2-year-olds. Sablin and Manual to winning performance against a fair field last out and deserves the cadd over the lightly weighted Aunt Flor and the improved Don't Blush.

Fourth race—I wouldn't be surprised if Drombo came right back with another winning effort. Escapes top weight by riding an apprentice. Blackmock and Claremont have an edge on the others.

Fifth race—Fancy Flight has a tough assignment, but appears equal to the task of turning back this group. Minton has worked well take care of the others.

Third race—Machilla turned in a and will have some say in the distribution of the awards. Broad Meadows for the rest.

Sixth race—Cash Surrender takes off enough weight here to make me take another chance. Precept had poor racing luck last time and is dangerous. Piety could awake to cause trouble.

Seventh race—Brighty Beauty ran a startling race on the turf course in that previous effort and she goes right back on the grass tomorrow. Fingal and the disappointing Scout Master for the other awards.

Eighth race—Trek and Bub McFarland should battle it out for the the major share of the purse in this mile and a quarter. Spud for the show end.

Courtmen Challenge.

The Premier Cab Juniors have the use of Langley gym tomorrow night and would like to book a 135-pound team, especially the Times-Herald, Corbett A. C. or Washington Grays. Call Manager Evry at Lincoln 1329.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MADDENING, $13.80 $6.00, $5.00; ALANOVA, $76.30, $29.30; MOLLY, $8.40.

BELOW ZERO broke out at the start and swerved badly, causing a jam, then drew clear and won galloping, but was disqualified for foul. MADDENING broke well, but was crowded out and but for the interference, would have been a stout contender. ALANOVA got away well in her stride and held on gamely. MOLLY came from far back. TABITHA also suffered interference. MIGRATE was knocked out of it in early part. There was a lot of swerving and was not a true run race.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won galloping; place, easily. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:26½. Winner, W. M. Emerson's rn. h. (5), by Overall—Waiau. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOKUAO, $4.80, $3.00, $2.90; PRINCE TOKALON, $2.80, $2.60; MAJOR GENERAL, $3.40.

HOKUAO, much the best, broke running, was under restraint in early part, drew away around turn and, at end, was only galloping. PRINCE TOKALON moved up fast in the final three furlongs and easily took the place. MAJOR GENERAL followed pace for six furlongs, then tired. MORALIST was outrun to the stretch but closed fast. GIBBY'S CHOICE tired badly after showing early speed. SKY HAVEN had speed for half a mile.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:52½. Off at 3:54. Winner, Jersey Stable's b. f. (3), by Supremus—Patty Victoria. Trained by C. H. Trotter. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:39.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SQUEEZE OUT, $17.50, $8.00, $3.60; BARKANTINE $13.60, $5.30; OFF DUTY, $3.40.

SQUEEZE OUT, running back to his previous good race, made DAVOC quit at the end of six furlongs, then drew away, but tired suddenly and had to be ridden hard to win. BARKANTINE moved up with a determined bid in stretch and finished gamely. OFF DUTY, rated along in a contending position closed some ground in stretch. DAVOC was used up trying to make SQUEEZE OUT stop. GOD O' WAR had no mishaps.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $3,200 to $2,800. The Key Fest. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:21½. Off at 4:23. Winner, O. W. Ogle's ch. h. (5), by John P. Grier—Queen Apole. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRILY ON $15.00, $7.60, $3.70; SABULA, $11.60, $4.50; GENERAL A, $3.10.

MERRILY ON broke fast and was sent to front with a rush, displayed good speed and held on gamely. SABULA trailed field in early part, moved up very fast on inside and was second in last stride. GENERAL A. circled field on turn and closed with a rush. TRIANGULAR came through on inside and ran a good race. CROWNING GLORY was crowded back on turn. ZORANA was crowded and unseated her rider. SOBIEHA had plenty of early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming prices, $3,000 to $2,500. The Safety Harbor. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:53½. Off at 4:53. Winner, Jones & George's b. g. (6), by Supremus—Birka. Trained by J. V. Pons. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:37 1-5.

CHARLIE K. returned to the races after a long rest in fine condition. He broke fast, showed excellent speed and stood long drive gamely. POT AU BROOMS moved up with a rush entering stretch, but hung badly right at end. LIVE ONE came around field and finished with a good burst of speed. MAD WIND closed a big gap. SUN APOLLO had speed for six furlongs. STAND OUT was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000 For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:22. Off at 5:30½. Winner, P. J. Stocks Persist In Climbing to Higher Ground

Trading Is Conventional as Turnover Drops to 2,150,360 Shares.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Stocks had a quieter and more conventional market today. Some further recovery from last week's shakeout was accomplished despite isolated weakness in liquor and some aircraft issues, although the general run of shares moved narrowly. Volume dropped to 2,150,360 shares. The averages were up six-tenths of a point net.

Metals were strong and rails likewise looked up. Motors pointed a bit higher, retail store representatives continued in favor, rubbers found support on stronger tire prices and earnings, American Can touched the best price since 1931 at 105⅝ and U. S. Smelting set another record top at 131. Utilities were satisfied with small variations.

Mining issues appeared to have derived their stimulation from official assurances that a program for silver rehabilitation was the Administration's "firm policy." Silver metal improved slightly. On the Stock Exchange, American Smelting, American Metals, International Silver, Kennecott, Anaconda and Howe Sound bettered themselves to the extent of 1 to about 4 points net.

United Aircraft Flops.

United Aircraft flopped to 17⅝ and went through some jittery gyrations before smoothing out. Closing at 21¼, the stock was off 1¼. Wright Aero sagged 3 in light dealings, but the Curtiss Wrights were steady. Douglas showed a small net gain.

Alcohols seemed to have been made a bit nervous by word that their frenzied market of last summer was to be looked into by the Washington investigators. U. S. Industrial Alcohol and American Commercial Alcohol were down several points at the lows and National Distiller fell back. All recovered moderately.

Automobile shares benefitted by further optimistic production estimates. Nash and General Motors each rose major fractions and Chrysler's extreme gain was around 2 points. The situation in the steel industry was represented as improved, the Iron and Steel Institute estimating production at just under 40 per cent of capacity against 37.5 per cent a week ago. American Rolling Mill, Bethlehem and Youngstown were firmer at the close than U. S. Steel; the latter's preferred weakened.

Union Pacific Leads.

Union Pacific, with a rise of around 4 points, led the rails. Traffic reports for last week, filtering in through the day, indicated that the loadings total may show a moderate increment over the previous week and the carrier group was disposed to rally, especially in the morning. Montgomery Ward and a number of merchandising preferreds advanced a point or more.

The Austrian civil war was hardly a pleasant contribution to the international picture, but except for a decline in Austrian bonds it seemed to have no effect here. Possibly recent unsettlement in Europe has had the effect of bringing funds to the United States now that monetary uncertainties have quieted down.

Whether quieter markets are to be experienced for a time is a matter of current conjecture. Some analysts point out that prices have already discounted a liberal measure of business improvement, although further trade gains have appeared during the last fortnight or so. With stock exchange regulation presumably on the way in some form or other, it is being suggested in certain quarters that speculative enthusiasms may be checked. Wall street is now interested in the levels business is to attain on its spring rise, which now seems to be under way.

Commodities shifted irregularly. Cotton, which last week-end made the best prices since 1930, had a sharp reaction which bore technical earmarks. Silver futures improved moderately, but rubber was off.

Compromise on Guarantee of Bank Deposits Does Not Meet the Real Issue Involved in This Method of Trying to Protect Public.

By Ralph West Robey.

In one respect at least the reported compromise on the guarantee of bank deposits is an improvement. This is that it will result in a condition that will be less bad than is assured by the law as it now stands. To this extent the compromise represents a victory for those who are against all such guarantees. It would be regrettable, however, if they considered this limited gain as a complete victory. The problem of getting the deposit guarantee plan off the books still remains.

It will be recalled that when the guarantee law was passed it provided for two periods of operation. The first ran from last January 1 to next June 30. During this time the guarantee is limited to $2,500 for each account. A deposit of less than that amount is guaranteed in its entirety; one that is larger is guaranteed only up to $2,500. The funds out of which such guarantee might be made good have come partly from the Government, partly from the Federal Reserve banks and partly from the commercial banks.

Permanent Plan Gives a Larger Guarantee.

The second period—the permanent plan—starts on July 1. Under it accounts are guaranteed in full up to $10,000 and beyond that by only a stipulated percentage. The source of funds to take care of any losses is the same as during the present temporary period except that the liability of the commercial banks becomes unlimited instead of having a fixed maximum as now is the case.

Under the compromise that is reported to have been reached in the last few days it is agreed to extend for another year the limitation of the guarantee to $2,500. Senator Vanderberg has introduced an amendment to the existing act to this effect. It is stated to have the approval both of the Administration and the banking groups that have been fighting the virtual unlimited guarantee that is now provided.

To justify this change three principal arguments have been advanced. The first, and unquestionably the least sound, is the contention that "any one with more than $2,500 in the bank can be counted upon to protect himself." Second, it is held that since the whole idea of a nation-wide guarantee is an experiment, it is desirable that it be given a trial on a limited scale. Finally, it is maintained that by the $2,500 limitation the contingent liability on the commercial banks will be less dangerous.

Arguments Valuable Only For Getting Compromise.

As arguments looking to a compromise each of these probably deserve some consideration. All of them, however, overlook the basic factor involved. This is the effect of such guarantees upon the underlying soundness of a banking system. Upon this we have had a rather wide experience in this country, through numerous States having used a guarantee scheme. In every instance the plan has worked well so long as no strain was placed upon the banks, but in every instance the plan has failed to afford protection to the depositors when disturbed economic conditions resulted in any considerable number of bank failures.

It is not sufficient, therefore, merely to get an extension of the $2,500 limitation in the guarantee. The underlying theory of any system of mutual guarantee is unsound unless the guarantors also are given virtually the full responsibility for seeing that each unit is kept in sound condition. At present in this country the banks do not have such responsibility. The current compromise, accordingly, should be accepted merely as a further breathing spell during which to convince the public that it is not protected by any practicable guarantee plan.

Bond Market Moves Quietly To High Level

Secondary Issues Capture Popularity in Sale of $13,718,000.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Bonds moved quietly forward today with secondary issues again holding the popularity of trading circles to the neglect of most prime investment issues.

The majority of U. S. Government securities moved a bit higher, although the activity here was restricted to a turnover of about $800,000.

Banking quarters appeared to have favorably received the announcement of the Treasury's new offering of $800,000,000 of notes to be dated February 19, and it was predicted the two issues would be heavily oversubscribed.

Hesitancy in Expanding.

While the market was impressed with the over-the-holiday business and industrial news, some hesitancy in expanding commitments was attributed to the unsettled European situation as well as to Washington developments having to do with Federal regulation of stock and commodity exchanges.

Carrier liens were the most consistent gainers, but these yielded a portion of their recovery in late profit taking.

Advances of fractions to a point or more were retained by issues of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Santa Fe, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Delaware & Hudson, Erie, Hudson & Manhattan, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, Union Pacific and Wabash.

Utilities and Industrials.

Among the better utilities and industrials were bonds of Utilities Power & Light, Trumbull Steel, Studebaker, St. Joseph Lead, Remington Rand, Paramount, International Telephone, Goodyear, Columbia Gas, Bethlehem Steel, American Water Works and American Rolling Mill. Both McKesson and McCrory issues sagged a point or better.

Austrian government 7's of 1957 reflected the serious disturbances in that country with a decline of 3½ points, but the Austrian 7's of 1943 advanced 1½. The latter bonds, however, are guaranteed by the principal European powers. Gains of 1 to around 3 points were held by loans of Argentina, Brazil, Dutch East Indies, Poland, Silesia and Sao Paulo.

French obligations were fractionally higher and the Germans were irregular.

Transfers totaled $13,718,000, par value, against $15,717,000 last Friday. The average for 60 domestic corporation issues advanced three-tenths of a point.

Stocks—Trading turned conventional but the general list continued to advance. Gains averaged six-tenths of a point. Sales volume fell off to 2,150,360 shares. Metals were strong and rails picked up.

Bonds—Loans moved forward quietly with secondary issues holding popularity. United States securities advanced. The market gained three-tenths of a point. Sales totaled $13,718,000.

Curb—Higher quotations prevailed in irregular trading. Early selling was absorbed and a fairly firm tone developed. Some specialties receded. Sales volume totaled 307,000 shares.

Wheat—Prices changed little after moving in circles during the day. The closing for wheat was ¼ cents decline to ⅜ advance compared to Saturday's closing. Other grains were also mixed. May wheat sold at 90; July at 88⅞.

Cotton—The market reached new highs in early trading, but sank more than $2 per bale during the later session. May sold at 12.28. The general market declined 17 to 22 points. March closed at 12.13.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures were steady, 22 to 28 points lower. March sold at 10.45; May at 10.75.

Coffee—Spot coffee demand was firm. Santos No. 4 sold at 11¼; Rio No. 7 at 10⅝.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the United States at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 11 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar lost on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.03½ to the English pound; 6.53¼ cents to the French franc, and 39.07 cents to the German mark.

U. S. Tobacco Profit Cut to $3,396,482

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Net profit of the U. S. Tobacco Co. for the year ended December 31, totaled $3,396,482, equal to $7.03 a common share. This compares with $3,534,943, or $7.64 a common share in 1932.

During 1933 a profit of $475,683 was made on sale of the company's Treasury common stock, which credited to the surplus account.

Belding Hemingway Co. report net profit for 1933 of $491,170, equal to $1.05 a common share, compared with net loss of $151,963 in 1932.

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad had 1933 net loss of $2,993,862 after taxes and charges compared with loss of $2,542,447 in 1932.

Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports 1933 net income of $14,049,010, equal to $5.06 a common share, compared with $16,217,207 or $6.26 a share in 1932.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 13 (AP). Humble Oil & Refining Co. made a profit of $21,600,000 in 1933, exclusive of dividends and estimated taxes, President R. L. Blaffer reported to stockholders at their annual meeting here today.

San Francisco, Feb. 13 (AP).—Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports 1933 net income of $14,049,010, a decrease of $2,168,197 from 1932. Net per share on common stock was $5.06, compared with $6.26 in the preceding year.

Net income was $1,700,990 less than the dividends paid out on common and preferred stocks at $6 a share annually. At the end of the first quarter the common stock dividend was reduced from $7 to $6.

Montreal, Feb. 13 (AP).—Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway decided against declaration of dividends on either the preferred or the common stocks for 1933.

An official statement issued after the meeting was as follows: "While the directors are naturally gratified at the improvement in the company's earnings which began in December last, the results of the operations of the year 1933 do not warrant the declaration of dividends on the preference or ordinary stocks of the company for the year.

"It is encouraging to note that from the beginning of the year 1934 the company's traffic earnings have shown continued improvement over those of the same period last year and that present indications point to the probability of this improvement being maintained."

Interlake Iron Corporation in 1933 had a loss of $817,331, against loss of $2,169,887 in 1932.

Best & Co. for the year ended January 31, 1934, reports net profit of $711,972, equal to $2.33 a common share, compared with $328,965, or $1.05 a share, in the previous fiscal year.

Novadel-Agene Corporation had 1933 net profit of $922,777, equal to $5.67 a common share, against $890,304, or $5.50 a share, in 1932.

London—Business on the stock exchange was restricted today owing to the European occurrences. Rubber shares weakened on the lower price of that commodity which followed the announcement that no agreement had been reached in regard to production restrictions. Home rails and transatlantic issues improved, while Kaffirs held steady. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The improvement in rentes on the bourse encouraged prices of domestic issues, especially electric and coal shares. International issues were heavy. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were generally cheerful and hardly affected by Paris or Vienna events. The closing was firm.

Goods Markets.

New York, Feb. 13 (A.P.).—The break in raw cotton markets unsettled cotton goods trading today. Previous to the break many houses had withdrawn prices and were declining late business. Converters advanced percales 1 cent a yard. Silk goods were firm, with printed lines in steady demand. Rayon markets were firm, with orders for April delivery being scanned closely. Burlaps were quiet and steady.

Curb's Prices Close Higher In Active Sales

Early Selling Is Absorbed; Trading Volume Totals 307,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Irregularly higher quotations prevailed at the close of the curb market today. Trading was comparatively placed in comparison with recent activity. Forenoon selling was largely absorbed and a fairly firm tone developed in the final dealings.

A number of specialties, however, showed sizable recessions. Hiram Walker sagged more than 3 points and other alcohol stocks were fractionally easy in sympathy with the selling that predominated in that group on the big board.

Some late buying came into metals. Bunker Hill & Sullivan converted a point loss into a similar advance. Newmont gained a point. Utilities were rather narrow. American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share closed with scant changes, but the preferred of the latter gained 3 points in fairly active turnover. Oils also moved in a restricted area.

Advances of around a point or so were shown by Armstrong Cork, Fisk Rubber, J. J. Newberry, Standard Oil of Ohio and Swift International. In the aircraft division Waco gained more than a point, but Pan-American Airways fell back 2½. General Tire & Rubber lost as much as Novadel Agene and Dow Chemical also eased.

Transfers approximated 307,000 shares, compared with 498,000 last Friday.

Cottonseed Crush Declines In 6 Months

(Associated Press.)

Cottonseed crushed in the six-month period, August 1 to January 31, was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have totaled 2,896,584 tons, compared with 3,019,055 tons in the corresponding period a year ago, and cottonseed on hand at mills January 31 totaled 1,020,792 tons, compared with 1,209,280 tons a year ago.

Cottonseed products manufactured in the six-month period and on hand January 31 were reported as follows:

Crude oil produced, 895,419,575 pounds, compared with 931,986,439, and on hand, 188,906,161 pounds, compared with 149,024,090.

Cotton Drops $2.00 Under Liquidation

March Closes at 12.13 as General Market Sinks 17 to 22 Points.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—After reaching new high prices for the movement early today cotton broke over $2 per bale under heavy realizing or liquidation. May sold off rapidly from 12.24 to 12.05, or nearly ½ cent from the early high, but met an increased demand at this figure, recovering a part of the loss and closing steady at net declines of 17 to 22 points.

The opening was 7 to 12 points lower under active liquidation influenced by nervousness over the European political situation and uncertainty as to legislative developments in Washington. Houses with European connections were sellers, and there also appeared to be some selling by New Orleans.

These initial offerings were readily absorbed, however, and the market firmed up later with March advancing to 12.37 and October to 12.89, or about 5 to 9 points net higher. This advance met heavy realizing and some reactionary sentiment developed following the recent steady advance.

Offerings Increase.

Offerings increased following reports from Washington which seemed to create more uncertainty regarding crop control legislation, and prices broke quickly as stop orders were uncovered. March sold off to 11.85 and October to 12.38, or about 50 points from the highs of the morning, but the pressure then subsided and about half the losses were recovered.

Reports from Washington that Secretary Wallace had raised objections to some features of the crop control bill as now drawn, and that one of the agricultural administration officials thought the bill unnecessary, were commented upon in connection with the afternoon decline.

Much of the selling, however, was attributed to technical readjustments following the recent advances, and little was heard of selling here by the South.

Exports today 14,395 making 5,243,600 so far this season. Port receipts 20,638. U. S. port stocks 3,635,543.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firm today on increased covering and buying of July and September by houses with cotton connections, promoted by the bullish January consumption report. Final prices were 10 to 15 points net higher. Sales, 140 contracts. The Census Bureau estimated the January consumption at 248,000 barrels, against 191,000 in December, and 207,000 in January last year. Bleachable spot, nominal; March closed 5.24, May, 5.47; July, 5.66; September, 5.86.

Trade Failures Improvement Noted in 1934

New York, Feb. 13.—Dun's insolvency index for January was 82.5. This compares with 181.7 for January last year and 201.8 for January, 1932. The difference between the figures of January, 1933, and those of January, 1934, represents a decline of 99.2 points, or 54.6 per cent. This tremendous improvement shown in the record of business failures in the United States is emphasized further by the large reduction for January this year from the insolvency index of 139.5, which was the average for the five years 1925-1929, inclusive, and which may be considered a normal figure for this period.

Insolvencies in a general way show a certain quite definite trend from time to time over a period of years. During the two past decades, the influences of the World War, and the aftermath of that devasting event, have been all pervading. While the war was in progress economic conditions in the United States were such that the record of business defaults was for several years considerably under that of any previous showing.

Soon after the close of the war, however, the culmination of certain incidents, more or less directly connected with the war, caused a brief disturbance that resulted in many failures. These disturbing effects were not entirely absent during the interventing years, and the disasters of 1930-1932, inclusive, were in some measure connected with those influences. The important reforms begun last year are reflected clearly in the reduced failure record for January, 1934.

The insolvency index for the past six months is compared below for several years, the figures being computed on the basis of the number of commercial insolvencies to each 10,000 firms in business:

Dun's Insolvency Index.

	Monthly— 1934.	1933.	1932.	5-Year Avg. '28-'29.	Ratio

Silver Buying May Be Needed To Curb Dollar

Experts Foresee Necessity of Adding White Metal to Gold Purchases.

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—If the international struggle to devalue the dollar can not be won with gold, there is still silver.

Foreign exchange experts foresee that it may be impossible to sell enough dollars in the world market to buy gold—to keep the dollar from rising. Such a situation might be precipitated particularly if France and the other gold bloc countries should quit the free gold standard and refuse to sell the metal.

Open market supplies of gold appear limited chiefly to new production from South Africa, and to the willingness of the Bank of France to sell.

Paper Currencies.

Should the free gold market suddenly tighten, the two billion dollar American stabilization fund might then sell dollars to buy paper currencies. In so doing, however, it would run the risk of incurring large losses.

Another course would be for it to sell dollars to buy silver, which it might use along with the gold the Treasury has purchased as a part reserve against currency.

Wall street has no knowledge of any such plan in Washington, but indications of renewed consideration of silver appeared ten days ago, when the Treasury began an investigation of the speculative position of silver in New York.

Silver Still Studied.

Aside from the purchases of domestic production of silver at 64½ cents an ounce, the official position of the monetary aspect of silver in Washington is that it is still being studied.

One American suggestion at the London economic conference was that silver might be used up to one-fifth of central bank reserves. If the Treasury contemplated use of any such amount of silver, in addition to gold, it would have to increase substantially the present monetary silver of some 450,000,000 ounces.

Based on the old silver dollar price of $1.29 an ounce, this silver has a value of only about $570,000,000, or little more than 8 per cent of the country's monetary gold under the new valuation of a little more than $7,000,000,000. At current market prices of around 44 cents an ounce, this silver is worth less than $200,000,000.

At its price of 64½ cents an ounce for newly mined domestic silver, the Treasury is spending, at the current rate of production in this country, only about $12,000,000 annually.

Handy & Harmon, New York bullion brokers, estimate the world's production of silver for 1933 at 163,000,000 ounces, of which 21,400,000 were produced in the United States. Total supplies, coming into world markets in 1933, this firm estimates at 273,000,000 ounces, including demonetized silver and sales from India and China.

How much silver it would be possible to buy in world markets is largely conjectural. Some 5,000,000,000 ounces are believed to be hoarded in India, and some 3,000,000,000 ounces in China. If American buyers were to bid up the price in the London market, it is believed here that it could tap those hoards to a considerable extent. If they bought the silver in the London market, it is argued, they would do so by selling dollars and buying sterling, thus tending to keep the dollar down.

Some 110,000,000 ounces are understood to be held by speculators and hoarders in New York. Such hoarded silver, it is pointed out, might be taken over as the Government took over the hoarded gold, should the Treasury decide to go in for silver in a big way.

Dupont Rayon Co. To Build New Unit

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—C. J. Bacon, director of production of the Waynesboro plant of the Dupont Rayon Co., issued a statement today revealing the intentions of the company to construct an additional unit to the plant here. Although no official announcement was made in regard to the cost of the addition, it was understood that it will involve possibly $3,000,000.

The statement follows: "The Waynesboro plant of the Dupont Rayon Co. is proceeding at once with the design and construction of another addition. When the original plant was built it was contemplated that further additions would be made from time to time.

The project for increased capacity, mainly the chemical operations, construction of which has been in progress for several months past, is now approaching completion.

The company is now planning to make a further addition to round out certain buildings, particularly the textile."

Oil Land Tax Is Protested By Foreigners

Foreign oil companies operating in Mexico are protesting against a new land tax which went into effect at the beginning of the current year, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache T. H. Lockett, Mexico City.

An official decree promulgated December 30 placed a 20-centavo per hectare surface tax upon all oil lands which have been granted or may be granted as oil concessions. It is estimated that as a result of this tax the local taxation of all oil companies in the republic will be increased by approximately a million pesos a year.

The petroleum companies maintain that this new taxation is contrary to the agreement which they made with the president of the republic at the time the oil loan was made to the Federal Government in 1932.

Up to date, Commercial Attache Lockett states, the overtures of the oil companies to secure a modification of the decree have been unsuccessful.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Business failures in the United States for the week ended February 8 totaled 291 compared with 305 in the preceding week and 629 a year ago, reports Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. "For many weeks," comments the agency, "the number of failures has been very encouraging."

A San Francisco dispatch to Dow, Jones & Co. says Caterpillar Tractor Co. has taken action toward calling on April 2 its 5 per cent gold notes of which $5,090,000 par value was outstanding on December 31 last.

The American Banker says that during January, 186 banks either opened or reopened on an unrestricted basis throughout the United States. Of these, 69 were National banks and 117 were State chartered institutions.

Standard Statistics Co. finds that industrial activity is "registering a sharp upswing." Its preliminary index of production for February is estimated at 77.5 per cent, compared with 70.9 for January, representing a gain of 29 per cent over February, 1933.

The Alton Railroad reports January operating deficit of $2,612, compared with deficit of $46,338 in January, 1933.

Sales of First National Stores for the four weeks ended January 27 amounted to $7,899,714, with $7,210,-118 in the same period last year, an increase of 9.55 per cent.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Steel Scrap—Markets continue strong in various parts of the country. Scrap is reported scare along the Atlantic Seaboard, due to heavy shipments overseas and to relatively small accumulations during the depression.

Canned Goods—Prices show few important changes, but they are being generally well maintained at present low levels and a certain amount of routine business is reported. Some distributors, however, apparently have sufficient inventories for the present.

Heavy Chemicals—Although there were few outstanding developments in this market, a fairly good demand appeared in the replacement of depleted stocks.

If You Can Meet Our Requirements You Are Profitably Employed
A brief notice of a good thing is all an ambitious, high-class man needs to cause him to investigate. If for any reason you are unemployed or unprofitably connected and you desire bigger earnings and opportunities we would be glad to talk things over with you. We are placing men who qualify in positions which offer real opportunities and unlimited earnings.
We represent a very large and rapidly growing enterprise and pay large profit and bonus. Men should be between ages of 25 and 45, ambitious to earn real money and promotions by hard work. Prefer married men who have lived in this community some time and can furnish references.
Must be available for immediate employment. The interview will be lengthy, however, written notice of time and place will be given those whose applications for interview are accepted. Please answer, stating name, age, address, telephone number, former employment and any other valuable facts concerning any one wishing to place dependable men in responsible positions. Write employment manager, Box 135, Washington Post.

Zero-Blizzards or Fine Weather!

I am going to interview several men Wednesday evening at 7:30 sharp in the Red Room (3d floor), Hamilton Hotel, concerning several available openings in a very high-grade and profitable permanent employment. A good business that knows no seasonal handicap.

The Right to a Living

If a man is honest, dependable, physically vigorous, mentally alert and ambitious to earn a good living and promotions, he has a right to such an opportunity. We have it for him. We ask no investment or deposit. We only ask full cooperation and prefer men who are permanent residents of this locality and who can give A-1 references.

Not for Half-Hearted Men

If you are only about half-hearted and are just looking around for a racket or a temporary job, this is no place for you. It is best for everybody to be frank and save each other's time these days when there are so many real he-men wanting a chance to make a living.

Must Be Available Immediately

Therefore, I want to talk this evening only to men who are ready to go to work at once. Such men should be able to learn enough about their new business to make from $25 to $50 their first week. If you have the above qualifications and mean business, the door is open to you.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — O Unhappy Day — By Harry J. Tuthill

WHOOIE! ANOTHER MOVING DAY STARING ME IN THE FACE.
THAT MEANS A FULL WEEK HERE WRENCHING BACKS AND ROLLERS OFF OF BUREAUS, AND SO FORTH, AND ANOTHER WEEK AT THE NEW FLAT LOOKING THROUGH TUBS FOR STUFF I MISLAID.
TWO WEEKS OF EATING OFF AN IRONING BOARD, THE SAME KIND OF FOOD YOU GET AT A RAINY PICNIC.
ONE GOOD THING ABOUT LIVING IN A LIGHTHOUSE IS THAT YOU NEVER HAVE ANY MOVING VANS BACK UP TO YOUR DOOR.
ARGUING WITH MOVING MEN WHO THINK THEY CAN PUSH STUFF 42 INCHES WIDE THROUGH A 35-INCH DOOR IS ANOTHER HEADACHE.
AND THERE'S NO NOURISHMENT IN GETTING HARD WITH BABIES WHO CAN LIFT A PIANO WITH ONE HAND. I KNOW.
I GET THE SAME THRILL OUT OF MOVING THAT THE FIRE DEPARTMENT DOES OUT OF FALSE ALARMS DURING A BLIZZARD.
IF I HAD MY WAY I'D CHANGE MY ADDRESS JUST ABOUT AS OFTEN AS THE ROCK OF GIBRALTAR DOES.

Walt Mason, Himself

In the Rain.

The rain was pouring in a flood from cloudbanks bleak and gray, and I was plastered with the mud I'd gathered on my way. The rain had spoiled my Sunday hat, and ruined both my shoes; I felt my moral tires gone flat, I had the dumps and blues. I leaned against a handy tree for half an hour or more, and gazed upon the sloppy sea, and viewed the sloppy shore. And then I said a lot of things that would not do to print; my seething words had smoky rings, they were of lurid tint. Left-handed blessings I invoked on all such beastly days; and still my language popped and smoked, with wrath in every phrase. Then James B. Jenkinson came by, and leaned against my tree; the mud was plastered in his eye, and smeared on either knee. His hat, like mine, was but a wreck, a thing no vag would choose; the rain was running down his neck and leaking from his shoes. "And now," I thought, "he'll cuss a while and storm around and fret;" instead of which he heaved a smile that glittered through the wet. "This is a million dollar rain," he said "without a doubt; it will refresh the farmers' grain, the fields of growing kraut. It is a gorgeous thing to see it fills my soul with bliss; how deeply thankful we should be, for such a rain as this!" Then he went grinning down the street with glad and buoyant tread, and I went home on sodden feet, ashamed of all I'd said.

Post Comic Strip to Come to Life on Screen—The Governor Didn't Know Kate!

"Palooka" Will Introduce the Junior Cagney

Durante and Lupe Starred; Universal Signs Tracy; Theater Gossip.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

Pursuant to a recent promise of a little more information concerning "Palooka," Universal's free translation into celluloid of the characters and events set forth in The Post's daily comic strip, "Joe Palooka," by Ham Fisher, perhaps the most important thing that can be said is that it marks the screen debut of "Bill" Cagney.

"Bill" Cagney, as one might casually suspect, is a brother of the doughty "Jim" Cagney, who has hard-boiled his way to screen fame and fortune—a younger and bigger brother, to be precise about it.

William Cagney made his screen debut in typical Cagney fashion, as will be seen by all who view "Palooka" upon its opening at RKO-Keith's on Thursday. His first day on the set, in a featured role in support of Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez and Stuart Erwin, he socked Mr. Erwin playfully on the nose and was playfully socked right back again by Mr. Erwin. On succeeding days he swung on various other members of the cast, bounced Senorita Velez around a bit and was on the receiving end of divers and sundry sincere and stout wallops in return—all, of course, as part of the story action and in a spirit of good clean fun!

A Broth of a B'y.

That's the way the Cagneys are. Bill is taller and huskier than Jim by a good 15 or 20 pounds, or more, and therefore probably decided in his own mind that the public would expect him to be 15 or 20 pounds rougher. On that basis the kid already is a star!

Away from the cameras, Bill, like his brother, is extremely modest and soft-spoken and easy to talk with—about everything but himself. His brother is his idol—"the greatest guy in the world"—and Hollywood is agreed that there will never be any professional jealousy in the Cagney family.

Bill grew up, with the rest of the Cagneys, in the Yorkeville section of New York City, over near the East River, where he naturally acquired the fistic proficiency that stands him in such good stead in "Palooka" as a sheer and indispensable requisite of survival!

He worked his way through high school, studied law at the College of the City of New York and later began as an advertising solicitor, his principal clients being Jewish clothing manufacturers. Like brother Jim, Bill speaks Yiddish fluently—and the Cagneys Irish right down to the bone!

There are, naturally, other things that may be said in commendation of "Palooka." One of them is that it affords Jimmy "Schnozzle" Durante one of his most fruitful—and rowdiest—opportunities. One of the chief merits of the picture, as a matter of fact, is that it has been cast with an eye single to proper type selection for the various roles of importance. Bill Cagney, Marjorie Rambeau, Robert Armstrong, Mary Carlisle, Thelma Todd and numerous others are called upon to perform chores that are wholly within their capabilities. "Palooka" is a film of no ethical importance whatever. It is, however, as riotous and raucous an evening's entertainment as you will find outside of Portner's or the Twin City dressing rooms. And that volcanic Lupe Velez almost bursts into flames!

Notes on Novarro.

Not only definite assurance that Ramon Novarro will appear in person at Loew's Fox Theater the week of Feburary 23, but indication of the songs which he will sing also was contained in a message to City Manager Carter Barron from the New York home office of Loew's, Inc., yesterday.

When Novarro makes one of his two scheduled weeks of personal appearances in the Capital, he will sing from the stage selections from, or perhaps all of, the six Jerome Kern songs featured in the score of "The Cat and the Fiddle," his latest costellar vehicle with Jeanette MacDonald, which will be the screen feature for the week. These are "She Didn't Say Yes," "The Night Was Made for Love," "The Love Parade," "One Moment Alone," "Try to Forget" and "A New Love Is Old."

It is, furthermore, intimated that in addition to singing a number of the songs in which he and Miss MacDonald are heard in the picture, Senor Novarro, too, will relate some of his interesting experiences in Hollywood, give a hint of the romance in his life—if any—and perhaps execute a scene or two from some of his more popular films.

We shall see what we shall see—and on February 23, according to guarantee.

And while we are on the topic of bookings the National Theater announces a last-minute change in the attraction for next week.

Instead of the new John Wexley play, "They Shall Not Die," which was founded on the famous Scottsboro case, the Theater Guild will send to Washington for the week beginning Monday, February 19, the rhymed version of Moliere's "School for Husbands," which is fresh from a four-month run in New York and a Philadelphia triumph. The cast is led by Osgood Perkins, June Walker and Doris Humphries. The play was adapted to its present uses by Lawrence Langner, a director of the Theater Guild, and Arthur Guiterman.

"School for Husbands," as "They Shall Not Die" was to have been, will be the final subscription play of the current season of the American Theater Society of Washington—their sixth and the Guild's third.

All Is "Vanities."

The continued presence in Washington of Forrest Crosman, avant courier of the Earl Carroll "Vanities," now occupying the stage at Loew's Fox Theater, has given rise to some specualtion as to the immediate future of this touring unit.

The problem, at the moment, is to find a suitable dancing comedian to take the place of Ray Bolger, who completes his tour of duty with the "Vanities" on Saturday night to hie himself to New York and a new part in a Shubert production soon to be launched.

The difficulty of finding a satisfactory substitute for the indefatigable Mr. Bolger being what it is, it is the present likelihood that the "Vanities" will lay off for two weeks, undergo a considerable reorganization and then undertake a tour of the South.

It was the talk for a time that Will Mahoney would be dropped into the spot vacated by the nimble Mr. Bolger, but that arrangement has not as yet been consummated and may not be. It would be a perfect solution of the present emergency.

Speaking of the "Vanities," the sextet of beauties who will model hats in the Hecht Co.'s Cinema Shop this afternoon will be led by Annabelle Lancaster, acclaimed by no less an authority than Russell Patterson, famous American artist and illustrator, as America's perfect model. Miss Lancaster has posed for many of Patterson's and the later Harrison Fisher's magazine covers. In 1933 she represented Jacksonville, Fla., at Galveston's International Beauty Pageant.

How It Is Pronounced.

Mr. Ray Henderson, doing a little of his Grade A stentoring on behalf of Katherine Cornell, drops a line from the Majestic Theater, in Houston, Tex., to the effect that playgoers in the West apparently are troubled by the pronunciation of the title of George Bernard Shaw's "Candida," which Miss Cornell is presenting on her repertory tour of the country.

It is evident, says Mr. Henderson, that Shaw's literary ancestor, Voltaire, has added to the confusion by having written "Candide."

Though "Candida" now is nearly 40 years old and has been acted by innumerable professionl, stock and amateur companies, there still is the idea prevalent in some places that "Candida" and "Candide" are related.

Thus it comes about that some people are accenting the second syllable of the name of Shaw's comedy and having a pleasant time with the final "a," as they buy the tickets which are making new box-office records for Shaw on the Pacific Coast.

So, how DO you pronounce it, Mr. Henderson?

It will be of interest to his many friends in the theater, and out, that Bob Hurley, formerly a member of the staff of the RKO-Keith Theater in this city, has been appointed publicity director of the Cotton Club, the popu'ar echo of Harlem's typical night spots, out at Tenth and U streets northwest. Mr. Hurley is a rousing tub-thumper and cymbal-whanger.

First Aid!

Gov. Charles Bryan, of Nebraska, brother of the late Commoner, apparently isn't a radio fan.

The Governor was asked last Friday night to pose with Kate Smith, Washington's "songbird of the South" and a figure of some note on the air waves. The two were attending the Omaha automobile show—but not together.

"I want to know who Kate Smith is before I accept the honor," the Governor said, not undiplomatically.

Newspapermen introduced the two and photographers mapped the picture.

"We became sort of chummy, after we got to know each other a little," Kate remarked as soon as she had recovered from the chargin of never having been heard of!

We are sending the Governor our old crystal set.

When the Hollywood ban is put upon an actor it is not often that he succeeds in overcoming the boycott for many months, if ever. There have been instances in which stars who have once incurred the displeasure of their bosses never have recovered their standing in the industry; others have crawled back into favor only by dint of long, arduous and humble penance.

Not so in the case of Lee Tracy. Mr. Tracy, who a few months ago was "set down" by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as punishment for reputedly ungentlemanly behavior on the soil of Mexico, already has been signed by Universal.

Reports vary as to the terms of Mr. Tracy's new engagement. Some say it is for one picture, some say for three and some insist on the same numbers but in terms of years. At any rate, Lee has got himself going again. His first assignment is in a newspaper picture Universal plans to produce.

Why Editors Turn Gray.

It is Manager Rodney Collier, of the Rialto, who drops by the desk to spread the tidings that when "Beloved," featuring John Boles and Gloria Stuart, is presented at his "Temple of the Muses," the engagement will be inaugurated with a special Wednesday midnight showing.

This would be on Wednesday night, February 21, the night preceding the regular opening day of the Rialto's new bills and, in this particular instance, the night before Washington's Birthday, a legal holiday.

As has already been reported in this space, "Beloved" has been selected as the best picture of the month in the February tabulations of the previewing organizations reporting through the office of Will H. Hays.

One of its chief virtues is that it again permits John Boles to sing.

But a Wednesday midnight opening on the busiest night of our week, holiday next day or no holiday next day—what's beloved about that?

H. E. Vaughan, 57, Dies.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Henry Edward Vaughan, 57, died at his home in Fairview Heights. He was a member of Fairview Methodist Church and a native of Richmond. He is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. E. R. Parcell and Mrs. Nell Ford, here.

Mrs. Ada Ayres Buried.

Danville, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Ada Ayres, who died at her home near here Sunday. She is survived by her husband, a daughter and three sons. Interment was in Highland Burial Park.

An Inspector Is Put on the Spot!

Shirley Grey, one of the two feminine players in the film and not only its romantic interest but a murder suspect as well, makes duty a little difficult for Edmund Lowe, inspector of the criminal investigation division of the British police, in "Bombay Mail," coming to the Rialto on Thursday. "Bombay Mail," by the way, is a mystery-melodrama, laid aboard a fast express running between Calcutta and Bombay, which are cities in India.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Dealing with figures and events in English court life a little more than a century later than those concerned in her "Wives of Henry VIII," this newest of Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner's dramatic sequences, "The Loves of Charles II," may be said to present the emotional and dramatic antithesis of the earlier study of the domestic tragedies of the Tudor king.

Presented for the first time in Washington in the National Theater last night, "The Loves of Charles II" revealed a series of character studies drawn in new moods, new tints and new tempos, contrasting sharply with those of the grim tyrannies that marked the careers of the hapless mates of Bluff King Hal.

Here were reflected the reckless excesses of a merry monarch, gay, profligate and kindly, and the vivid pictures Miss Skinner created of the various beneficiaries of his bounty, accordingly, were likewise for the most part vivacious, variegated and voluptuous.

Occasional Somber Touches.

Only in the beginning and at the end of her latest dramatic creation, that is at once imaginative and intensely realistic, has Miss Skinner seen fit to touch her brilliant conception of the loves that spurred an irresponsible ruler on in his eager attempt to "run away from life" with the somber tones that characterized portions of "The Wives of Henry VIII" and practically all of last season's "The Empress Eugenie." The result is the most colorful, the most diverting and the most delightful interval of character portrayal Miss Skinner has so far devised for the exercise of her brilliant and unique interpretative endowments.

There is wit, humor and a prodigious zest for living in "The Loves of Charles II" that the earlier works have not possessed.

A New Treatment.

There is, furthermore, a distinct departure from her usual style of writing in "The Loves of Charles II" that is wholly in consonance with the spirit and fact of its subject matter. With effects that are at times a trifle startling because they are so unexpected, Miss Skinner has written this most engaging of her excursions into historical romance with an outspoken frankness, a definitive candor and a punget power that have been excelled only once this season and that by Maxwell Anderson's blunt but magnificent "Mary of Scotland."

Since the merriest of the Stuart kings chose his ladies fair from any stratum of society that suited his whim, whether from the dingy squalor of a London alley or the regal splendor of a royal court, a wide latitude has been afforded Miss Skinner in her choice of types. Of this diversity she has taken full advantage.

The first brief portraiture is of Henrietta Maria, the Spartan widow of the murdered Charles I and mother of Charles II. Fleetingly, the character of the eldest of her children, the "king without a country," is indexed by the solicitude of his heart-broken mother who will not permit herself the solace of a tear.

Next we see a phantom Charles II, 11 years later, as he is about to depart his exile in the Netherlands, on the eve of the Restoration, revealed through the slatternly devotion of "A Dutch Trollop" who finds it a simple matter to denude the king, rescued from years of penury and degradation, of the gelder in his purse, the lace upon his cuffs and the rings that sparkle on his fingers. A vivid, raucous, promiscuous hussy, this Jezebel of the brothels of Breda.

Thus are we introduced to the days of the monarchial excesses of this Stuart sensualist and the most piquant of his inamoratae—the brusque and blatant Lady Castlemaine, the most notorious of his mistresses, Barbara Palmer, nee Villiers and, through Charles' bounty, finally Duchess of Cleveland; Louise de Queroaille, the exquisite beauty from the French Court, dispatched as special emissary of the King to delude Charles into the secret Treaty of Dover, and Nell Gwyn, born in the London slums to become an orange girl at Drury Lane, star of that fabulous playhouse and mother of two sons of the King.

Last and most pathetic of all these glamorous figures is Catharine of Braganza, the Portuguese wife of Charles II, who loved him perhaps best of all, and never was deserted by her lord, although she bore him a child.

All Superbly Depicted.

All of these divergent characters Miss Skinner delineates with typical trueness of voice, dialect and demeanor. Many of the differentiations are accomplished by the most delicate shadings; others by broad strokes of vivid color. None is lost.

In point of costuming, "The Loves of Charles II" is by far the most richly embellished of the three dramatic sequences in which Miss Skinner has been seen. The stage settings remain the severe velour drops with a table or a chair as the only material aids to the artiste's creative faculty.

Last evening's program was augmented by three of Miss Skinner's shorter sketches, "The Eve of Departure," the confusion of an American about to return home from Paris; "Lynch Party," a daring revelation of Alabaman reaction to a Negro hanging, as betrayed by a gin-swizzling dance hall girl, and "Being Presented," the intensely comic trials of a native Nebraskan about to be presented to the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace.

These contributed to the enthusiastic ovation with which Miss Skinner was greeted by a large and distinguished audience at the fall of the final curtain, but only as auxiliaries of the bill's extraordinary piece de resistance.

Tonight, "The Wives of Henry VIII" will be presented, with a new group of the shorter subjects.
